Introduction

THE RENAISSANCE: ART AND CULTURE

This introduction includes the necessary background information to teach The Renaissance: Art and Culture unit. This unit contains 19 daily lessons, plus four Pausing Point days that may be used for differentiated instruction. You may choose to use all four days at the end of the unit, or you may use one day immediately after Lesson 7 and three days at the end of the unit. If you use one Pausing Point day after Lesson 7, you may administer Activity Page PP.1 to assess students' understanding of the content at this midpoint, or you may use the day to focus on the writing, spelling, grammar, or morphology skills covered in Lessons 1–7. Each lesson will require a total of 90 minutes. Lesson 15 is devoted to a unit assessment, while Lessons 16–19 of this unit are devoted exclusively to writing instruction. It is recommended that you spend no more than 23 days total on this unit.

WHY THE RENAISSANCE UNIT IS IMPORTANT

Note: This unit provides a valuable opportunity for cross-curricular collaboration with an art teacher or department. Throughout this unit, such opportunities will be highlighted, and it is suggested you consult with the art teacher before beginning the unit.

The Big Idea of this unit is that the Renaissance was a cultural movement that began in Italy and then swept through Europe. During the Renaissance, increased trade between European countries led to increased wealth, power, and influence of the middle class. This increased wealth allowed merchants and businessmen to become patrons and support artists. Scholars, philosophers, and artists turned to the works of the ancient Greeks and Romans for inspiration. This unit provides students with a broad exposure to the art and literature of this time period through the works of renowned artistic masters such as Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, Raphael, Donatello, Brunelleschi, Botticelli, Bruegel, Dürer, Van Eyck, Machiavelli, Castiglione, Cervantes, and Shakespeare.

The Renaissance unit also provides opportunities for students to build content knowledge and draw connections to social studies and science subject areas but does not explicitly teach the Texas Essential Knowledge and Skills standards for Social Studies and Science. At times throughout the unit, you may wish to build on class discussions to support students in making cross-curricular connections to the strands of Culture and Social studies skills from the social studies discipline and Scientific Investigation and reasoning from the science discipline.

Prior Knowledge

Students who have received instruction in the program in Grades K–4 will already have pertinent background knowledge for this unit. These students may have gained relevant background knowledge during the following domains:

The Ancient Greek Civilization (Grade 2)

- Describe how the contributions of the ancient Greek civilization have influenced the present.

The Ancient Roman Civilization (Grade 3)

- Identify some of the contributions of the ancient Roman civilization, and describe how they have influenced the present.
- Describe the many structures the ancient Romans built, including roads, bridges, aqueducts, and amphitheaters.

READER

The Reader for this unit, Patrons, Artists, and Scholars, includes complex text and prepares students in Grade 5 for the increased vocabulary and syntax demands aligned texts will present in later grades. Patrons, Artists, and Scholars focuses on Western Europe, particularly Italy, during the cultural movement known as the Renaissance. Students will read about the rise of the middle class due to increased trade with other countries, the importance of patrons in supporting the work of artists, and the increasing attention to, and inspiration from, the works of ancient Greek and Roman philosophers and artists. Students will be exposed to works of art from such renowned artists as Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, Raphael, Donatello, Brunelleschi, Botticelli, Bruegel, Dürer, and Van Eyck. Students will learn about the impact of Renaissance writers, such as Machiavelli, Castiglione, Cervantes, and Shakespeare.

The Reader also includes a selection that may be used for enrichment. Although the Teacher Guide does not include lessons for the enrichment selection, the Activity Book includes an activity page students may complete independently. Please use this selection at your discretion, considering students' needs and the time available in your school day.

Also included in the Reader are maps and a portrait gallery. Students will refer to the maps throughout the unit. The portrait gallery serves as a resource for identifying artists and other important people from the Renaissance.

In the writing lessons, students will engage in an extended writing project. In this unit, students will conduct research using two sources about a famous Renaissance artist to compose a biography. The writing project includes a diary entry that will be revised, edited, published, and presented during Lessons 16–19. These lesson days are devoted exclusively to writing instruction.

FLUENCY SUPPLEMENT

A separate component, the Fluency Supplement, is available on the program's digital components site. This component was created to accompany materials for Grades 4 and 5. It consists of selections from a variety of genres, including poetry, folklore, and fables. These selections provide additional opportunities for students to practice reading with fluency and expression (prosody). There are sufficient selections so you may, if desired, use one selection per week. For more information on implementation, please consult the supplement.

ADVANCE PREPARATION

Core Connections

- Display a world map. Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components for this unit.
- Prepare and display an enlarged version of the Map of Western Europe on Activity Page 1.1. Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components for this unit.
- Draw the following Unit 2 timeline on the board/chart paper. Place this timeline where it can be displayed for the duration of this unit and the next unit, The Reformation.
- Locate the three timeline cards in the Teacher Resources section of the Teacher Guide.

Note: You may be more familiar with the terms BC and AD when discussing ancient and modern times. This system of dating links time to events related to Christianity. BC means “before Christ,” and is used to reference events before the birth of Jesus. AD means “anno Domini,” or “in the year of our Lord,” and is used for dates after the birth of Jesus.

Modern historians and archaeologists, however, now more frequently use the terms BCE, “before the Common Era,” and CE, “of the Common Era,” to provide reference points that are not linked specifically to Christianity. These are the terms that are used throughout the program to distinguish between ancient and modern times.

BCE is the same as BC, and CE is the same as AD.

- Prepare the Museum Picture Walk by photocopying or printing pictures from the chapter “Merchants, Markets, and Mud: Towns in the Middle Ages” from the student Activity Book. Display the pictures around the room in a gallery style setting.

Reading

- This lesson contains a Think-Pair-Share activity.
- Write The Purpose for Reading and The Big Question on the board/chart paper. Alternatively, you may access a digital version of this and the Big Question in the digital components for this unit.
- Display a world map and the Map of Western Europe from Core Connections. You may access digital versions of both maps in the digital components for this unit.
- Create the following Factors that Inspired the Renaissance chart on the board/chart paper. Place this chart where it can be displayed for the duration of the lesson. Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components for this unit.

Factor that Inspired the Renaissance	How did this factor inspire the Renaissance?	Evidence from the Text

Fluency (optional)

- Choose and make sufficient copies of a text selection from the online Fluency Supplement to distribute and review with students for additional fluency practice. If you choose to do a fluency assessment, you will assess students in Lesson 5.

Lesson 1: Discovering the Topic: The Renaissance Core Connections

Primary Focus: Students will make inferences about the civilizations and time periods that led to the Renaissance based on details from the text.

 TEKS 5.6.F; TEKS 5.7.E

INTRODUCE PRIMARY FOCUS, WORD WORK (5 MIN.)

- Post the primary focus and invite students to read aloud. Underline the word inspired. Invite students to say the word with you. Ask students what the term means. Listen for responses like, “inspire means to influence or provide an idea about what to do or create.”

 TEKS 5.6.F Make inferences and use evidence to support understanding; TEKS 5.7.E Interact with sources in meaningful ways such as notetaking, annotating, freewriting, or illustrating.

- Give an example of something that inspired you. For example, “Our family trip to Japan last summer inspired me to start cooking Japanese food more often.” If further clarification is needed, ask students to share examples of things that inspire them. Examples may include who or what inspires them to do well in school.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “_____ has inspired me because _____.”

What part of speech is the word inspire?

» verb

- Use a discussion activity for follow-up. Tell students, “Continue the discussion with your partner about who or what has inspired you to do well in school. Make sure you use the word inspire in complete sentences as you discuss this with your partner.”
- Explain to students that in this unit they will be learning about the Renaissance movement, which happened many years ago. Tell students that today they will learn about what inspired, or influenced, the start of the movement.
- Circle the word inferences. Review what it means to infer something. If necessary, explain that to make an inference is when a reader uses what they already know about a topic combined with what the text says about the topic to figure out something that is not explicitly stated.
- Explain to students that today they will learn about the events leading up to the Renaissance and make inferences about why they influenced the start of this movement.
- Explain that before jumping into learning about this topic and reading the first chapter of the Reader, students will first discuss some things that will help them understand what they will learn in this unit.

PRE-RENAISSANCE TIMELINE (10 MIN.)

- Remind students who participated in the program in previous grades that they have learned about several civilizations from ancient times. Cold call a student to explain what we mean when we refer to ancient times. Listen for responses like, “Times long ago.” If further clarification is needed, remind students that ancient Greece and ancient Rome were civilizations that were located in Europe many, many years ago.

- Direct students to the timeline on the board/chart paper. Ask them to describe what they see. (Students should note the labels “BCE” and “CE.”)

- Tell students that “BCE” and “CE” are labels applied to years. Historians and others use these labels to indicate whether something took place a very long time ago, including ancient times, or whether it happened more recently. BCE stands for “before the Common Era” and refers to the years that happened a very long time ago. CE stands for “of the Common Era,” which refers to more recent years, including the current year. The Common Era begins with 1 CE, and years prior to that are referred to as BCE. Explain that the years in the Common Era are counted in the usual way: 1, 2, 3, and so on. Years in BCE, however, are counted backward from 1. Explain that, because of this backward counting, something that happened in 1000 BCE occurred before something that took place in 500 BCE.
- Remind students that a civilization is a group of people living together in a well-organized way. The ancient Greek and Roman civilizations were known for their advances in art, architecture, philosophy, and government. The ancient Greek civilization developed roughly around 1000 BCE, and the ancient Roman civilization developed around 750 BCE. Note that these dates are approximate.
- Have students identify which civilization came first, using what they know about BCE. (ancient Greek civilization)
- Invite students to turn and talk with a neighbor, discussing where they would place the Greek civilization card and the Roman civilization card on the timeline. Cold call students to place the Greek civilization card (1000 BCE) and the Roman civilization card (750 BCE) on the appropriate places on the timeline.
- Tell students that the time in Europe between the weakening and division of the Roman Empire and the beginning of the Renaissance is known as the Middle Ages, or medieval times. The Middle Ages is generally thought to have existed between approximately 450 CE and the late 1400s CE. Note that there is overlap between different time periods.

- Invite students to turn and discuss with a partner where they would place the Middle Ages card on the timeline. Cold call a student to place the Middle Ages card on the timeline between 450 CE and 1400 CE.
- Tell students that in this unit they will study the time in Europe after the Middle Ages called the Renaissance. The Renaissance was a cultural movement in Italy and other parts of Europe from roughly the mid-1300s to the early 1600s.
- Label the Renaissance on the timeline accordingly.

LABEL A MAP (10 MIN.)

- Have students turn to Activity Page 1.1. and ask them which part of the world is shown on this map. If necessary, point out “Europe” and “Africa” the labels on the map. You may also, show this area on a world map so they can see where this area is in relation to the United States.
- Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing the other features they notice and things they are wondering about on the map. After 1 or 2 minutes, cold call several students to share what their partner noticed and wondered. Listen for students sharing observations such as:
  - The map is shaded with different shades of gray and dots.
  - The key shows one shade of gray identified as “Ancient Roman Civilization.”
  - The key shows the dots identified as “Ancient Greek Civilization.”
  - The white lines indicate different countries.
  - There are blank labels pointing to different parts of the map.
- If necessary, explain to students that the shaded areas were part of the ancient Roman civilization and the dotted areas were part of the ancient Greek civilization.
  - The shaded areas were part of the ancient Roman civilization. The dotted areas were part of the ancient Greek civilization. Note that some areas on the map are both shaded and dotted. This means that both the ancient Greek and Roman civilizations developed in these shaded and dotted areas.
  - Use the Answer Key for Activity Page 1.1 in the Teacher Resources section at the back of this Teacher Guide to guide students as they locate the modern countries of Spain, France, England, Germany, and Italy, and label them on the Map of Western Europe.

Activity Page 1.1

- Remind students that the Middle Ages also took place in Europe. Point out that the civilizations of ancient Greece and ancient Rome, the time period called the Middle Ages, and the Renaissance are all connected.

Check for Understanding

Ask students to examine the map to think about what might connect the countries. Listen for students to recognize that these time periods all occurred in Western Europe, so they are all connected by an important feature: geography. If necessary for students who are struggling, demonstrate on the map how all of the countries are connected through geography.

- Explain to students that much of The Renaissance unit will focus on the Renaissance movement in Italy. Have students turn to the map of Renaissance Italy at the back of the Reader. Tell students that during the Renaissance, Italy was made up of city-states and was not one unified country as it is today. The white dotted lines on this map indicate the boundaries of those city-states at the time of the Renaissance. Just like countries, these city-states sometimes were at war with each other. This unit also covers how the Renaissance movement in Italy affected other Western European countries during this time period.

ACTIVATING KNOWLEDGE (20 MIN.) (OPTIONAL)

Note: You may feel your students have sufficient background knowledge about the Middle Ages. If so, skip to the next lesson segment. If you feel your students would benefit from an additional review of this time period, continue this lesson segment.

- Tell students that before they begin investigating the Renaissance movement, they need to learn about the time period that led up to it: the Middle Ages.

- Explain the Museum Picture walk activity to students.
  - Explain to students that during the Museum Picture walk they will walk around the room to view the posted pictures, speak quietly, look at but not touch the displays, and make space for others to see what is posted, just like when visiting a real museum.
  - Have student partners circulate throughout the classroom to view the displayed pictures that you prepared in advance.
  - Give students a minute or two to look at each picture and discuss with their partner what they notice about the Middle Ages time period.
  - Have student partners describe what they see or notice about the Middle Ages on a blank sheet of paper.
  - Conclude the Museum Picture walk once student partners have had a chance to view all or most of the displayed pictures.
- To debrief, invite students to turn to Activity Page 1.2.
- Explain to students that all of the Museum Pictures came from a text called “Merchants, Markets, and Mud: Towns in the Middle Ages.” Ask students to share an inference about what each picture is depicting, reminding students that readers make an inference when they use what they already know about a topic combined with what the text says about the topic to figure out something that is not explicitly stated. Encourage students to reference the notes that they recorded during the Museum Picture walk when making an inference.
- Tell students they will read portions of the chapter to learn some information about the rise of the middle class in the Middle Ages. Read the text to students using guided reading supports.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to compare what they noticed in the pictures during the Museum Picture walk with what they read about the Middle Ages in the chapter. If necessary, for students who are struggling, provide a sentence starter, such as “I inferred . . . but the actual picture showed . . .”

Chapter 4

Merchants, Markets, and Mud: Towns in the Middle Ages

THE BIG QUESTION
How did the growth of trade during the Middle Ages affect the way people lived?

It is raining again! You stand in a puddle on the edge of a narrow street. You have just entered town through one of two gates. The gates are the only ways in and out of this walled town. Inside the walls, tiny townhouses stand side-by-side. As you move through the crowd, you spot rats scurrying about, feeding on discarded trash. Nearby, you hear the varied cries of people selling fruits, vegetables, eggs, and pies. It is market day and people have set up their stalls in the town square.

As you make your way through the muddy streets, you hear the sound of church bells. They ring out to sound the hour and to call people to church.

Metalworker's stall in medieval market

You have just caught a glimpse of a town in Europe during the late Middle Ages.

ELPS 4.E

- Read the title and The Big Question.
- Read page 28 aloud.

Streets in medieval towns were often crowded and muddy.

29

- Read the caption aloud.

Inferential. Based on what you heard and what you see in the image on page 29, describe life in a town in the Middle Ages.

- » Answers may vary, but should include that towns were crowded and noisy; there were people selling many different things, including fruits, vegetables, eggs, and pies; houses were placed close together; animals and rats roamed the streets; there was a church.

In the early part of the Middle Ages, most people lived in the countryside. Between the years 1000 and 1350 CE, fueled by trade, towns began to grow. New jobs emerged, and, as a result, more and more people left the countryside to live and work in towns.

Peasants farming in the countryside

With this growth in trade, an increased number of people became involved in commerce, or business. As a result, a class of people, called the middle class, grew in importance. Merchants and craftsmen were part of the middle class. Towns grew as the middle class created successful businesses, and therefore jobs. Some merchants became rich and influential members of town communities.

Merchants and artisans sold goods in town markets.

To protect their businesses, merchants established guilds in towns throughout Europe. Guilds were organizations made up of merchants. Guilds controlled wages as well as the price and quality of the goods the merchants sold.

Support

What is trade?

- » Trade is the process of buying, selling, or exchanging items.

- Read page 30 aloud.

Literal. What class of people grew in importance as a result of this growth in trade?

- » the middle class

Literal. What groups of people made up the middle class?

- » merchants and craftsmen

- Have the class work with a partner. Direct partner 1 to reread the second paragraph, and partner 2 to reread the third paragraph.

Literal. How did trade affect life in the Middle Ages?

- » It encouraged the growth of towns and the creation of new jobs. The middle class grew. Merchants established guilds to protect their businesses.

Challenge

Why was this new class called the middle class?

- » Merchants and craftsmen had social status in between (in the middle of) those who worked the land and were poor, and the nobility who were wealthy.

Not only did merchants thrive, so too did skilled craftsmen, such as carpenters, papermakers, glassmakers, and blacksmiths. Skilled craftsmen were also important members of town communities. They made and sold their goods in the towns in which they lived and worked. Just like merchants, skilled craftsmen protected their businesses by forming guilds. Only highly skilled craftsmen were invited to join these guilds. Many years of training went into becoming a skilled craftsman.

Medieval Craftsmen

There was a certain pattern to daily life in towns in the Middle

Town scene in medieval manuscript

Ages. From Monday to Saturday, towns were busy with the hustle and bustle of street vendors, shopkeepers, craftsmen, and market sellers. Pickpockets and purse snatchers were afoot, too. Shops opened as early as 6:00 a.m. Most towns held markets two or three times a week. Local farmers sold produce and animals.

- Read page 31 aloud.

Charters such as this one from Bedford, England, outlined certain rights.

Towns were not outside the control of the local lord. Merchants and craftsmen usually paid lords in the form of money or goods. However, in exchange for money or goods, many lords granted towns special charters. The charters allowed wealthy and influential townspeople the right to make their own laws. Over time, this new decision-making process changed the feudal system.

With a growing economy, a banking system began to develop. The increasingly wealthy churches in towns created schools called universities. Places such as Oxford and Cambridge in England, and Paris in France, became important centers of learning.

Construction on the chapel at Oxford University's Merton College began in the 1200s.

- Read page 32 aloud. Tell to students that a charter is like a contract or written agreement.

Inferential. In what other ways did growth in trade and the importance of a middle class affect the development of towns in the Middle Ages?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that the decision-making process changed because wealthy townspeople were sometimes allowed to make their own laws, and banks and universities were established.

It was not long before many European towns and cities became terribly overcrowded. People lived in small houses crowded together.

Rats spread disease in towns.

The towns and cities were also disease-ridden. Rats scurrying about helped spread disease. Unless you lived in a castle, you did not have a toilet inside your home. Instead, people used chamber pots and threw the contents into the streets!

Local water supplies, polluted with the waste that was discarded daily, carried disease. Sickness and disease were common. The Black Death spread easily in such conditions.

As they did in the countryside, people in towns cooked on small fires inside their homes. Fires frequently broke out and were difficult to control. Townspeople were required to keep buckets of water outside their homes—just in case.

Fires spread quickly in medieval towns.

Many Middle Age towns were walled. People entering or leaving did so through gates. Often a toll, or fee, was charged to enter a town. A toll collector stood at the gate to collect the fee. The tolls were either paid in money or in goods. Gates were designed to keep criminals out, or if necessary, to lock criminals in so that they could be caught. There was no organized police force, but instead there were watchmen. Any member of the public could be asked to help catch an escaping criminal. The town gates were locked at night when the curfew bell sounded.

- Read page 33 aloud.

Literal. What were some difficulties middle class people in towns faced during the Middle Ages?

- » Some difficulties during the Middle Ages were disease, rats, waste, and frequent fires.

Check for Understanding

---

How did trade positively affect life in the Middle Ages?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that it encouraged the growth of towns, the middle class grew, and the decision-making process changed because wealthy townspeople were sometimes allowed to make their own laws. If necessary, direct students who are struggling to specific pages in the text to find evidence of the positive effects.

How did trade negatively affect life in the Middle Ages?

- » The towns and cities became overcrowded, which enabled diseases to spread easily. If necessary, direct students who are struggling to specific pages in the text to find evidence of the negative effects.

WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Use the following questions to discuss the lesson.
1. Identify what region of the world you will be studying in The Renaissance unit.
    - » Western Europe; specifically, Italy and parts of Northern Europe
  2. What is the name of the time period before the Renaissance movement?
    - » the Middle Ages
  3. Inferential. What changes affected the middle class during the Middle Ages?
    - » Answers may vary, but should include that middle class jobs increased because of a growth in trade; the economy improved; people moved to cities and towns; guilds developed; and craftsmen practiced their skills.

Reading

Primary Focus: Students will explain the relationship between factors that inspired the Renaissance movement using evidence from the text, “An Italian Rebirth.” TEKS 5.6.G; TEKS 5.6.I; TEKS 5.7.C; TEKS 5.7.E

INTRODUCE THE READER (5 MIN.)

- Ensure each student has a copy of the Reader, Patrons, Artists, and Scholars.

- If students do not comment on the bolded words or the glossary on their own, point out the first word—expression—on page 2. Ask, “Why might the author have chosen to print this word in bold?” Listen for responses like, “to show the reader it is an important word,” or, “to show the reader that it’s a word that is defined in the glossary.”
- If necessary, explain that the glossary contains definitions of all the vocabulary words in this Reader, and that each word from the glossary is bolded the first time it appears in the chapter. Have students refer to the glossary at the back of the Reader, locate expression, then have a student read the definition.
- Explain the following:
  - the part of speech
  - alternate forms of the word
- Have students reference Activity Page 1.3 while you read each word and its meaning, noting that:
  - The page number (for the first occurrence of the word in the chapter) appears in bold print after the definition.
  - Words are listed in the order in which they appear in the chapter.

Chapter 1

An Italian Rebirth

THE BIG QUESTION

What factors inspired the Renaissance movement?

Art, literature, and architecture are forms of expression. These forms of expression often communicate what is happening during certain periods in time. Have you ever heard the word Renaissance? The word Renaissance means “rebirth” and comes from both the French and Latin languages. This word Renaissance describes a cultural movement that began in what is now Italy and then spread throughout most of Europe. This was no ordinary change, but rather a revolutionary movement that led to the creation of art, the likes of which the world had never seen before.

The Renaissance movement was inspired by a renewed interest in ancient Greek and Roman culture and learning. New ideas were born and old ideas were reborn. The Renaissance was a particular period of change, in literature, art, philosophy, science, education, and architecture. To understand why the Renaissance was such an extraordinary movement, it helps to recall what was happening in Europe before the Renaissance.

What Came Before the Renaissance?

More than 2,000 years ago, ancient Greece gave us tremendous works of art and architecture. Ancient Greek sculptures emphasized balance, proportion, and the “perfect” human form. Ancient Greeks built strong buildings supported by mighty pillars and columns. They gave us the ideas of great philosophers, such as Plato and Aristotle. They gave us lasting works of literature, including Homer’s Iliad and Odyssey. From ancient Greece we have inherited important ideas about government, including the idea of democracy—rule by the people. Even the word democracy comes from the Greeks. The Greek word demos means “people.”

- Read page 2 of the text aloud and invite students to follow along on their copy. Show students where Italy is located on the world map and the Map of Western Europe. You may also reference the locations of the ancient Greek and Roman civilizations, as was done during Core Connections.
- Pause at the end of page 2 and ask, “What is this page mostly about?” Model thinking about the gist for this page and write the gist in the margin or on a sticky note.

- Read aloud the caption on page 3.

Check for Understanding

In pairs, invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this page and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. Cold call students to share the gist of page 3. If necessary for students who are struggling, model using the headings, pictures, and captions to think aloud about the big idea of this page.

- Repeat for the remaining pages of the chapter, modeling thinking about the gist as necessary.

Later, the ancient Romans built upon the ideas and achievements of the Greeks. Like the Greeks, Romans prized sculpture with mythological themes. The Romans also built great structures, such as the Colosseum, and perfected the use of the arch and dome. They left us powerful literature such as the Aeneid by Virgil. The mighty Roman armies conquered lands and established a vast empire.

Eventually, different warring tribes invaded the Roman Empire, weakening Rome's power. These warring tribes sought land. The resulting instability greatly diminished the influence of ancient Rome. Slowly but surely new cultural groups, no longer bound by ties to Rome, began to define themselves. The great Roman Empire declined and was eventually divided in half.

Moving On

Across western Europe, during the time that is considered to be the start of the Middle Ages, kingdoms and nations began to take shape. Trade, economy, laws, and systems of government were established. Cities and towns grew. Architectural styles and designs, among other forms of expression, became unique to the people of a particular land.

While the cultural achievements of the Greeks and Romans were admired, new, home-grown ideas began to thrive. Knowledge of the writings of the ancient Greeks and Romans was left in the hands of the few educated elite and in religious houses called monasteries. Some men and women devoted their lives to the Church. Men called monks lived in monasteries. Women called nuns lived in convents. The monks made beautiful copies of writings from ancient Greece and Rome. If you wanted to make another copy of a book, you had to do it by hand. There were no printing presses and, of course, no copy machines or scanners. And so, quietly, and in some ways secretly, the monks helped keep classical learning alive.

Passing the Torch

Monarchs and the Christian Church established laws and a sense of order. The Church was a powerful influence throughout western Europe during the Middle Ages. With its rituals and teachings, the Church was a very important part of the daily lives of medieval people. Everyone from rich noblemen to poor peasants gave money, materials, and sometimes their labor to help build the magnificent churches of the Middle Ages.

During the Middle Ages, impressive castles were constructed across the European landscape. Kings battled each other for land, and nations were born. People thought a lot about the path to heaven. Art was created to honor God, or to communicate stories from the Bible, which was important because few people were able to read during this time. To express religious devotion, medieval artists created stylized religious figures and moved away from the natural human form common in ancient Greek and Roman art.

But, as you know, history does not stand still. Things change and new ideas emerge. So along came the Renaissance movement. Yet how, and why, the Renaissance movement emerged is the question.

Petrarch and Humanism

During the 1300s, there was a great Italian poet named Petrarch. He admired the classical values and teachings of ancient Greece and Rome. He filled his library with as many ancient books as he could find and invited others to read and study these books, as well.

Over the years, more and more people had the opportunity to learn about the literature, art, and government of ancient Greece and Rome. These people who admired ancient Greece and Rome were called humanists. Their intellectual and cultural interest in the art, literature, and government of ancient Greece and Rome was known as humanism.

Under the influence of the humanists, many artists, philosophers, and scientists studied the works produced by the ancient Romans and Greeks. A study of the past prompted many to examine the present, and an increased interest in certain subjects led to a greater understanding of the world at large. For example, some scientists—such as Copernicus and Galileo—looked to the heavens and the stars and made astonishing discoveries. Others looked to nature and the physical earth. The Renaissance movement was born.

Petrarch

A drawing of the heliocentric system that was proposed by Copernicus in which the sun, not Earth, is at the center of the solar system

In particular, breathtakingly beautiful art was produced. Renaissance artists developed techniques that allowed them to paint the human form in a much more realistic way. Humanists promoted the power and unique talents of the individual, both in terms of intellect and ability, but also in terms of the human form itself. An Italian architect, Leon Battista Alberti, summed up what you might call a Renaissance motto: "Men can do anything with themselves, if they will." William Shakespeare, the English playwright wrote, "What a piece of work is a man!" The great minds of the Renaissance expanded the themes of their work beyond the Biblical to include those of history, science, and literature. As a result, the people of the Renaissance made their mark upon the earth.

The Middle Class

Typically, most people lived and died in the towns and rural areas where they were born. As had been the case for centuries, people belonged to groups, or classes, and social mobility was limited.

However, during the late Middle Ages into the Renaissance period, as the Italians became wealthier and cities grew, there were more and more merchants and craftsmen. There were so many, in fact, that there was an expansion of the middle class, the class between those who worked the land and the nobility. As a result, the wealthy middle class grew in power and status. Bankers and merchants proved you didn't have to be born a nobleman to be rich and powerful: You could work hard and make money and rise in society. With money came political influence.

The rise of the middle class was not restricted to Italy. The financial and political rise of this social group was evident throughout Europe. Without a doubt, the middle class assumed even greater influence during the Renaissance.

Patrons: Dollars for Scholars

So what do merchants and money have to do with the Renaissance? These wealthy merchants could read and write, although most people could not. As a result, some merchants and businessmen became interested in literature and art. Of course, most of them were so busy running their businesses that they didn't have time to write books or paint, but they had enough money to help others write, study, and create works of art.

Some of the merchants became patrons of the writers and artists. For example, a rich banker might ask an artist to paint portraits of his wife and children. The banker would pay for the portraits, and, in addition, he might provide the artist with food, clothing, and a house while he worked. With the support of such rich patrons, many artists were able to explore their ideas and develop their skills. Artists with patrons no longer had to worry about how they were going to eat or where they were going to sleep. Later, you will read more about the Medici family, one of the most influential banking families and art patrons of all time.

What did the patrons get out of all this? What was their reward for paying artists to create paintings, statues, books, and buildings? The patrons became famous. The works of art they commissioned signaled their power, prestige, and importance. They were admired and celebrated for the works they paid to have created.

The artists and writers also made their mark in history. Shakespeare, perhaps the greatest writer of all, had royal and noble patrons. Yet it is his name that we remember today.

The world was indeed changing. Exquisite works of art were created by people so extraordinary that it would be wonderful to have a time machine to take us back in history to meet them. But, as we do not, we will just have to turn the pages of this book to learn about them instead!

The Middle Ages

The Middle Ages had its fair share of troubling times, but it was also a time of great achievement in art and learning. Let's examine some key achievements.

Western Europe

Universities were founded in cities such as Bologna, Oxford, Paris, and Cambridge. Hundreds of castles, such as Alcázar de Segovia in Spain and Dover Castle in England, were constructed in Western Europe. The building of great cathedrals, which took hundreds of years to complete, was also undertaken during this age.

Alcázar de Segovia, Spain

Byzantine Civilization

When invading tribes destroyed and took over much of the Western Roman Empire, the Eastern Roman Empire, or Byzantine civilization, remained strong. The great city of Constantinople was the center of Byzantine civilization. Constantinople's central location made the city an important link between Europe and Asia. From about 300 to 1453 CE, Byzantine civilization was one of the most advanced in the world.

Hagia Sophia in Turkey was once a cathedral. It became a mosque when Constantinople, now Istanbul, was conquered by the Ottómen Turks.

Islamic Civilization

During the Middle Ages, many Muslim scholars made significant progress in math, science, and astronomy. Some scholars translated works by ancient Greek philosophers and scientists into Arabic, which helped preserve classical writings. A great thinker and writer named Ibn Sina wrote influential works of philosophy, poetry, and astronomy. He also made important medical discoveries about how to treat diseases.

A large part of Spain was conquered and settled by Muslims. Learning thrived in many Islamic cities, with cities such as Palencia, Valladolid, Salamanca, and Alcalá having libraries, schools, and universities. In the 900s, scholars from Africa, Asia, and Europe traveled to Córdoba to be part of a city rich in learning and the arts.

Beginning in the late 1000s, Christian forces started to drive the Muslims out of Spain. By the time of the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella—the king and queen who helped finance Columbus’s voyage in 1492 CE—the Muslims had been driven out. They left behind writings about science and philosophy that would contribute to the reawakening of learning in Italy during the Renaissance.

The Alhambra in Spain is a magnificent castle and fortress built by the Muslims.

REREAD TO EXPLAIN (25 MIN.)

- Have one student read The Big Question at the beginning of the chapter. Ensure students understand the meaning of The Big Question before rereading the chapter.
  - What factors inspired the Renaissance movement?
- Remind students that their focus for today is explaining the relationship between the factors that inspired the Renaissance, or, explaining how the factors inspired the movement. Tell students that they will be rereading parts of the chapter with this in mind.
- Tell students that before they can explain how different factors inspired the Renaissance, they first need to identify what factors inspired the Renaissance.
- Direct students' attention to the Factors that Inspired the Renaissance chart and explain that they will use this chart to record their thinking. Invite students to copy down the blank chart on loose-leaf paper or in their notebooks.
- Invite students to skim page 2 of the text, looking for information about what specific factors inspired the Renaissance. If necessary, model briefly, including the following:
  - rereading the gist statement from the previous lesson segment
  - skimming the text using text features like bolded or italicized words, captions, and headings
  - noticing the bolded word inspired and the information that follows, "a renewed interest in ancient Greek and Roman culture and learning."
- Pause at the end of page 2 and ask, "What factors inspired the Renaissance?" Model writing the factors identified on this page in the appropriate column of the chart.
- Invite students to read aloud page 3 in pairs, discussing any factors that inspired the Renaissance described on this page and writing them on their charts. Cold call students to share whole group.
- Repeat for the remaining pages of the chapter, modeling and checking in with students as necessary. Students should identify the following factors:
  - The humanist movement grew, so more people had the opportunity to learn about the literature, art, and government of ancient Greece and Rome. (page 6)
  - Humanists promoted the human form and looking beyond the Bible. (page 7)
  - There were more merchants and craftsmen, so the middle class grew and became more influential. (page 8)

Check for Understanding

Ask students to turn and talk with a different partner, sharing one factor they identified in the chapter that inspired the Renaissance. Direct students who may be struggling to look back to specific pages in the text.

- Tell students that now that they've identified what factors inspired the Renaissance, they need to consider how the factors inspired the movement.
- Model thinking about how the first factor, the humanist movement grew, inspired the Renaissance. As you model, be sure to think aloud about what happened as a result of this factor and record your thinking on the Factors that Inspired the Renaissance Chart.
- Invite students to work with a partner, thinking about how the remaining factors inspired the Renaissance using evidence from the chapter. Have students record their thinking on their charts.
- Cold call students to share whole group. Students should identify the following results:
  - As people studied the past, they became more interested in the present and started making big scientific and artistic discoveries. (page 6)
  - People began thinking and creating beyond the Bible—their works covered themes like history, science, and literature. (page 7)
  - Some merchants who were interested in the arts became patrons for writers and artists, which let artists explore their ideas and become more skillful without worrying about money or where they would live. (page 9)

LESSON WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

- Use the following questions to discuss the chapter.

Note: Questions 1 and 2 relate to The Big Question of this chapter.

1. Literal. Explain how the interests and activities of humanists like Petrarch and his followers inspired the Renaissance movement.
  - » Humanists studied writings from ancient Greece and ancient Rome, which led to the spread and influence of these ideas among scholars and artists during the Renaissance movement in Italy.

2. Inferential. How did people and their interests contribute to the Renaissance?
- » The appearance of patrons from the wealthy middle class allowed art and literature to blossom during the Renaissance.
3. Evaluative. Think-Pair-Share. Have students interpret the following quote in relation to humanism: “What a piece of work is man!”
- » Answers may vary, but should include that humanists believed the individual was powerful and had many talents.
- Ask several students to share the information exchanged between partners in the Think-Pair-Share activity.
  - Have students take home Activity Page 1.4 to read and complete for homework.

INTRODUCE THE CHAPTER (5 MIN.)

- Post The Primary Focus and invite students to read it aloud together. Circle the words art and architecture. Ask students what these words mean. Listen for responses like, “Art is works that artists create, like paintings or sculptures,” and, “Architecture is designing and building buildings or other structures.”
- Underline the phrase quoting accurately. Give students a minute to turn and talk, discussing what this phrase means. Cold call on students to share what their partners said, listening for responses like, “Quoting accurately means to say word for word what a text says.”
- Tell students that they will continue learning about the Renaissance today as they read Chapter 2, “The Early Renaissance.” Explain that they will be thinking about the techniques and features of the art and architecture created during the Renaissance, and what made art and architecture unique during this period.
- Have students turn to the table of contents, locate the chapter, and then turn to the first page of the chapter.
- Preview the core vocabulary words before reading the chapter.
- Begin by telling students that the first vocabulary word they will encounter in this chapter is rivalry.
- Have them find the word on page 12 of the Reader. Remind students that each vocabulary word is bolded the first time it appears in the chapter.
- Have students refer to the glossary at the back of the Reader and locate rivalry. Have a student read the definition.

Chapter 2

The Early Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

What are techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture?

What an exciting time to be alive! Painters, sculptors, architects, and philosophers were buzzing with ideas. With help from wealthy families and the Church, they created splendid projects. Let's meet three important artists from the Early Renaissance.

Brunelleschi Loses

Before Filippo Brunelleschi devoted himself to architecture, he worked as a goldsmith. In 1401 CE, when the city council of Florence invited artists to submit ideas for decorating the huge doors of a religious building called the Baptistery, Brunelleschi created a beautiful design.

His design didn't win. The winning design was submitted by Lorenzo Ghiberti. When Ghiberti found out that he'd won, he bragged, "I have surpassed everyone." The Florence city council offered to allow Brunelleschi to work as Ghiberti's assistant, but Ghiberti flatly refused his help. This started a lifelong rivalry between the men.

After losing the contest, Brunelleschi decided to explore his interests in architecture. In the spirit of the Renaissance, he looked back to classical times.

Brunelleschi Wins

As the years passed, Brunelleschi took what he learned from the ancient Romans and began to develop his own ideas about architecture. Brunelleschi, like other Renaissance artists, began to move away from the complex medieval style of architecture in favor of the balance and symmetry of ancient Greek and Roman architecture. He had previously traveled to Rome to study

Roman ruins and had been inspired by the dome of the Pantheon. This inspiration came in handy when, in 1418 CE, the Guild of Wool Merchants in Florence announced another competition. They wanted to find someone who could solve a difficult architectural problem: how to put a roof over a huge space.

The space was over the middle of the cathedral of Florence. Work had begun on the cathedral eighty years before Brunelleschi was born, but it still wasn't finished. The plans called for a roof to be placed over the middle of the church, an area 136 feet wide.

For years, the architects of Florence had been arguing about how to build this roof. Some people said it was impossible, but Brunelleschi approached the Wool Merchants and announced that he could do it. How? He had an idea to cover the space with a dome.

When the guild members demanded to see his plans, Brunelleschi refused. He claimed they would steal his ideas. To illustrate his point, Brunelleschi brought an egg to a guild meeting. Imagine you are a guild member at this meeting. You hear Brunelleschi ask, "Can any one of you make this egg stand on its head without toppling?"

No one replies. So, Brunelleschi cracks the egg on the table and balances it on its jagged top. One of your fellow guild members sneers, "We could have done that!"

Brunelleschi responds, "That's precisely my point. If I tell you my plans to build the dome, you'll say you knew how to do it all along."

In the end, the guild members chose Brunelleschi to undertake the project. Then they got cold feet and thought he needed someone to help him, so they picked Brunelleschi's old rival, Ghiberti.

Brunelleschi was angry. He knew Ghiberti had no idea how to build the dome. So Brunelleschi pretended to be sick. While he lay in bed, all work stopped. Finally, the guild members told him that Ghiberti could do nothing without him. From then on, Brunelleschi alone was in charge.

Literal. Who was Filippo Brunelleschi?

- » He was an architect who submitted a design for the doors of the Baptistery in Florence, Italy; he lost the design contest to Lorenzo Ghiberti.
- Direct students' attention to the image on pages 12 and 13. Tell students the image shows Florence, specifically the Cathedral of Florence.

Donatello the Sculptor

The greatest sculptor of the Early Renaissance was known as Donatello. As a young man, Donatello helped Lorenzo Ghiberti decorate the doors of the Baptistery in Florence. Later, he worked with Ghiberti's rival, Brunelleschi. It seems that Donatello and Brunelleschi visited Rome together to study the ancient ruins.

Donatello drew from these experiences when he created his well-known sculpture, St. George. On the rectangular base of the statue, Donatello carved a scene from the popular legend in which St. George battles a dragon. According to the legend, there was once a fierce dragon terrorizing a town. The people fed the dragon sheep, but the dragon demanded humans. The unlucky victims were chosen by lottery. When the daughter of the king was chosen, she went to meet her fate. But St. George arrived just in time to save the princess and slay the dragon. Before leaving the scene, St. George converted all the townspeople to Christianity.

The standing figure of St. George that Donatello carved is a proud and confident warrior. His strong, muscular form shows through his armor. His watchful eyes and his slightly turned stance make him seem ready for whatever challenges may come his way. In this strong, watchful warrior, the people of Florence must have seen the embodiment of their own spirit.

Renaissance sculptors such as Donatello captured human emotion in facial expressions and body positions that make their pieces highly realistic.

- Have students read page 15 silently.

Literal. What does embodiment mean?

- » The word embodiment refers to someone or something that is a visible representation or example of an idea, concept, etc.

Evaluative. The townspeople of Florence, Italy, considered St. George the embodiment of their town spirit. What does this tell us about the townspeople of Florence?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that the people of Florence saw themselves as strong and ready for whatever challenges came their way, just like St. George.

- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this section and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking about the gist.

Challenge

Ask students to describe someone that they consider to be the embodiment of their town's or school's spirit. Have students explain the reasons for their choice and give details illustrating why the person or figure they selected would be a good representative for their town or school.

Support

A sculptor is a person who makes art by carving or molding clay, stone, or metal.

A Little Barrel

Alessandro di Mariano Filipepi was his real name, but he was called Sandro Botticelli. Botticelli means “little barrel” in Italian. It is believed that the nickname was first applied to Botticelli’s older brother, and, when young Sandro went to live with him, people started calling him Botticelli, too. While the nickname may not bring graceful images to mind, Botticelli’s paintings are known for their grace, elegance, and beauty.

Botticelli was born in Florence in 1455 CE. He was first apprenticed to a goldsmith and then later to a famous painter. In 1481 CE he traveled to Rome, where he spent a year painting the walls of the Sistine Chapel. The Sistine Chapel is located in the Vatican, where the pope, the head of the Catholic Church, lives.

Botticelli’s most famous painting, The Birth of Venus, shows a scene from classical mythology. Botticelli painted Venus in a pose from an ancient Roman statue, then added his own touches, such as the flowing hair and the almost-sad expression. The wind gods blow gentle breezes to move the goddess ashore.

Botticelli was a favorite painter of wealthy patron Lorenzo de' Medici. Lorenzo and his family were one of the most influential banking families and patrons of the arts. They supported artists like Botticelli financially so that they had time to create art. In return, the Medici family was admired for their contributions to the art world. However, Botticelli's association with the Medici family ended when the family left Florence after Lorenzo's death. Botticelli lost much of his financial support, too. The monk Savonarola took charge of the city of Florence and became the most powerful person in the city. Savonarola did not approve of paintings like The Birth of Venus.

Savonarola's sermons must have affected Botticelli deeply. He stopped painting scenes from classical mythology and turned his attention to religious themes. For example, instead of painting Venus, he painted Mary, the mother of Jesus. But he still painted her with grace and elegance.

Inferential. Why is The Birth of Venus a good example of Renaissance interest in ancient Greece and Rome?

- » The Birth of Venus shows a scene from classical mythology. Also, Botticelli painted Venus in a pose from an ancient Roman statue.
- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this section and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking about the gist.

Support

Classical, as it is used here, means “of or relating to ancient Greece and Rome.”

The Power of Perspective

The architect Brunelleschi inspired Renaissance artists when he developed the mathematical rules for perspective, a way of showing depth on a flat surface. Brunelleschi observed that when we look at things, objects that are close look bigger, while those that are far away look smaller. He also observed that if you stand between two parallel lines that stretch into the distance, the lines appear to come closer together until they meet at a point on the horizon. When the lines come together, they seem to vanish, so this point is called the vanishing point.

- Have students read pages 18 and 19 silently.

These mathematical rules, or instructions on how to achieve a sense of perspective, were published. Even today, artists used these rules to create a sense of depth and space in their work. When applied, these rules are a tool for directing the viewer's eye to the most important subjects of a painting. This is in direct contrast to art from earlier times such as the Middle Ages, when depth and space were not highlighted. The Renaissance painter Raphael, in his painting The School of Athens, used the structure of the building and the pattern of the floor to create a sense of perspective.

Literal. What is perspective?

- » a way to show depth on a flat surface

Literal. What is a vanishing point?

- » the place where parallel lines appear to meet in the distance
- Point to the vanishing point on page 18.

Support

Have students look out the window and show how big nearby objects appear by extending their arms. Next have students show with their hands how small faraway objects appear.

Check for Understanding

Why might perspective be an important concept for painters?

- » Answers should include that it helps painters show what things look like in real life and draw the viewer's eye to the vanishing point. Direct students who may be struggling to look back at the paintings, and point out the lines of perspective.

Inferential. (Refer to the image on page 19.) Note the dotted lines overlaid on the image. These lines come together at a vanishing point and demonstrate how Raphael used perspective to create a sense of depth and space in The School of Athens. Locate the vanishing point. If artists usually place the most important thing in their paintings at the vanishing point, what does that tell you about the two figures located at the vanishing point in The School of Athens?

- » The two figures must be very important.
- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this section and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking about the gist.

REREAD CHAPTER 2 FOR DETAILS (10 MIN.)

- Remind students that in today's lesson, they are reading to learn about the techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture.
- Explain to students that they will now have a chance to reread chapter 2, looking specifically for techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture—what made the paintings, sculptures, and buildings special during the Renaissance.
- Remind students that they should also be focused on quoting accurately from the text, or finding word for word what the text says about these techniques and features. Tell students that they will record their notes in their writing journals.
- Invite students to create the following chart on a new, clean page of their writing journals or on a sheet of loose-leaf paper:

Technique or Feature	Quote from the Text	page

- Point out that the right column is blank, and tell students not to write anything in this column for now.
- Explain to students that they will use this chart to keep track of their thinking as they reread the chapter. Model looking for what the text says about the techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture on page 12. Be sure to model:
  - skimming the text for the artistic technique or architectural feature
  - recording word for word, with quotation marks, what the text says about the artistic technique or architectural feature
  - recording the page number on which the quote appears
- Give students a few minutes to work with a partner, rereading pages 12–15 and looking for what the text says about the techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture.
- Bring students back together to share with the whole group, modeling looking for what the text says and writing down quotes from the text as necessary.

Techniques and Features of Renaissance Art and Architecture

- Allow students the option to either work with a partner or on their own to reread the remainder of the chapter, looking for and writing down what the text says about the techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture. Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they work, reminding them to record word for word using quotation marks in the second column, and to record the page number on which the quote appears in the third column.

DISCUSSION AND WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

Note: Questions 1 and 2 relate to The Big Question of this chapter.

- Use the following questions to discuss the chapter:
1. Literal. What new techniques were used by Renaissance artists?
    - » perspective and vanishing point
  2. Inferential. What are some important features of Renaissance art and architecture?
    - » Art was realistic and art and architecture were both based on classical ideas from Greece and Rome.

WORD WORK: EMBODIMENT (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter, you read, “In this strong, watchful warrior, the people of Florence must have seen the embodiment of their own spirit.”
2. Say the word embodiment with me.
3. An embodiment is someone or something that is a visible representation or example of an idea or concept.
4. Many Americans believe the Statue of Liberty is the embodiment of freedom and the opportunities available in the United States.
5. What person, thing, or symbol do you think is the embodiment of the United States? Be sure to use the word embodiment in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “I think _____ is the embodiment of the United States because _____.”
6. What part of speech is the word embodiment?
  - » noun
  - Use a Discussion activity for follow-up. Say, “Talk with your partner about something you think is the embodiment of kindness and generosity. Be sure to use the word embodiment in complete sentences as you discuss this with your partner.”

Lesson 2: Reading Informational Texts for Details:
“The Early Renaissance”

Writing

Primary Focus: Students gather information about the techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture by paraphrasing information in notes.

TEKS 5.7.D

PARAPHRASING INFORMATION (15 MIN.)

- Direct students' attention to the primary focus. Underline the word paraphrasing and ask students what this term means. Listen for responses like, “It means to put information into your own words.”
- Ask students why it is important to paraphrase information from the text. Listen for responses like, “It helps show that you understand what the author is trying to say about the ideas in the text.”
- Explain to students that they will now paraphrase the information they collected about the techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture. Tell students they will do this by putting the quotes about these techniques and features into their own words.
- Direct students' attention to the chart they created in the previous lesson segment. Invite students to fill in the heading for the column on the right with “In my own words _____.”
- Model paraphrasing the first technique—balance and symmetry of architecture—from page 12. Be sure to model:
  - rereading page 12 to remind yourself what the text says about this technique
  - rephrasing the quote in your own words orally
  - writing the paraphrased quote in the column on the right

Check for Understanding

Ask, “What do you notice about what I've written in the right-hand column?” Student responses may include: It's written in note form; the words are different from the quote but they mean the same thing; it's written in your own words. Prompt students who may be struggling by asking them to compare what you've written to the original quote.

Lesson 2: Reading Informational Texts for Details:

“The Early Renaissance”

Language

GRAMMAR (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students use the past tense to convey various times, sequences, states, and conditions. TEKS 5.11.D.i; TEKS 5.11.D.ii

Note: Students who have used the program in earlier grades have had extensive practice with regular verbs and tenses. Students who have not used the program in earlier grades may benefit from additional work with the Grades 3 and 4 grammar lessons on verbs and tenses.

- Tell students that today they will learn about subject–linking verb agreement in the past tense. Display a picture of a chain, point to the links, and explain that like the links of a chain, a linking verb connects the subject to words in the predicate that describe the subject. A linking verb does not show action.
- Ask students to turn and talk, brainstorming examples of linking verbs. If necessary, share with students that was, the past-tense form of the verb to be, is one example. Listen for students to share other linking verbs such as am, went, does, get, etc.
- Remind students that there are a small number of other verbs that may also function as linking verbs, in addition to forms of the verb to be. Verbs associated with the five senses, such as to feel, to look, to taste, to smell, and to sound, can also act as linking verbs connecting the subject to words in the predicate that describe the subject. These linking verbs are typically followed by an adjective (e.g., you looked happy, etc.).

TEKS 5.11.D Edit drafts using standard English conventions, including: (i) complete simple and compound sentences with subject-verb agreement and avoidance of splices, run-ons, and fragments; (ii) past tense of irregular verbs.

- Display the following linking verbs:
  - to be, feel, look, taste, smell, sound

Check for Understanding

Invite students to work with a partner to write at least three sentences using these linking verbs in the present tense. If necessary, remind students that the present tense indicates that the action is happening right now, relative to the speaker or writer. If necessary, model using an example like I am happy or They look tired.

- Ask students what tense a writer would use if writing about action that happened an hour ago, yesterday, or last year. Listen for students to describe this tense as the past tense.

➤ Subject–Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Poster

- Direct students' attention to the Subject–Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Poster. Point out the following:
  - Unique verb forms of the past tense of the linking verb to be are used to show agreement with different subjects (e.g., I was, you were, the paintings were).
  - All plural subjects use the verb form were, as does the singular pronoun you when used as a subject.
  - When the singular pronoun I is the subject, the correct verb form is was.
  - When a singular noun or one of the pronouns he, she, or it is the subject, the correct verb form is was.
  - The past tense of the linking verb to feel is felt for all subjects. The past tense of the linking verbs to look, taste, smell, and sound are looked, tasted, smelled, and sounded for all subjects.

➤ Subject–Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Chart

- Direct students' attention to the Subject–Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense chart you prepared in advance. Referencing the Subject–Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Poster you have displayed, fill out the chart and help students to recognize how the subject and verb agree, using the following chart as reference.

Subject–Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense
Subject	Linking Verb	Agreement
I	to be	I was
you	to be	you were
she	to be	she was
the cathedral	to be	the cathedral was
We	to be	we were
They	to be	they were
Brunelleschi and Ghiberti	to be	Brunelleschi and Ghiberti were
he	to feel	he felt
the sculpture	to look	the sculpture looked
the pasta	to taste	the pasta tasted
the air after the rain	to smell	the air after the rain smelled
the music from the flute	to sound	the music from the flute sounded

- Now have students orally create an expanded and complete sentence using the first example in the chart—I was.
  - For example, I was exhausted after running to catch the school bus.

Check for Understanding

Have students go back to their three sentences written in the present tense and use those examples to write three completed and expanded sentences in the past tense in their writing journals. If necessary, redirect students to your example expanded sentence and point out the differences from the original (I was).

Note: Fill in the first seven rows of the chart during this lesson. If time permits you may wish to fill in the rest of the chart.

Note: Students might respond by using the verb to be as a helping verb instead of a linking verb (I was running to catch the school bus instead of I was exhausted after running to catch the school bus). Accept answers using both functions of the verb to be, making sure that the correct past-tense form of the verb is used.

Note: When you are writing about actions that have already happened, you usually add -ed to the end of the action word to form the past tense. When you are talking about actions that have already happened, the end of the action word sounds like /t/, /d/, or /ed/, depending on the ending sound of the present tense action word (e.g., walked–/t/; spelled–/d/; lifted–/ed/).

MORPHOLOGY (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students use resources to determine the meaning and word origin of unfamiliar prefixes and accurately read multisyllabic words with the prefixes

 im- and in- out of context. TEKS 5.2.A.iv; TEKS 5.3.A; TEKS 5.3.C

- Write “possible” on the board. Briefly discuss the meaning of the word and then use it in a sentence. (Possible means “able to happen.” For example: It is possible that it may rain today.)
- Write the prefix im- on the board. Tell students that they can use a dictionary to find the meanings of unfamiliar words, including affixes such as im-. Add that they can also use a dictionary to find the origins of unfamiliar words and affixes, or where those words and affixes come from. Knowing the origin of a word or affix often helps a reader determine the word’s meaning.
- Model using a dictionary (print or digital) to look up the prefix im-. Tell students that the prefix comes from the Latin prefix im-, which means “not.” Explain that this tells us that adding the prefix im- to a word is the same as adding the word not to its meaning. For example, if the word possible means “able to happen,” then the word impossible must mean “not able to happen.” TEKS 5.3.A
- Share the following example of impossible used in a sentence: It is impossible to be in two different places at the same time.
- Have students provide sentences using the word impossible. (Answers may vary.)
- Write dependent on the board. Briefly discuss the meaning of the word and then use it in a sentence. (Dependent means “needing something else for support.” For example: Newborn puppies are dependent on their mother to feed and take care of them.)
- Write the prefix in- on the board. Again, model for students how to find the origin of the prefix in the dictionary. Tell them that the prefix in- is another  Latin prefix that means “not.” TEKS 5.3.A

 TEKS 5.2.A.iv Demonstrate and apply phonetic knowledge by decoding words using advanced knowledge of the influence of prefixes and suffixes on base words; TEKS 5.3.A Use print or digital resources to determine meaning, syllabication, pronunciation, and word origin; TEKS 5.3.C Identify the meaning of and use words with affixes such as trans-, super-, -ive, and -logy and roots such as geo and photo.

- Add the prefix in- to the word dependent and have students read the new word. Guide them to see that if dependent means “needing something else for support,” then independent must mean “not needing something else for support.”
- Share the following example of independent used in a sentence: My sister is very independent. She likes to do things without help from others.
- Have students provide sentences using the word independent. (Answers may vary.)
- Tell students the two prefixes they will study this week are im- and in-.

Check for Understanding

Ask students to turn and talk, using the words impossible and independent to discuss what they think im- and in- mean. Cold call on a student to share whole class. Listen for students explaining that these prefixes mean “not.” If necessary, remind students of the meaning of each word and prompt them to think about the similarities between these meanings.

- Refer to the Prefixes Poster from Unit 1 displayed in the classroom and read it with students.
- Write the prefix im- on the poster and ask students to say the prefix out loud. Listen for students pronouncing it im. Write the prefix in- on the poster and ask students to say the prefix out loud together. Listen for students pronouncing it in. Write the meaning of the prefixes on the poster. (not)
- Remind students there are other prefixes that mean not, such as un-, non-, dis-, il-, and ir-.
- Share the following examples of words with other prefixes that mean not: unoriginal, nondairy, dislike, illegible, irresponsible.
- Tell students that the prefix im- is added to the beginnings of words that begin with the letters m, b, and p. (These letters usually stand for the sounds m, b, and p, which are made using the lips.)
- Have students turn to the chart on Activity Page 2.2.
- Direct students' attention to the headings of the chart. Read the headings aloud. Clarify as necessary.
- Invite students to read aloud the first word in the “Affixed Word” column, the part of speech, and the word's meaning: “immobile, adj. not able to move.”

- As a class, brainstorm several sentences using the word immobile. Invite students to choose one sentence and write it on their charts in the box with the word immobile. Listen for sentences like “The baby is immobile because she isn’t crawling yet,” and “My car broke down and is immobile.”
- Invite students to turn and talk, underlining the prefix of the affixed word and then discussing what the root word is and the meaning of that root word. If necessary, model briefly by underlining im and thinking aloud about the meaning of mobile using the meaning “able to move.”
- Invite the class to write the word “mobile” and the meaning in the appropriate spot on the chart, leaving a space to fill in the part of speech.
- As a class, brainstorm several sentences using the word mobile. Invite students to choose one sentence and write it on their charts in the box with the word mobile. Listen for sentences like “I fixed my bike’s flat tire and now it’s mobile,” and “My brother broke his ankle but has a walking cast so he’s still mobile.”
- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing what part of speech mobile is. If necessary, have students look back at the sentences they brainstormed using the word. Listen for students noticing that mobile describes the subject of their sentences, and so is an adjective. Have students write “adj.” in the appropriate spot on their charts.
- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing whether they think the prefixes im- and in- change the part of speech of the root word. If necessary, direct students back to the example words independent, impossible, and immobile. Have students share whole class, listening for students noticing that the prefixes im- and in- do not change the part of speech of the root word.
- Direct students’ attention to the word audible on their charts. Invite students to work with a partner to decide which prefix to add to this word, the affixed word’s part of speech, and the affixed word’s meaning. After a few minutes, have them share with the whole class, recording students’ responses in the appropriate spot on the chart.
- Invite students to continue in this manner for the remaining im- and in- words.
- As students are working, check in with each student to informally assess their ability to read multisyllabic words with the prefixes im- and in-. Point to a word on their chart and ask them to read the word to you. Make note of students who struggle with this task and check in with them before Lesson 4, when these prefixes will be revisited.

ADVANCE PREPARATION

Reading

- Divide the class into two groups using the following guidelines:
  - Small Group 1: This group should include students who need extra scaffolding and support to read and comprehend the text. Use the guided reading supports to guide students through reading the text. This is an excellent time to make notes in your anecdotal records. Students will complete Activity Page 3.2 with your support while reading the chapter.

INTRODUCE THE CHAPTER (5 MIN.)

- Write the primary focus for this lesson segment and invite students to chorally read it aloud. Circle the words ideas and accomplishments. Ask students what these terms mean. ### Chapter 3

The Spirit of the Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments?

"I don't know why I let you talk me into this, Master Leonardo!" Carlo grumbled as he dragged an enormous contraption up the steep, rocky hill.

Leonardo da Vinci laughed quietly and said, "Here, let me help." He steadied one huge wing of the flying machine as he walked alongside his servant.

When they reached the summit, Leonardo gazed down at the streets and buildings of Florence. "Ah, Carlo, in a few moments, you will be sailing over our fair city," he said.

"Master," Carlo sighed, "I wish it were you who could experience that pleasure."

Leonardo fastened the straps around his servant's thin shoulders and waist. "Done!" he cried as he tightened the last leather tie.

"Master," Carlo protested, "I look like a giant dragonfly!"

"Hush. If this works, your name will be known throughout history," replied Leonardo.

"If it doesn't work, I'll be history!" exclaimed Carlo.

Leonardo led Carlo to the edge of a high cliff. Carlo peered over, then made the sign of the cross.

"If you please, Master," said Carlo, "has it occurred to you that if God had intended man to fly, He would have given us wings?"

- Read pages 20 and 21 with the whole group before having students work in small groups.

But Leonardo just smiled and gave Carlo a hearty push off the cliff. As Carlo plummeted downward, Leonardo shouted, “Man can do anything he sets his mind to do, my faithless friend!”

It would be a nice ending to the story if Carlo suddenly swooped upward and soared like a bird over the rooftops of the city. But, alas, the poor servant fell and broke his leg—or so goes the story that has been handed down to us over the years.

The story, whether true or legendary, tells a lot about Leonardo’s attitude toward life: Man is capable of doing anything he sets his mind to, he said. Anything.

That belief drove Leonardo da Vinci to explore uncharted territory in many fields. He was passionately interested in a number of subjects, and highly skilled at most anything he tried.

- Point out that the italicized text on page 20 and part of page 21 indicates that this portion of the text is different from the text in the remainder of the chapter. The italicized text is an imagined dialogue, or conversation, between Leonardo and his assistant Carlo. Have students close their eyes and visualize the story of Leonardo and Carlo as you read aloud the italicized section.
- Alternatively, you may also make copies of this story, located in the Teacher Resources section of this Teacher Guide, and have three students read the story dramatically, assigning one student as Leonardo, one as Carlo, and one as the narrator. Encourage students to read with emotion and expression.

Inferential. Have students examine the illustration in the background of pages 20 and 21. How might this illustration connect to the story?

- » The illustration appears to be of a wing, and it might be an illustration of Leonardo's flying machine.
- Have students read the last three paragraphs on page 21 silently.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of pages 20 and 21, and then writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking aloud about the gist of this section.

An Amazing Apprentice

If we had to pick just one person to represent the spirit of the Renaissance, it might be Leonardo da Vinci. Painter, inventor, scientist, musician, and more, Leonardo embodies the belief that anything is possible.

Leonardo was born in 1452 CE in Vinci, a town near Florence. As a young boy, he worked as an apprentice to Andrea del Verrocchio, a leading painter and sculptor of Florence. Leonardo's work as an apprentice kept him busy from dawn to dusk. He swept floors, fetched supplies, and made brushes. He also practiced drawing and painting each day. It didn't take long for people to notice Leonardo's artistic genius.

- For the rest of the chapter, work with students in Small Group 1 while students in Small Group 2 work independently or in pairs. Remind students in Small Group 2 to stop at the end of each page to discuss what that page was mostly about.
- Tell students in Group 1 that as they read the rest of this text, you will guide them as they think about the gist.

Often, a master artist would paint the main features of a picture but leave it for an apprentice to finish the landscape or other smaller figures in the background. In 1476 CE, Verrocchio was working on a painting called The Baptism of Christ. Verrocchio painted one angel, and then asked Leonardo to paint another. Legend has it that Leonardo's angel looked so much better than Verrocchio's that the old master never picked up a brush again.

Leonardo in Milan

When Leonardo was about thirty years old, he was invited to work for the Duke of Milan. While he lived in Milan, Leonardo continued to make works of art, but the Duke also employed him as a military engineer. Although Leonardo called war "bestly madness," he designed some very dangerous weapons, including an armored cart that resembled a tank.

Leonardo's sketch of armored cart

When the Duke wanted to impress his fellow noblemen, he asked Leonardo to organize spectacular festivals. Leonardo created fancy stage sets and selected the music. He even designed costumes.

While employed by the Duke of Milan, Leonardo constructed a huge monument made of terra cotta, a clay-like material. The monument was in the shape of a horse and was to feature the Duke of Milan's father as the rider. The gigantic clay model was supposed to be cast in bronze, but the Duke wound up using the bronze to make weapons for war. Worse yet, French soldiers invading Milan used the clay horse for target practice and completely destroyed it.

Inferential. Even as an apprentice, how did Leonardo supposedly demonstrate his "artistic genius"?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that he painted an angel in the background of his master's painting that was much better than the one painted by the master.

Literal. According to legend, what happened after Leonardo outshone his master?

- » The master gave up painting.
- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of pages 22 and 23, and then writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking about the gist.

Support

What sorts of tasks would an apprentice artist do for a master artist?

- » Apprentices would sweep floors, gather supplies, and make brushes. They would also practice drawing and painting and sometimes finish the background or smaller figures in their master's paintings.

The Painter at Work

In Milan, Leonardo was kept busy working on all kinds of projects, including designing a whole new plan for the city. Did he ever find time to paint?

Yes, indeed he did.

While he lived in Milan, Leonardo created one of his greatest paintings, The Last Supper. The painting was commissioned by the Duke of Milan. It shows Jesus having supper with his closest friends. Some scholars believe that, in particular, Leonardo focused on the betrayal of Jesus Christ and the part of the story when Jesus made the shocking announcement, “One of you will betray me.” Leonardo attempted to capture the very moment when the twelve apostles, Jesus’s closest and most trusted followers, heard those words.

How do you paint thirteen men at a table and still show all their facial expressions? Leonardo decided to place the apostles in groups of three, with Jesus seated alone in the middle. Notice how the artist isolates the figure of Judas, the betrayer of Jesus. Judas leans back, away from Jesus.

Leonardo paid careful attention to the men’s faces and their gestures, especially their expressive hands. He wandered the streets of Milan searching for exactly the right faces and right poses to use as models for the people in this painting.

The Last Supper is painted on the wall of a dining hall in a monastery. While Leonardo worked on the painting, the head of the monastery, called the prior, became impatient for him to finish. He complained that Leonardo was lazy, and that the artist was spending too much time wandering the streets looking for the right face for Judas. Leonardo admitted that it was taking him a long time to find the right face for Judas. But he said to the prior, “If you’re in a great hurry, then I could always use your face.”

It took two years (from 1495-1497 CE) to finish The Last Supper. The painting made Leonardo famous throughout Europe. Other artists and engravers made copies of it for hundreds of years.

- Have students read page 24 silently and continue to the end of the first paragraph on page 26.

Leonardo da Vinci, The Last Supper, 1495 to 1497 CE

The Bible tells us the story that in the hours before his capture, arrest, and crucifixion, Jesus had supper with his closest friends—his apostles. One of his friends, Judas, betrayed Jesus. This led to the arrest of Jesus. Jesus knew he would be betrayed.

25

The painting itself did not last very long. Leonardo experimented with a new fresco technique, using oil and varnish mixed in with his colors. The paint absorbed the moisture from the wall and crumbled over time. Recently, artists and scientists who specialize in restoring old paintings have used advanced techniques to try to make The Last Supper look more like Leonardo's original creation.

Putting Things in Perspective

The Last Supper is painted on a 14-by-30-foot wall. The wall, of course, is flat, but the painting seems to have depth. It almost seems as if you could walk through the open windows into the landscape in the background. To create a sense of depth in a painting, Leonardo used perspective. You can see how Leonardo directs the viewer's eye toward Jesus.

In The Last Supper, Leonardo followed the rules of perspective developed by Italian artist and architect Brunelleschi. If you were to extend the lines of the ceiling to the horizon, they would meet at a vanishing point in the center of the painting, somewhere behind the head of Jesus. This draws your attention to Jesus as the most important figure in the painting.

Leonardo also put an open door and windows behind Jesus. Through them you can see the landscape in the distance. In a book he wrote on painting techniques, Leonardo added some refinements to the rules of perspective. He said that when you paint objects at a distance, you should not make them too detailed, and you should make the colors a little weaker.

- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this section, and then writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking about the gist.
- Have students rotate their readers so they can look closely at The Last Supper on page 25. You may wish to project this image (located in the digital components for this unit) so you can walk students through the painting using the accompanying descriptions.
- Have students read the rest of page 26 silently.

Evaluative. What effect does the addition of the landscape (as seen through an open door and windows) have on the painting?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that the open doors and windows frame the vanishing point or central figure in light, or that the addition of the far-off landscape adds to the depth of the painting.

Literal. How did Leonardo refine, or improve upon, Brunelleschi's rules of perspective?

- » Leonardo stated that objects in the distance should be painted with fewer details and weaker colors.
- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this section, and then writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking about the gist.

Support

How did Leonardo create depth in a flat painting?

- » Leonardo used Brunelleschi's rules of perspective, using the lines of the ceiling to extend to the horizon where they meet at a vanishing point.

Leonardo the Scientist

After he left Milan, Leonardo lived in several places, including his beloved city of Florence. For a while he worked as a map maker and military engineer, and he became friends with Niccolò Machiavelli, who worked in the government of Florence for many years.

In 1506 CE, Leonardo returned to Milan. As time went on, he became more interested in science than in art. In fact, at one point he wrote that he “could not bear the sight of a paintbrush.”

When Leonardo looked at the sky and saw birds soaring gracefully through the air, he wondered, “How can man fly, too?” Being Leonardo, he got to work and designed several devices. He tried to make a model based on the way bats flew. He boarded up the windows of the room he worked in so no one would know if his flying machine failed.

It didn't work. Still, Leonardo's attempts were far from total failures. In the course of his studies, he developed some of the basic ideas for parachutes and helicopters.

Leonardo explored almost every field of science, including optics, geology, botany, physics, and engineering. He made great advances in the study of anatomy. His notebooks are filled with highly detailed drawings of human bodies—not just the outside, but the inside, too.

- Have students read page 27 silently.
Evaluative. What does Leonardo's attempt to make man fly tell us about his personality?
  - » Leonardo had great perseverance (or persistence or grit or determination) because he tried numerous times to create a flying machine.

Challenge. How does the story of Leonardo and Carlo at the beginning of the chapter contribute to our knowledge of Leonardo's personality? How do the story and the text differ in conveying this information?

- » In the story, Leonardo is optimistic and eager to try out his invention. In the text, Leonardo boards up the windows of the room so no one will know if his flying machine fails, suggesting that he was not as optimistic in real life as he was in the story.

Evaluative. Based on this chapter, how is Leonardo an embodiment of the belief that man can do anything he sets his mind to?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that anything Leonardo decided to do, he did. Leonardo's accomplishments were in a variety of subject areas, including different areas of art and science.
- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this section, and then writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking about the gist.

Are You Smiling at Me?

While Leonardo lived in Milan for the second time, he painted what may be the most famous painting of all time, a portrait called Mona Lisa. For many years no one knew the identity of the woman in the picture. However, it is now believed to be Lisa Gherardini, wife of a Florentine cloth merchant named Francesco del Giocondo.

For hundreds of years, people have been fascinated by the Mona Lisa. Look at the way she smiles. Leonardo added to the mystery of Mona Lisa by painting an unusual, misty-looking landscape in the background. If you look closely, you will notice that Leonardo used an interesting technique called sfumato. Sfumato is a way of painting that creates smooth changes between different areas of color and shading in a picture. The end result is a soft, hazy, smoky look—the perfect background for this mysterious woman!

Last Years

Leonardo lived in troubled times. When fighting broke out again in Milan, he moved to Rome and worked for Pope Leo X. But the pope seemed to favor other artists of the day. So, when King Francis I invited him to France, Leonardo left Italy, never to return. He advised the French king on many architectural projects before he died in 1519 CE.

Leonardo da Vinci was a man whose boundless curiosity, multiple talents, and visionary imagination summed up the spirit of the Renaissance.

Mirror Writing

Leonardo da Vinci constantly wrote in notebooks that he carried everywhere he went. In these notebooks he recorded his ideas, questions, and sketches—at least 10,000 pages of words on every imaginable topic. But, if you want to read them, you will need a mirror. Leonardo wrote from right to left, so all the letters are reversed!

Leonardo's Mona Lisa, 1506 CE

The Mona Lisa has fascinated people for centuries, and in fact, she seems to have fascinated Leonardo as well. He kept the painting in his possession until his death in France, never delivering it to his patron, Francesco del Giocondo. Some have argued that he continued to work on the painting until he died.

- Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of this section, and then writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking aloud about the gist.

Challenge

Direct students to look at Leonardo's sketch, The Head of a Woman (also known as La Scapigliata), created around 1508, on the cover of the Reader. Ask students to compare and contrast it with the Mona Lisa, particularly the expression on both faces.

- » Answers may vary, but should include that they are similar in that they are both images of women; they are both realistic; and both women appear calm and have a small, subtle smile. They are different in that the Mona Lisa has more detail and color, and was created with the sfumato technique.

Support

What is sfumato?

- » Sfumato is a way of painting that creates smooth changes between different areas of color and shading in a picture.

Support

Where was sfumato used in the Mona Lisa?

- » Sfumato was used to create a softness for the figure herself and a haziness for the landscape in the background of the Mona Lisa.

RERead TO MAKE INFERENCES (20 MIN.)

- Remind students that today they are focused on making inferences about Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments—things he thought of and things that he did.
- Direct students to turn back to page 21 and reread the last line of the first paragraph:
  - “Man can do anything he sets his mind to do...!”

Check for Understanding

Invite students to turn and talk, explaining this quote in their own words. Cold call on students to share with the whole group, listening for responses like “People can do anything as long as they believe in themselves.” If necessary, prompt students to break down the first part of the sentence and then the second part of the sentence.

Activity Page 3.2

- Have students record their explanation of the quote for question 1 on Activity Page 3.2.
  - Note: Activity Page 3.2 relates to The Big Question of this chapter.
- Explain to students that they will continue working in small groups to reread the chapter with this quote in mind. Tell students they will be looking for text evidence that is an example of this statement, and explain how it is an example of the quote.
- Invite students to turn back and reread pages 20-21 to themselves, looking for an example showing that people can do anything as long as they believe in themselves. Tell students to show thumbs up when they have found an example.
- Display the chart in question 2 on Activity Page 3.2 and invite students to turn to this page in their Activity Books. Think aloud to model finding an example on page 20 that shows that people can do anything as long as they put their mind to it. Model recording this example and an explanation of how it relates to the quote, writing something like:

Examples of “Man can do anything he sets his mind to do!”

20–21	Leonardo’s creation of a flying machine, because no one had ever tried to create a flying machine before	engineering and physics

Check for Understanding

Invite students to continue rereading the chapter and looking for examples that support the quote. Support students as necessary. Direct students who may be struggling back to specific pages in the text, reminding them that they should note both the example and an explanation of how it relates to the quote on their charts.

- After 10 minutes, bring students back together as a whole group. Cold call on students to share the examples they found in the chapter supporting the quote, “Man can do anything he sets his mind to do!” Answers may vary, but should include the following:

Examples of “Man can do anything he sets his mind to do!”

22–23	Leonardo succeeded in painting, engineering, and sculpting because of his hard work and raw talent	painting, engineering, sculpture
24–25	Leonardo’s creation of The Last Supper	painting
27	Leonardo’s highly detailed drawings of human bodies	anatomy

DISCUSSION AND WRAP-UP (15 MIN.)

- Bring students back together as a class to prepare them for a discussion. Students will use their answers to questions 1 and 2 on Activity Page 3.2 in the discussion.
- Tell students that they will get into groups of two to four students and first discuss what the phrase the spirit of the Renaissance means, using Leonardo's accomplishments as a starting point. Groups should write down their thoughts under question 3 on Activity Page 3.2.
- Have each group share its definition of the spirit of the Renaissance.
  - Answers may vary, but may include that the spirit of the Renaissance includes curiosity and willingness to explore the natural world and an interest in the capabilities of the human mind and body.
- Collect Activity Page 3.2 to review and grade at a later time.

WORD WORK: REFINEMENT (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter, you read, "In a book he wrote on painting techniques, Leonardo added some refinements to the rules of perspective."
2. Say the word refinement with me.
3. Refinement means "a small change that improves something."
4. After the students wrote the rough draft of their essays, they worked with a partner to add refinements to their essays, such as more descriptive language or quotes from the text.
5. Think of a refinement you have made to your own writing recently. Be sure to use the word refinement in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students' responses to make complete sentences: "A refinement I made to my writing recently was _____."
6. What part of speech is the word refinement?
  - » noun
  - Use a Discussion activity for follow-up: "We are constantly making refinements to what we do to make the next time go better, faster, smoother, etc. Talk to your partner about why people often want to make refinements to things that are already established. What is a refinement you would make if you could? Be sure to use the word refinement in the discussion."

Lesson 3: Making Inferences: Leonardo da Vinci's Ideas and Accomplishments

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will plan an informational paragraph about da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments by identifying a topic, reasons, and evidence related to the topic. TEKS 5.7.C; TEKS 5.11.A

PLAN AN INFORMATIONAL PARAGRAPH (25 MIN.)

- Tell students that over the next two lessons they will be planning and drafting an informational paragraph based on the information they have read in Chapter 3.
- Direct students' attention to the prompt for their paragraphs:
  - How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments
- Remind students that when writing informational pieces, they will focus their writing by selecting one specific moment, object, or idea and use precise details to write about it.

Check for Understanding

Ask students to turn and talk, discussing what the focus of the paragraph will be. Listen for responses like "It will be about how things da Vinci did showed the spirit of the Renaissance." If necessary, prompt students by reminding them that spirit can be defined as an attitude or feeling shared by a group that relates to a particular time.

- Display the Informational Paragraph Plan and explain to students that they will be recording their plan for their paragraphs using this graphic organizer. On a new, clean page of their writing journals or on loose-leaf paper, invite students to create the graphic organizer, leaving space to add in their own notes.

Informational Paragraph Plan

TEKS 5.7.C Use text evidence to support an appropriate response; TEKS 5.11.A Plan a first draft by selecting a genre for a particular topic, purpose, and audience using a range of strategies such as brainstorming, freewriting, and mapping.

Informational Paragraph Plan
Topic Sentence:
Reason	Text Evidence	Explanation of Evidence
Precise Vocabulary:

- Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, brainstorming at least two possible topic sentences for their paragraphs. Cold call on several students to share their topic sentences and record them on the displayed Informational Paragraph Plan. Listen for responses like:
  - Leonardo da Vinci’s ideas and accomplishments represented the spirit of the Renaissance in many ways.
  - There are many things Leonardo da Vinci thought and did that showed the spirit of the Renaissance.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to write a topic sentence in the appropriate spot on their graphic organizers. Tell students that they may use one they created, or one shared with the whole group. If students are struggling, remind them that a topic sentence captures the central idea of the paragraph and ask, “What will be the central idea of your paragraph?”

- Remind students that strong informational paragraphs include several reasons that support the topic sentence. Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing possible reasons that support the topic. Cold call on several students to share their reasons and record them on the displayed Informational Paragraph Plan. Listen for responses like:

- Leonardo worked in different areas of science.
- Leonardo studied anatomy.
- Leonardo was interested in painting and sculpture.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to write three reasons in the appropriate spots on their graphic organizers. Tell students they may use the reasons they brainstormed with their partners, or ones shared with the class. If students are struggling, remind them that a reason must support the central idea and ask, “What are examples of how da Vinci’s ideas represented the spirit of the Renaissance?”

- Remind students that in addition to strong reasons, informational paragraphs must include evidence that supports the reasons.
- Ask, “What kind of evidence should our paragraphs include?” Listen for responses like “concrete details, quotes, or other information and examples that support the topic.”
- Ask, “For our paragraphs, where do we find this kind of evidence?” Listen for students recognizing that they will need to look back through the chapter to find this evidence.
- Point out the last row of the graphic organizer: “Precise Vocabulary.” Explain to students that as they look back through the chapter, they should record any words they think they may want to use in their paragraphs. Give an example of a word that might be used and record it on the displayed plan (for example, accomplishment or explored).
- Tell students that they should leave the right-hand column, “Explanation of Evidence,” blank for now.
- Give students 15 minutes to independently look back through Chapter 3 for evidence that supports each reason they identified. Tell students to record the evidence and any precise vocabulary words they think they may want to use in the appropriate spots on their graphic organizers.

Writing Texts to Explain Information

Beginning

Provide 1:1 prompting and support for students as they plan their informational paragraphs. Consider allowing students to write the plan in their home language.

Intermediate

Redirect students to the text for key vocabulary terms. Ask students to give a synonym for different words or phrases.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for planning their informational paragraphs as needed.

ELPS 5.F

WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Have students share their topic sentences, their favorite reasons, and the supporting text evidence. Ask each student who shares to explain why they think the reason effectively supports the central idea.
- Feedback. Provide reinforcing or corrective feedback for topic sentences providing a central idea and reasons and text evidence that effectively support the central idea.
- Explain to students that they will use this information as notes to inform their draft of an informational paragraph, which they will draft in the next lesson.

Reading

- Display the Informational Paragraph Plan begun in the Writing segment of Lesson 3.
- Write the Purpose for Reading/The Big Question on the board/chart paper. Alternatively, you may access a digital version of this and The Big Question in the digital components for this unit.

Language

Grammar

- Display the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Poster and Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense chart from Lesson 2.
- Prepare and display the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement Practice Paragraph by writing the following on the board/chart paper. Please note that the mistakes in verb tense are intentional and will be corrected during the Grammar lesson segment.
  - Often, a master artist would paint the main features of a picture but leave it for an apprentice to finish the landscape or other smaller figures in the background. In 1476 CE, Verrocchio is working on a painting called The Baptism of Christ. Verrocchio painted one angel, and then asked Leonardo to paint another. Legend has it that Leonardo's angel looks so much better than Verrocchio's that the old master never picked up a brush again.

Universal Access

- Create sentence frames to support students in writing their informational paragraphs. Create a bank of transitional words or phrases to choose from to support organization of the paragraphs. Create a checklist of steps to take when editing a paragraph for inappropriate shifts in verb tense.

Lesson 4: Writing Informational Texts: Leonardo da Vinci's Ideas and Accomplishments

Reading

Primary Focus: Students will make inferences about how da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments represented the spirit of the Renaissance using evidence from the text. TEKS 5.6.F

REVIEW THE CHAPTER (5 MIN.)

- Post the primary focus for this lesson segment and cold call on a student to read it aloud. If necessary, clarify the meanings of the words ideas and accomplishments.
- Remind students that in Lesson 3, they made inferences and began planning an informational paragraph about da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments. Tell students that today, they will reread parts of Chapter 3 closely in order to add to their planning for their paragraphs, which they will draft later in the lesson.
- Have students turn to the table of contents, locate the chapter, and turn to the first page of the chapter.
- Have one student read The Big Question at the beginning of the chapter. Ensure students understand the meaning of The Big Question before reading the chapter.
  - How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments?
- Remind students that this question is what they will be writing about in their informational paragraphs and invite students to take out their Informational Paragraph Plans and display the class version begun in Lesson 3. Explain to students that they will be using this to take notes on as they reread the chapter.

Informational Paragraph Plans

REREADING CLOSELY (15 MIN.)

- Read the title of the chapter as a class, "The Spirit of the Renaissance." As you read portions of the chapter, pause to explain or clarify the text at each point indicated.

TEKS 5.6.F Make inferences and use evidence to support understanding.

Chapter 3

The Spirit of the Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments?

"I don't know why I let you talk me into this, Master Leonardo!" Carlo grumbled as he dragged an enormous contraption up the steep, rocky hill.

Leonardo da Vinci laughed quietly and said, "Here, let me help." He steadied one huge wing of the flying machine as he walked alongside his servant.

When they reached the summit, Leonardo gazed down at the streets and buildings of Florence. "Ah, Carlo, in a few moments, you will be sailing over our fair city," he said.

"Master," Carlo sighed, "I wish it were you who could experience that pleasure."

Leonardo fastened the straps around his servant's thin shoulders and waist. "Done!" he cried as he tightened the last leather tie.

"Master," Carlo protested, "I look like a giant dragonfly!"

"Hush. If this works, your name will be known throughout history," replied Leonardo.

"If it doesn't work, I'll be history!" exclaimed Carlo.

Leonardo led Carlo to the edge of a high cliff. Carlo peered over, then made the sign of the cross.

"If you please, Master," said Carlo, "has it occurred to you that if God had intended man to fly, He would have given us wings?"

Pronunciation Table

| Word(s) | CK Code    |
|---------|------------|
| Vinci   | /vin*chee/ |

- Have students silently read pages 20 and 21.

But Leonardo just smiled and gave Carlo a hearty push off the cliff. As Carlo plummeted downward, Leonardo shouted, “Man can do anything he sets his mind to do, my faithless friend!”

It would be a nice ending to the story if Carlo suddenly swooped upward and soared like a bird over the rooftops of the city. But, alas, the poor servant fell and broke his leg—or so goes the story that has been handed down to us over the years.

The story, whether true or legendary, tells a lot about Leonardo’s attitude toward life: Man is capable of doing anything he sets his mind to, he said. Anything.

That belief drove Leonardo da Vinci to explore uncharted territory in many fields. He was passionately interested in a number of subjects, and highly skilled at most anything he tried.

Inferential. Carlo says, “If it doesn’t work, I’ll be history!” “I’ll be history” is an idiom, or a phrase that does not make sense using the literal meaning of the individual words, but that has a meaning of its own. What does Carlo mean by saying, “I’ll be history!”?

- » Carlo means he might crash to the ground and die if the flying machine does not work.

Inferential. Leonardo shouts, “Man can do anything he sets his mind to, my faithless friend!” What does the word faithless mean?

- » The word faith means believing strongly in the truth or trustworthiness of a person or thing. So the word faithless means lacking such confident belief. If Carlo is faithless, then he is not confident about Leonardo’s ideas.

Inferential. What evidence from this story supports Leonardo's characterization of Carlo as faithless?

- » Carlo expresses doubt in Leonardo as they drag the flying machine up the hill.

Inferential. The text says, "That belief drove Leonardo da Vinci to explore uncharted territory in many fields." What might the phrase "uncharted territory" mean?

- » The phrase "uncharted territory" refers to new, unexplored ideas.

An Amazing Apprentice

If we had to pick just one person to represent the spirit of the Renaissance, it might be Leonardo da Vinci. Painter, inventor, scientist, musician, and more, Leonardo embodies the belief that anything is possible.

Leonardo was born in 1452 CE in Vinci, a town near Florence. As a young boy, he worked as an apprentice to Andrea del Verrocchio, a leading painter and sculptor of Florence. Leonardo's work as an apprentice kept him busy from dawn to dusk. He swept floors, fetched supplies, and made brushes. He also practiced drawing and painting each day. It didn't take long for people to notice Leonardo's artistic genius.

Andrea del Verrocchio, The Baptism of Christ, 1476 CE

Often, a master artist would paint the main features of a picture but leave it for an apprentice to finish the landscape or other smaller figures in the background. In 1476 CE, Verrocchio was working on a painting called The Baptism of Christ. Verrocchio painted one angel, and then asked Leonardo to paint another. Legend has it that Leonardo's angel looked so much better than Verrocchio's that the old master never picked up a brush again.

Leonardo in Milan

When Leonardo was about thirty years old, he was invited to work for the Duke of Milan. While he lived in Milan, Leonardo continued to make works of art, but the Duke also employed him as a military engineer. Although Leonardo called war "beastly madness," he designed some very dangerous weapons, including an armored cart that resembled a tank.

Leonardo's sketch of armored cart

When the Duke wanted to impress his fellow noblemen, he asked Leonardo to organize spectacular festivals. Leonardo created fancy stage sets and selected the music. He even designed costumes.

While employed by the Duke of Milan, Leonardo constructed a huge monument made of terra cotta, a clay-like material. The monument was in the shape of a horse and was to feature the Duke of Milan's father as the rider. The gigantic clay model was supposed to be cast in bronze, but the Duke wound up using the bronze to make weapons for war. Worse yet, French soldiers invading Milan used the clay horse for target practice and completely destroyed it.

The Painter at Work

In Milan, Leonardo was kept busy working on all kinds of projects, including designing a whole new plan for the city. Did he ever find time to paint?

Yes, indeed he did.

While he lived in Milan, Leonardo created one of his greatest paintings, The Last Supper. The painting was commissioned by the Duke of Milan. It shows Jesus having supper with his closest friends. Some scholars believe that, in particular, Leonardo focused on the betrayal of Jesus Christ and the part of the story when Jesus made the shocking announcement, “One of you will betray me.” Leonardo attempted to capture the very moment when the twelve apostles, Jesus’s closest and most trusted followers, heard those words.

How do you paint thirteen men at a table and still show all their facial expressions? Leonardo decided to place the apostles in groups of three, with Jesus seated alone in the middle. Notice how the artist isolates the figure of Judas, the betrayer of Jesus. Judas leans back, away from Jesus.

Leonardo paid careful attention to the men’s faces and their gestures, especially their expressive hands. He wandered the streets of Milan searching for exactly the right faces and right poses to use as models for the people in this painting.

The Last Supper is painted on the wall of a dining hall in a monastery. While Leonardo worked on the painting, the head of the monastery, called the prior, became impatient for him to finish. He complained that Leonardo was lazy, and that the artist was spending too much time wandering the streets looking for the right face for Judas. Leonardo admitted that it was taking him a long time to find the right face for Judas. But he said to the prior, “If you’re in a great hurry, then I could always use your face.”

It took two years (from 1495-1497 CE) to finish The Last Supper. The painting made Leonardo famous throughout Europe. Other artists and engravers made copies of it for hundreds of years.

- Have students silently read page 24, continuing until the end of the first paragraph on page 26.

Leonardo da Vinci, The Last Supper, 1495 to 1497 CE

The Bible tells us the story that in the hours before his capture, arrest, and crucifixion, Jesus had supper with his closest friends—his apostles. One of his friends, Judas, betrayed Jesus. This led to the arrest of Jesus. Jesus knew he would be betrayed.

25

The painting itself did not last very long. Leonardo experimented with a new fresco technique, using oil and varnish mixed in with his colors. The paint absorbed the moisture from the wall and crumbled over time. Recently, artists and scientists who specialize in restoring old paintings have used advanced techniques to try to make The Last Supper look more like Leonardo's original creation.

Putting Things in Perspective

The Last Supper is painted on a 14-by-30-foot wall. The wall, of course, is flat, but the painting seems to have depth. It almost seems as if you could walk through the open windows into the landscape in the background. To create a sense of depth in a painting, Leonardo used perspective. You can see how Leonardo directs the viewer's eye toward Jesus.

In The Last Supper, Leonardo followed the rules of perspective developed by Italian artist and architect Brunelleschi. If you were to extend the lines of the ceiling to the horizon, they would meet at a vanishing point in the center of the painting, somewhere behind the head of Jesus. This draws your attention to Jesus as the most important figure in the painting.

Leonardo also put an open door and windows behind Jesus. Through them you can see the landscape in the distance. In a book he wrote on painting techniques, Leonardo added some refinements to the rules of perspective. He said that when you paint objects at a distance, you should not make them too detailed, and you should make the colors a little weaker.

Evaluative. Why did Leonardo focus on the arrangement of figures and their faces and expressions when painting The Last Supper?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that he wanted to capture the very moment when the apostles heard Jesus's shocking announcement, "One of you will betray me."
- Have students read the rest of page 26 silently.

Evaluative. How does perspective reflect the values and characteristics of the Renaissance movement?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that perspective allows artists the ability to make art seem more naturalistic and lifelike. This supports Renaissance ideals of increased attention to the human spirit, mind, capability, and its place in the natural world.
- Point out that da Vinci's use of perspective was one of his great accomplishments.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to make notes on their Informational Paragraph Plan explaining how the text evidence related to da Vinci's interest in painting demonstrates how his ideas and accomplishments represent the spirit of the Renaissance. If necessary, direct students back to specific parts of the text.

Support

What did perspective allow Renaissance painters to do?

- » Perspective allowed painters to give their paintings a sense of depth—meaning their paintings looked life-like and natural, as if you could walk into the room with Jesus and the apostles in The Last Supper. It also helped the viewer find the most important part of the painting.

Leonardo the Scientist

After he left Milan, Leonardo lived in several places, including his beloved city of Florence. For a while he worked as a map maker and military engineer, and he became friends with Niccolò Machiavelli, who worked in the government of Florence for many years.

In 1506 CE, Leonardo returned to Milan. As time went on, he became more interested in science than in art. In fact, at one point he wrote that he “could not bear the sight of a paintbrush.”

When Leonardo looked at the sky and saw birds soaring gracefully through the air, he wondered, “How can man fly, too?” Being Leonardo, he got to work and designed several devices. He tried to make a model based on the way bats flew. He boarded up the windows of the room he worked in so no one would know if his flying machine failed.

It didn't work. Still, Leonardo's attempts were far from total failures. In the course of his studies, he developed some of the basic ideas for parachutes and helicopters.

Leonardo explored almost every field of science, including optics, geology, botany, physics, and engineering. He made great advances in the study of anatomy. His notebooks are filled with highly detailed drawings of human bodies—not just the outside, but the inside, too.

Challenge

Ask students to use evidence from the text to discuss how Leonardo used his experience as an artist to help him in his work as a scientist.

Pronunciation Table

| Word(s)     | CK Code           |
|-------------|-------------------|
| Machiavelli | /mok*ee*ə*vel*ee/ |

- Have students read page 27 silently.

Inferential. Leonardo wrote that “he could not bear the sight of a paintbrush.” What does it mean to not be able to bear something?

- » To not be able to bear something is to not be able to stand it or tolerate it. Leonardo grew tired of painting and didn't want to look at another paintbrush.

Evaluative. How did Leonardo show interest in the natural world, a characteristic of the Renaissance movement?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that Leonardo was interested in flying and in the human body; he worked as a mapmaker and military engineer; and he studied different areas of science (such as optics, geology, botany, physics, and engineering).

Check for Understanding

Invite students to make notes on their Informational Paragraph Plan explaining how the text evidence related to Leonardo's interest in the natural world demonstrates how his ideas and accomplishments represent the spirit of the Renaissance. If necessary, direct students back to specific parts of the text.

Note: Question 1 relates to The Big Question of this chapter.

- Invite students to make additional notes on their Informational Paragraph Plan explaining how the text evidence they identified in Lesson 3 demonstrates how da Vinci’s ideas and accomplishments represent the spirit of the Renaissance.
- Allow volunteers to share their explanations and discuss the points students make. Remind students that they will have a chance to use these plans to draft their informational paragraphs later in the lesson.

WORD WORK: UNCHARTED (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter you read, “That belief [that man can do anything he sets his mind to] drove Leonardo da Vinci to explore uncharted territory in many fields.”
2. Say the word uncharted with me.
3. Uncharted means “unknown or not previously explored or experienced.” The expression comes from cartographers (mapmakers) charting, or making, maps of faraway places. “Uncharted territory” would be an area or place of which little, if anything, is known.
4. When Christopher Columbus decided to sail west to find a new route to India, he thought he was entering uncharted territory; he didn’t know there were already people living in the Americas.
5. What are some other examples of someone entering uncharted territory? You may wish to think of examples from the Maya, Aztec, and Inca Reader or The Adventures of Don Quixote Reader. Be sure to use the word uncharted in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “_____ entered uncharted territory when _____.”
6. What part of speech is the word uncharted?
  - » adjective
  - Use a Discussion activity for follow-up:
    - Describe a time when you entered uncharted territory—perhaps the first day at a new school, the first day on a new team, etc. Be sure to begin your responses with “I entered uncharted territory when _____.”

Lesson 4: Writing Informational Texts: Leonardo da Vinci's Ideas and Accomplishments

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will write an informational paragraph about da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments by using reasons and evidence related to the topic. TEKS 5.12.B

REVIEW PARAGRAPH STRUCTURE (10 MIN.)

- Explain to students that they will now use their Informational Paragraph Plans to write a paragraph about Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments. Tell them that before they begin writing, they must first review how strong informational paragraphs are structured. Have students turn to Activity Page SR. 2.
- Explain that an effective informational paragraph does more than present a topic and details about that topic. Rather, there is a central idea, or point, about the topic presented, and the details specifically support the central idea.
- Have students read through Activity Page SR.2 silently.
- Use the following questions to review and discuss the Paragraph about a Paragraph:
  - What is the topic of this paragraph?
    - writing a paragraph
  - What is the central idea?
    - guidelines to help organize a paragraph
  - Can you identify a detail that supports the central idea?
    - Answers may vary, but should come from any of the supporting sentences within the paragraph.

Activity Page SR.2

 TEKS 5.12.B Compose informational texts, including brief compositions that convey information about a topic, using a clear central idea and genre characteristics and craft.

Writing Texts to Explain
Information

Beginning

Provide 1:1 prompting and support for students while drafting their informational paragraphs. Consider providing sentence frames for each sentence in the paragraph.

Intermediate

Have students practice their paragraph orally prior to writing it. Provide a bank of transitional words or phrases to choose from to support organization of the paragraph.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for drafting their informational paragraphs as needed.

ELPS 5.F

Support

Have students dictate an introductory sentence to you and start writing the rest of the paragraph independently after identifying which details from the class list they want to include.

Activity Page 4.1

- How do the details effectively support the central idea?
  - Each detail logically relates to the central idea, because it either states or explains a guideline for organizing a paragraph. In addition, the information is fact-based.
- Why is the concluding sentence effective?
  - It restates the central idea by making a concluding point about why these guidelines create strong writing.
- Tell students they will refer to Activity Page SR.2 as they write their informational paragraphs.

WRITE AN INFORMATIONAL PARAGRAPH (15 MIN.)

- Display the Informational Paragraph Plan and invite students to look back at their own graphic organizers. Explain to students that they will use this plan to help write their paragraphs. Remind students that effective paragraphs clearly state the topic. Ask students where they can find this information on their graphic organizers. Listen for students to notice that they already wrote this in the topic sentence section of their graphic organizers.
- Remind students that their topic sentences will be the first sentence of their paragraphs.
- Remind students that effective paragraphs include details that support the central idea. Ask students where they can find this information on their graphic organizers. Listen for students to notice that they already planned these details in the “Reason,” “Text Evidence,” and “Explanation of Evidence” columns.
- Point out the Precise Vocabulary section of their graphic organizers. Remind students to use the words they collected in this section throughout their paragraphs as necessary.
- Invite students to start drafting their informational paragraphs on Activity Page 4.1.
- Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they work. Prompt students to review their central idea sentence, checking that it makes a point about the topic rather than just stating the topic. Also check for detail sentences that effectively support the central idea.

LESSON WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Have students share their central idea sentence and their favorite supporting sentence. Ask each student who shares to explain why they think the detail sentence effectively supports the central idea.
- Feedback. Provide reinforcing or corrective feedback for introductory sentences providing a central idea and detail sentences effectively supporting the central idea.
- Collect student informational paragraphs to review and monitor student progress. Your written feedback may include comment such as:
  - Your introductory sentence shares an interesting thought about humanism; this main idea makes me want to keep reading.
  - You seem to be using supporting details in your introductory sentence. Look at the supporting details I circled. Together, what do they make you think of? That new idea might be your central idea.

GRAMMAR (20 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students will recognize and correct inappropriate shifts in verb tense. TEKS 5.11.D.i; TEKS 5.11.D.ii

- Review the information on the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Poster with students. Remind students of the following:
  - All plural subjects use the verb form were, as does the singular pronoun you when used as a subject.
  - When he, she, it, or I is the subject, the correct verb form is was.
  - The past tense of the linking verb to feel is felt for all subjects. The past tense of the linking verbs to look, taste, smell, and sound are looked, tasted, smelled, and sounded for all subjects.

TEKS 5.11.D Edit drafts using standard English conventions, including: (i) complete simple and compound sentences with subject-verb agreement and avoidance of splices, run-ons, and fragments; (ii) past tense of irregular verbs.

- Direct students' attention to the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense chart completed in Lesson 2. Review the "Agreement" column with students:

| Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense |              |                                         |

- Have students orally create an expanded and complete sentence, using the example in the chart—he felt.
  - For example, "He felt excited that the class was going to watch a play about the Renaissance."

Note: Students might respond by using the verb to be as a helping verb instead of a linking verb (for example, "I was running to catch the school bus" instead of "I was exhausted after running to catch the school bus."). Accept answers using both functions of the verb to be, making sure that the correct past tense form of the verb is used.

- Have students turn to Activity Page 4.2. Read the directions for each part of the activity page. Review the first completed example in both parts of the activity page.
- Give students 5 minutes to complete the first page independently. Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they complete this page, offering guidance and support as needed. Cold call students to review their answers whole class.
- Explain to students that writers use the appropriate tense in their writing to convey various times, sequences, states, and conditions. If necessary, review verb tenses that have been previously discussed.

- Explain to students that writers typically use a consistent tense. Tell students that as writers, they must be able to recognize and correct inappropriate shifts in tense. Display the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement Practice Paragraph. Explain that this excerpt from their chapter needs some editing because there is not a consistent use of verb tense. Some of these sentences use the appropriate tense, while some do not.
- Ask students to think back to their readers and the verb tense used throughout. Students should notice that it is mostly written in the past tense. Tell students that informative pieces about historical events usually use the past tense.
- Explain to students that they will need to correct the inappropriate shifts in tense for the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement Practice Paragraph. Tell students that they first must identify all of the verbs.
- Read the paragraph aloud to students or invite them to read it to themselves. Read it a second time, sentence by sentence, cold calling students to come to the chart and underline the verbs.
- Explain that now that they have identified the verbs, they next need to go back and correct any inappropriate shifts in verb tense. Model with the first two sentences. Be sure to think aloud about whether the verb tense is appropriate for the meaning the author is trying to convey. Refer to the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Poster and Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense chart when making any corrections.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to reread the third and fourth sentences with a partner and correct any inappropriate shifts in verb tense. Cold call students to share with the whole class. If necessary, remind students that the verbs should reflect the past tense and should make sense with the meaning the author is trying to convey.

- Tell students that they will now edit their informational paragraphs for inappropriate shifts in verb tense. Ask students to turn and talk with a partner, telling each other what they will look for while editing their paragraphs. Listen for students explaining that they will first identify all of the verbs in their paragraphs, and then they will check these verbs to be sure they reflect the past tense and also make sense with the meaning they were trying to convey.

Learning About How English Works
Using Verbs and Verb Phrases

Beginning

Provide 1:1 prompting and support for students as they edit their paragraphs.

Create a checklist of steps to take when editing a paragraph for inappropriate shifts in verb tense.

Intermediate

Allow students to read their paragraph aloud to a partner before editing.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for editing their paragraphs as needed.

ELPS 5.D

- Give students several minutes to independently reread and edit their paragraphs for appropriate verb tense.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and, check in with students as they work. If necessary, prompt students to first find all of the verbs in their paragraphs, then to check that they are written in the past tense. Prompt students to refer to the Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense Poster and Subject-Linking Verb Agreement in the Past Tense chart when making any corrections.

- If students finish early, have them complete the rest of Activity Page 4.2 independently. Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they complete the activity page, offering guidance and support as needed. If more time is needed, have them finish it for homework.
- If students complete Activity Page 4.2 in class, collect it to review and grade at a later time.

MORPHOLOGY (10 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students will use the prefixes im- and in- as clues to determine the meaning of words. TEKS 5.3.C

- Review the definition of prefix: A prefix is a syllable or syllables placed at the beginning of a root word to change the word's meaning.
- Ask students to chorally say what the prefixes im- and in- both mean ("not"). Ask students to chorally say the part of speech of the root words that they are added to (adjectives). Remind students that the prefixes im- and in- do not change the part of speech of the new word; the new word is still an adjective.
- Tell students you will give them two word choices. Then, you will read a sentence and they must decide which word choice the sentence demonstrates.
- Practice with the following example:
  - Patient or impatient? Taya waited quietly for her mother to finish her phone call before asking for more juice.
- Ask students if the sentence relates to the word patient or impatient and why.
  - Patient, because Taya is calm and quiet while waiting for her mother.

TEKS 5.3.C Identify the meaning of and use words with affixes such as trans-, super-, -ive, and -logy and roots such as geo and photo.

- Continue in this manner with the remaining examples below:
  - Correct or incorrect? He rushed through his math test and made many silly mistakes. (incorrect)
  - Mobile or immobile? Despite years of hard work, Leonardo da Vinci could not get his flying machine to actually fly. (immobile)
  - Definite or indefinite? Clara's family's flight to Athens keeps getting delayed; they wonder if their plane will ever take off! (indefinite)
  - Polite or impolite? She made sure to write thank you notes to everyone who gave her a birthday gift. (polite)
  - Complete or incomplete? It took years for Leonardo to finish the painting The Last Supper. (complete)
- In the time remaining, have students think of sentences that correctly use one of the root words or affixed words. The sentences can relate to the text students have read or to their own lives. Call on a few students to share their sentences orally. (Answers may vary.)
- Have students turn to Activity Page 4.3. Briefly review the directions and have students complete it for homework.

ADVANCE PREPARATION

Reading

- Prepare and display the Purpose for Reading/The Big Question. Alternatively, you may access a digital version of this in the digital components for this unit.
- You may wish to make copies and highlight parts for Lorenzo, the assistant, and the narrator for a dramatic reading of the “Story of Michelangelo and Lorenzo de’ Medici,” which is located in the Teacher Resources section of this Teacher Guide. This story could also be used as a fluency selection. Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components of this unit.

Writing

- Display the enlarged version of the Paragraph about a Paragraph from Lesson 3. Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components for this unit.
- You will need space on the board/chart paper to create a list with students to answer the question “What is humanism?” This list of humanism characteristics will be revisited in Lesson 6.
- Prepare and display the writing prompt.
  - After examining Raphael’s The School of Athens closely, write a paragraph in which you describe the painting and explain how it represents aspects of humanism valued during the Renaissance movement. Support your response with evidence from the text.
- Write the Informational Paragraph Plan on the board/chart paper.

Language

- Collect Activity Pages 4.2 (if completed for homework) and 4.3 to review and grade, as there are no grammar or morphology lessons today.

Fluency (optional)

- If students were assigned a selection from the Fluency Supplement, determine which students will read the selection aloud and when.

Universal Access

- Create sentence frames to support students in writing their informational paragraphs. Create a bank of transitional words or phrases to choose from to support organization of the paragraphs.

Chapter 4

Michelangelo and Raphael

THE BIG QUESTION

How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in the artistic achievements of Michelangelo and Raphael?

One day, a group of boys were called to the home of the incredibly important Lorenzo de' Medici. What could a man so rich and powerful, a man people called "the Magnificent," want to tell these boys?

Lorenzo looked at the boys and made an announcement. "You see this stone figure?" he said, pointing to an ancient Roman statue of a nature god called a faun. "A brilliant sculptor created this piece centuries ago. I want each of you to carve a statue exactly like this one."

Some of the boys groaned. Lorenzo paid no attention. "Work quickly and accurately," he said. "The young man who produces the best sculpture wins a place in my art school."

Some time later, as Lorenzo strolled through his courtyard, he spotted one boy whose work looked far superior to the rest. He turned to his assistant and asked, "Who is that child? Look at how he has carved the head of the faun. It's difficult to tell his work from the real thing!"

The assistant checked his list. "Let's see. Michelangelo Buonarroti, second son of a former small-town mayor. Family is from minor nobility. Mother died when the boy was six. Hmm . . . not a very good Latin or Greek scholar. Ran away from school a lot."

"Ran away?"

- Tell students the class will read pages 30 and 31 as a whole group, either as a teacher Read-Aloud or as a student dramatic reading. If you are reading aloud, have students close their eyes and visualize the story of Michelangelo and Lorenzo de' Medici.

- Alternatively, have three students read the story dramatically, using the script located in the Teacher Resources section of this Teacher Guide. Assign one student as Lorenzo de' Medici, one as Lorenzo's assistant, and one as the narrator. Encourage students to read with emotion and expression.
- After reading, note that the italicized text indicates this portion of the text is different from the text in the remainder of the chapter. It is an imagined scene that takes place between Lorenzo de' Medici, a wealthy and important banker who lived during the Renaissance, and his assistant.

“Yes, it seems he sneaked away from school to go to the churches, where he spent hours drawing copies of the paintings.”

“Ah, a true art lover,” said Lorenzo.

“Well, his father isn’t. The father is upset that Michelangelo works as an apprentice in Ghirlandaio’s studio. He thinks he should pursue a different profession.”

Lorenzo walked up to Michelangelo and gazed at the faun’s head the boy had carved. “That’s a lovely sculpture,” Lorenzo commented. Then he said, “Young man, come live in our home and learn what you can from us.”

Lorenzo de’ Medici’s invitation was a great honor, but Michelangelo’s father wasn’t thrilled. His father changed his mind, however, when Lorenzo offered him a job and gave Michelangelo a beautiful cloak and a handsome sum of money.

The Medici family was powerful and influential. They were involved in trade and banking. In the Medici household, Michelangelo discussed art and literature with the finest minds of the time. He studied the old masters in sculpture and painting. His stay with the Medici family launched his career in the art world.

Michelangelo’s

- Have students read the rest of page 31 silently.

Literal. Lorenzo de’ Medici gave Michelangelo a place to stay, a job, clothing, and money. What is the term for someone who supports an artist in this way? Think back to Chapter 1.

» patron

Evaluative. Why might it be important to have such a powerful and influential patron?

» Answers may vary, but should include that such a powerful and influential patron could provide many opportunities for an artist.

Michelangelo Made It—and Don't You Forget It!

On a stormy night in 1492 CE, Lorenzo de' Medici died. The sudden loss shocked the people of Florence. Michelangelo, in particular, lost a friend and a patron, a man who had recognized the young artist's genius and supported him in his efforts. Reluctantly, Michelangelo left his beloved city.

After some years of moving here and there, Michelangelo went to Rome. In Rome, a church official who had heard about the young sculptor's work offered him a job. He told Michelangelo to create something spectacular so that people would remember him (the church official) when he was gone.

Twenty-four-year-old Michelangelo got to work immediately. In less than 12 months, he carved the stunningly beautiful Pietà. The sculpture shows Mary, the mother of Jesus, holding her son across her lap just after He was removed from the cross.

The Pietà was placed in the great church of the Vatican in Rome, St. Peter's Basilica. Once, when Michelangelo went to St. Peter's to look at his creation, a group of visitors stood in front of it trying to guess who carved the amazing work. No one guessed Michelangelo.

That didn't make Michelangelo happy. Later, in the middle of the night, he returned to the Basilica with hammer and chisel in hand. So there would be no question in the future, he carved his name on the sash that runs diagonally across Mary. As far as anyone knows, this is the only piece of art Michelangelo ever signed.

| Pietà   | /pee*ae*tə/ |

- Have students silently read page 32.

Inferential. What does the heading on this page refer to?

- » The heading on this page refers to the story of how Michelangelo's famous Pietà was mistakenly thought to have been made by another artist. The story goes that Michelangelo chiseled his name on his sculpture in the middle of the night so no one would forget that he was the creator of the famous piece.

From the Giant Comes the Giant Slayer

The Pietà made Michelangelo the most famous sculptor in Italy. In 1501 CE, he returned to Florence. There, officials of the cathedral showed Michelangelo a huge rectangular block of marble known as “the Giant.” They showed him where another artist had begun to work on the huge block but then made a mess of it. The officials challenged Michelangelo: “Can you make something out of this?” they asked. Michelangelo accepted the challenge.

Michelangelo's David, 1504 CE

Michelangelo even carved the veins in the human hand. Imagine carving veins out of marble!

34

- Have students read page 34 and the first two paragraphs on page 35 silently.

From the 20-foot block, he set out to carve a huge statue of David, the biblical hero who had used his slingshot to slay the giant enemy, Goliath.

Church Patronage: Julius II and Michelangelo

Pope Julius II was a man of great ambition, determination, and energy. When his mind was made up, you wouldn't want to be in his way. And he had a terrible temper. In other words, he was a lot like Michelangelo. So when these two powerful personalities came together, sparks were bound to fly.

Julius asked Michelangelo to come to Rome to construct a colossal tomb for him that would be built under the dome of St. Peter's Basilica. Julius was not modest—he wanted to be sure people remembered him.

Michelangelo agreed and set to work hauling in tons of stone from the cliffs of Carrara, where he spent his childhood. After great labor and expense, Michelangelo filled St. Peter's square with blocks of marble.

But then Julius gave an order to stop work on this expensive project. He also refused to pay Michelangelo. An angry Michelangelo packed his bags and headed back to Florence. An even angrier Julius sent a messenger to demand that Michelangelo return to Rome. Michelangelo told the messenger he would return when the pope paid what he owed him and stuck to his promises.

Did the pope apologize and pay Michelangelo, and did everyone live happily ever after? Definitely not! Julius sent furious commands to the leaders of Florence: "Send Michelangelo back to Rome," he said, "or I will send my armies to get him." A Florentine leader, who was also a friend of Michelangelo, suggested he return to Rome. After all, he told the angry artist, Florence did not wish to go to war for Michelangelo's sake!

Inferential. In an earlier chapter, we discussed Donatello's sculpture of St. George, who was famous for slaying a dragon and saving the daughter of the king. What do you think the phrase giant slayer in the heading means? Identify the giant(s).

» Giant slayer means "one who kills a giant." There are two giants in this section: the huge block of marble known as "the Giant" and the Giant that David defeats in the biblical story.

- Have students silently read the rest of page 35.

Painting the Sistine Ceiling

It took months, but eventually Michelangelo did go back to Rome. When he arrived, the pope had a job waiting for him. The pope had decided that the tomb could wait. Instead, he wanted Michelangelo to paint the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

Michelangelo refused: “I am a sculptor, not a painter,” he told the pope. And the ceiling itself was immense—a huge, high, curved surface covering more than 5,800 square feet (about twice as big as a tennis court).

Michelangelo urged the pope to give the job to someone else, but the pope insisted. Michelangelo reluctantly agreed.

Years before, when he worked as an apprentice, Michelangelo had learned the technique of fresco painting. In fresco painting, the artist applies a coat of wet plaster to a surface, then paints on the plaster. As the paint and plaster dry together, the painting will become a permanent part of the wall, or in this case, the ceiling.

Michelangelo prepared to start the monumental task of painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. From the beginning, he and the pope disagreed.

In the Sistine Chapel, Botticelli's art is on the walls, and Michelangelo's is on the ceiling.

- Have students read pages 36 and 37 silently.

Julius wanted the ceiling to portray the twelve apostles. Michelangelo wanted to paint scenes from the Old Testament, from the biblical story of creation to the story of Moses.

At first, Michelangelo got help from several Florentine painters. One by one he sent them away. He was a perfectionist, and no one could meet his standards but himself.

So he had to complete the grueling work on his own. From a scaffold high above the floor, Michelangelo had to bend and reach to paint the ceiling above his head. His neck and back ached terribly; his eyes grew strained.

Pope Julius didn't make life any easier. He constantly urged Michelangelo to hurry.

Finally, in October 1512 CE, after almost four and a half years of work, Michelangelo completed the ceiling. Great crowds hurried to the Vatican. They gazed in wonder at the ceiling.

Just four months later, Pope Julius II died. The pope never did get his colossal tomb in St. Peter's.

Inferential. What does the word reluctantly mean?

- » unwillingly or unenthusiastically

Inferential. What factors made painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel a difficult task?

- » Michelangelo was a perfectionist and did the work all by himself. He needed to use a scaffold to reach the ceiling. In addition, the ceiling was huge, high, and curved, making it difficult to paint.

Support

A perfectionist is a person who stops at nothing to make sure their work has no flaws or mistakes.

The Great Raphael

Raphael was another talented artist of the period. He was born Raffaello Sanzio in 1483 CE. He was younger than both Leonardo and Michelangelo. Raphael lost both of his parents at an early age. By 11, he was on his own, working as an apprentice in a busy art studio.

In 1504 CE, when Raphael was 21, he moved to Florence where Michelangelo and Leonardo were already living. There, he studied the techniques of the older artists and learned to use them in his own paintings.

Remember, in those days artists supported themselves by getting commissions from patrons. The wealthy people of Florence were eager to own beautiful paintings. By the time Raphael arrived, both Leonardo and Michelangelo were not painting as much. As he aged, Leonardo grew more interested in math and science and was reluctant to paint at all. Michelangelo's energies were consumed by big projects assigned to him by the pope. So, young Raphael had many people ready to pay him to paint.

While in Florence, Raphael created at least 17 paintings of the Madonna, or mother of Jesus, and the Holy Family for various individuals. If you look at one of Raphael's Madonnas and compare it to a Madonna painted during the Middle Ages, you will see how people's view of the world changed in the Renaissance.

In the medieval image, the Madonna looks a little stiff. But the painting wasn't intended to be lifelike—its main purpose was to express religious devotion.

However, Raphael's painting is different. He presents natural human figures that are so lifelike, it is as if they could step out from the painting.

- » The other great painters of the time were growing old and developing interests in other fields.

Raphael in Rome

In 1508 CE Raphael was called to Rome by Pope Julius II. While Michelangelo was painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, Raphael was put in charge of painting a series of rooms in the Vatican.

In one room he painted a fresco, or mural, that has become very famous. It is called The School of Athens. The composition of the painting shows how Raphael was a great master of perspective, while the subject matter shows how much the Renaissance movement admired the ancient Greeks. Raphael painted many scholars and philosophers—some are reading, some are discussing big ideas. In the center of the painting, Raphael placed the great philosophers, Plato and Aristotle.

After Raphael's patron, Pope Julius II, died, Raphael became a special favorite of Pope Leo X. Leo put Raphael in charge of the work on St. Peter's Basilica. In addition, Raphael directed the efforts to dig up and study ancient buildings and statues in Rome.

Raphael led a productive life. The artist died on his thirty-seventh birthday. Part of the epitaph on his tomb in Rome reads, "While he lived he made Mother Nature fear to be vanquished by him."

- Have students silently read page 41.

Literal. Describe Raphael's famous mural The School of Athens.

- » The painting is of Greek scholars and philosophers reading and discussing big ideas.

and Raphael's Artistic Achievements

Writing

Primary Focus: Students draft an informational paragraph about Raphael's artistic achievements by identifying a topic and using related reasons and evidence. TEKS 5.11.A; TEKS 5.12.B

PLAN AN INFORMATIONAL PARAGRAPH (15 MIN.)

- Remind students of the informational paragraph they planned and wrote in Lessons 3 and 4 about Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments. Share that they will write another informational paragraph about a piece of art they have seen in the Reader—The School of Athens, by Raphael.
- Review how to compose an effective informational paragraph by reviewing the Paragraph about a Paragraph.
- Have students refer to Activity Page SR.2.
- Ask students to describe the difference is between the topic and central idea.
  - » The topic is what the writing is about. The central idea is a point the writer makes about the topic.
- Ask what makes supporting details effective.
  - » Supporting details are effective when they logically relate to the central idea and present information that is fact-based and hard to disagree with.
- Ask what makes a concluding sentence effective.
  - » It restates the central idea by making a concluding point about it.
- Remind students that they will focus on a piece of writing by selecting one specific moment, object, or idea and then use precise details to write about it.
- Direct students' attention to the displayed informational paragraph prompt and cold call on a student to read it aloud:
  - After examining Raphael's The School of Athens closely, write a paragraph in which you describe the painting and explain how it represents aspects of humanism valued during the Renaissance movement. Support your response with evidence from the text.
- Ask students to repeat what the focus of the informational paragraph will be.
  - » Raphael's The School of Athens and how it represents aspects of humanism

Activity Page SR.2.

TEKS 5.11.A Plan a first draft by selecting a genre for a particular topic, purpose, and audience using a range of strategies such as brainstorming, freewriting, and mapping; TEKS 5.12.B Compose informational texts, including brief compositions that convey information about a topic, using a clear central idea and genre characteristics and craft.

- Ask students to recall aspects of humanism, creating a list answering the question “What is humanism?” If necessary, refer to pages 6 and 7 of the Reader to help students identify information for the list.
- Student responses should be similar to the following:
  - What is humanism?
    - admiration of “classical values and teachings of ancient Greece and Rome”
    - desirability of books and other written material
    - interest in literature, art, government, philosophy, science
    - fascination with “a greater understanding of the world at large”
    - pursuit of discovery
    - respect for “the power and unique talents of the individual”
    - emphasis on realistic representation of the human form and portrayal of human emotion
- Display the Informational Paragraph Plan and explain to students that they will record their plan for their paragraphs using this graphic organizer, just as they did in Lesson 3. On a new, clean page of their writing journals or on loose-leaf paper, invite students to create the graphic organizer, leaving space to add in their own notes.

ADVANCE PREPARATION

Reading

- Display the list of humanism characteristics from Lesson 3. Alternatively, you may access a digital version of this and The Big Question in the digital components for this unit.
- Divide the class into two groups using the following guidelines:
  - Small Group 1: This group should include students who need extra scaffolding and support to read and comprehend the text. Use the guided reading supports to guide students through reading the text. This is an excellent time to make notes in your anecdotal records. Students will complete Activity Page 6.1 with your support after reading.
  - Small Group 2: This group should include students who are capable of reading and comprehending text without guided support. These students may work as a small group, as partners, or independently to read the chapter, discuss it with others in Small Group 2, and then complete Activity Page 6.1. Make arrangements to check that students in Small Group 2 have answered the question on Activity Page 6.1 correctly.

Grammar

- Prepare and display an enlarged version of the Prepositional Phrases Poster on the board/chart paper. Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components for this unit. This poster will be used in subsequent lessons.

REVIEW THE CHAPTER (10 MIN.)

- Remind students that they wrote a paragraph about humanism in a previous lesson. Post the list of humanism characteristics generated in Lesson 5. Tell students this list contains good examples of characteristics of the Renaissance movement. Review each bullet point.

What is humanism?

- desirability of books and other written material
- interest in literature, art, government, philosophy, science
- fascination with “a greater understanding of the world at large”
- pursuit of discovery
- respect for “the power and unique talents of the individual”
- emphasis on realistic representation of the human form and portrayal of human emotion

Check for Understanding

Chapter 4

Michelangelo and Raphael

THE BIG QUESTION

How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in the artistic achievements of Michelangelo and Raphael?

One day, a group of boys were called to the home of the incredibly important Lorenzo de' Medici. What could a man so rich and powerful, a man people called "the Magnificent," want to tell these boys?

Lorenzo looked at the boys and made an announcement. "You see this stone figure?" he said, pointing to an ancient Roman statue of a nature god called a faun. "A brilliant sculptor created this piece centuries ago. I want each of you to carve a statue exactly like this one."

Some of the boys groaned. Lorenzo paid no attention. "Work quickly and accurately," he said. "The young man who produces the best sculpture wins a place in my art school."

Some time later, as Lorenzo strolled through his courtyard, he spotted one boy whose work looked far superior to the rest. He turned to his assistant and asked, "Who is that child? Look at how he has carved the head of the faun. It's difficult to tell his work from the real thing!"

The assistant checked his list. "Let's see. Michelangelo Buonarroti, second son of a former small-town mayor. Family is from minor nobility. Mother died when the boy was six. Hmm . . . not a very good Latin or Greek scholar. Ran away from school a lot."

"Ran away?"

| Buonarroti          | /bwoe*naer*oe*tee/ |
| Ghirlandaio         | /geer*lan*die*oe/  |

- Have students silently read pages 30 and 31.

“Yes, it seems he sneaked away from school to go to the churches, where he spent hours drawing copies of the paintings.”

“Ah, a true art lover,” said Lorenzo.

“Well, his father isn’t. The father is upset that Michelangelo works as an apprentice in Ghirlandai’s studio. He thinks he should pursue a different profession.”

Lorenzo walked up to Michelangelo and gazed at the faun’s head the boy had carved. “That’s a lovely sculpture,” Lorenzo commented. Then he said, “Young man, come live in our home and learn what you can from us.”

Lorenzo de’ Medici’s invitation was a great honor, but Michelangelo’s father wasn’t thrilled. His father changed his mind, however, when Lorenzo offered him a job and gave Michelangelo a beautiful cloak and a handsome sum of money.

The Medici family was powerful and influential. They were involved in trade and banking. In the Medici household, Michelangelo discussed art and literature with the finest minds of the time. He studied the old masters in sculpture and painting. His stay with the Medici family launched his career in the art world.

Michelangelo’s

Evaluative. Lorenzo asks the boys to carve a statue exactly like an ancient Roman statue of a faun. How is this task characteristic of the Renaissance movement?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that during the time of the Renaissance movement, people showed admiration for ancient Greek and Roman culture and art. By asking the boys to replicate an ancient Roman statue, Lorenzo is emphasizing the importance of knowledge of ancient Roman art.
- Have students take the following note on Activity Page 6.1.
  - admiration for ancient Greek and Roman works

Support

A handsome sum of money refers to an impressive amount of money.

Support

The phrase old masters refers to artists of skill recognized for their talent and precision. Michelangelo would have studied the famous artists, or masters, who came before him.

Evaluative. How is Michelangelo's relationship with the Medici family typical of the Renaissance?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that during the Renaissance, the increasing wealth and literacy of the middle class created patronage, a system in which people with money supported artists and scholars. This support won patrons an impressive collection of art and the admiration of others.

Inferential. What did Michelangelo's relationship with the Medici family allow him to do?

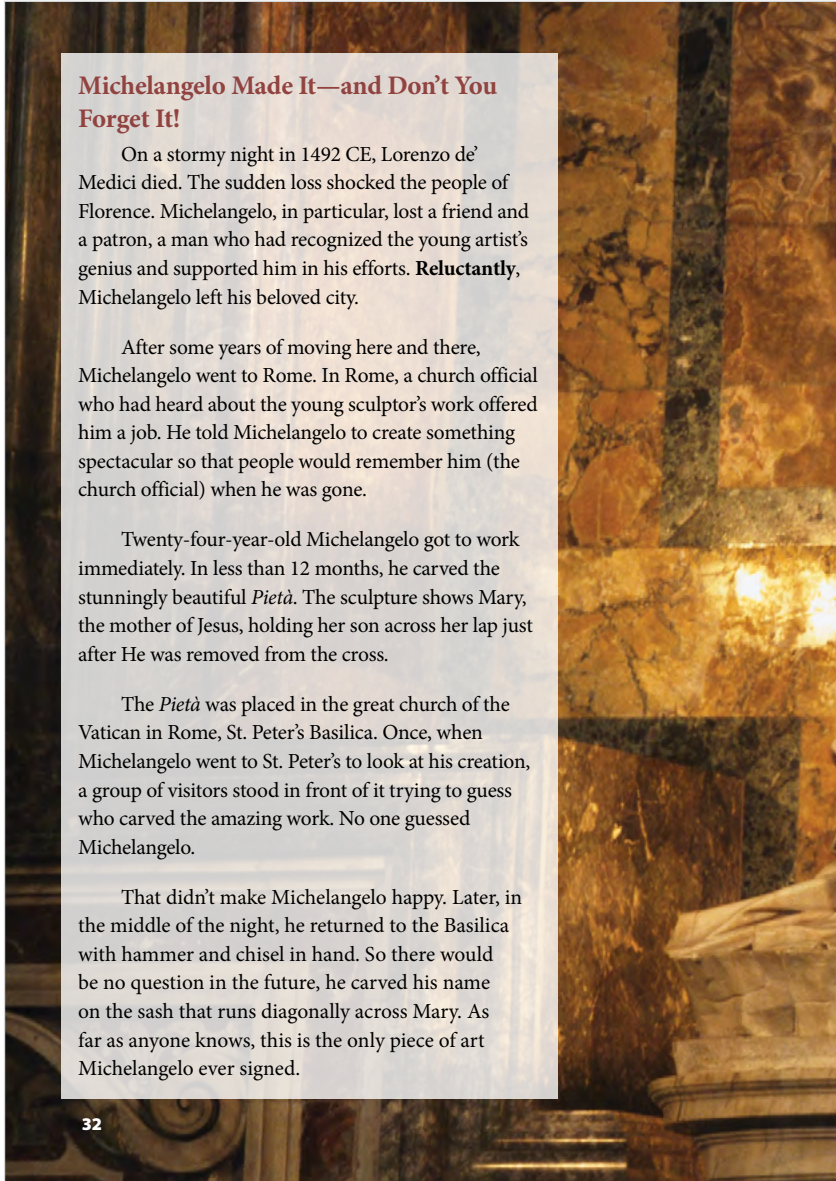

- » Michelangelo's relationship with the Medici family allowed him to discuss art and literature with the finest minds of the time, study the old masters in sculpture and painting, and launch his career in the art world.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to make notes on Activity Page 6.1 explaining how Michelangelo's relationship with the Medici family was typical of the Renaissance. If necessary, direct students back to specific parts of the text.

- » patronage from wealthy merchants

Michelangelo Made It—and Don't You Forget It!

On a stormy night in 1492 CE, Lorenzo de' Medici died. The sudden loss shocked the people of Florence. Michelangelo, in particular, lost a friend and a patron, a man who had recognized the young artist's genius and supported him in his efforts. Reluctantly, Michelangelo left his beloved city.

After some years of moving here and there, Michelangelo went to Rome. In Rome, a church official who had heard about the young sculptor's work offered him a job. He told Michelangelo to create something spectacular so that people would remember him (the church official) when he was gone.

Twenty-four-year-old Michelangelo got to work immediately. In less than 12 months, he carved the stunningly beautiful Pietà. The sculpture shows Mary, the mother of Jesus, holding her son across her lap just after He was removed from the cross.

The Pietà was placed in the great church of the Vatican in Rome, St. Peter's Basilica. Once, when Michelangelo went to St. Peter's to look at his creation, a group of visitors stood in front of it trying to guess who carved the amazing work. No one guessed Michelangelo.

That didn't make Michelangelo happy. Later, in the middle of the night, he returned to the Basilica with hammer and chisel in hand. So there would be no question in the future, he carved his name on the sash that runs diagonally across Mary. As far as anyone knows, this is the only piece of art Michelangelo ever signed.

| Pietà               | /pee*ae*tə/ |

- Have students silently read page 32.
Inferential. Why did Michelangelo leave Florence after Lorenzo died?
  - » Michelangelo left Florence because he no longer had the financial support of his patron. He would have to find a new patron and financial support elsewhere.

Evaluative. What does Michelangelo's leaving Florence tell you about the lives of artists during the Renaissance?

- » Artists needed their patrons' money and support. When that support went away, artists had to pick up and move on in search of another patron.

Michelangelo's Pietà, 1499 CE

From the Giant Comes the Giant Slayer

The Pietà made Michelangelo the most famous sculptor in Italy. In 1501 CE, he returned to Florence. There, officials of the cathedral showed Michelangelo a huge rectangular block of marble known as “the Giant.” They showed him where another artist had begun to work on the huge block but then made a mess of it. The officials challenged Michelangelo: “Can you make something out of this?” they asked.

Michelangelo accepted the challenge.

Michelangelo's David, 1504 CE

Michelangelo even carved the veins in the human hand. Imagine carving veins out of marble!

34

From the 20-foot block, he set out to carve a huge statue of David, the biblical hero who had used his slingshot to slay the giant enemy, Goliath.

Church Patronage: Julius II and Michelangelo

Pope Julius II was a man of great ambition, determination, and energy. When his mind was made up, you wouldn't want to be in his way. And he had a terrible temper. In other words, he was a lot like Michelangelo. So when these two powerful personalities came together, sparks were bound to fly.

Julius asked Michelangelo to come to Rome to construct a colossal tomb for him that would be built under the dome of St. Peter's Basilica. Julius was not modest—he wanted to be sure people remembered him.

Michelangelo agreed and set to work hauling in tons of stone from the cliffs of Carrara, where he spent his childhood. After great labor and expense, Michelangelo filled St. Peter's square with blocks of marble.

But then Julius gave an order to stop work on this expensive project. He also refused to pay Michelangelo. An angry Michelangelo packed his bags and headed back to Florence. An even angrier Julius sent a messenger to demand that Michelangelo return to Rome. Michelangelo told the messenger he would return when the pope paid what he owed him and stuck to his promises.

Did the pope apologize and pay Michelangelo, and did everyone live happily ever after? Definitely not! Julius sent furious commands to the leaders of Florence: "Send Michelangelo back to Rome," he said, "or I will send my armies to get him." A Florentine leader, who was also a friend of Michelangelo, suggested he return to Rome. After all, he told the angry artist, Florence did not wish to go to war for Michelangelo's sake!

Evaluative. The text says, "Like ancient Greek statues, Michelangelo's David shows a strong, muscular human form, almost a picture of perfection, a figure full of power and grace." Which characteristics of this sculpture mirror characteristics of the Renaissance?

- » Michelangelo's sculpture of David shows Renaissance characteristics in the perfect muscular form influenced by ancient Greek and Roman sculpture and the powerful stance and determined gaze of David.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to make notes on Activity Page 6.1 explaining how Michelangelo's sculpture David shows Renaissance characteristics. If necessary, direct students back to specific parts of the text.

Painting the Sistine Ceiling

It took months, but eventually Michelangelo did go back to Rome. When he arrived, the pope had a job waiting for him. The pope had decided that the tomb could wait. Instead, he wanted Michelangelo to paint the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

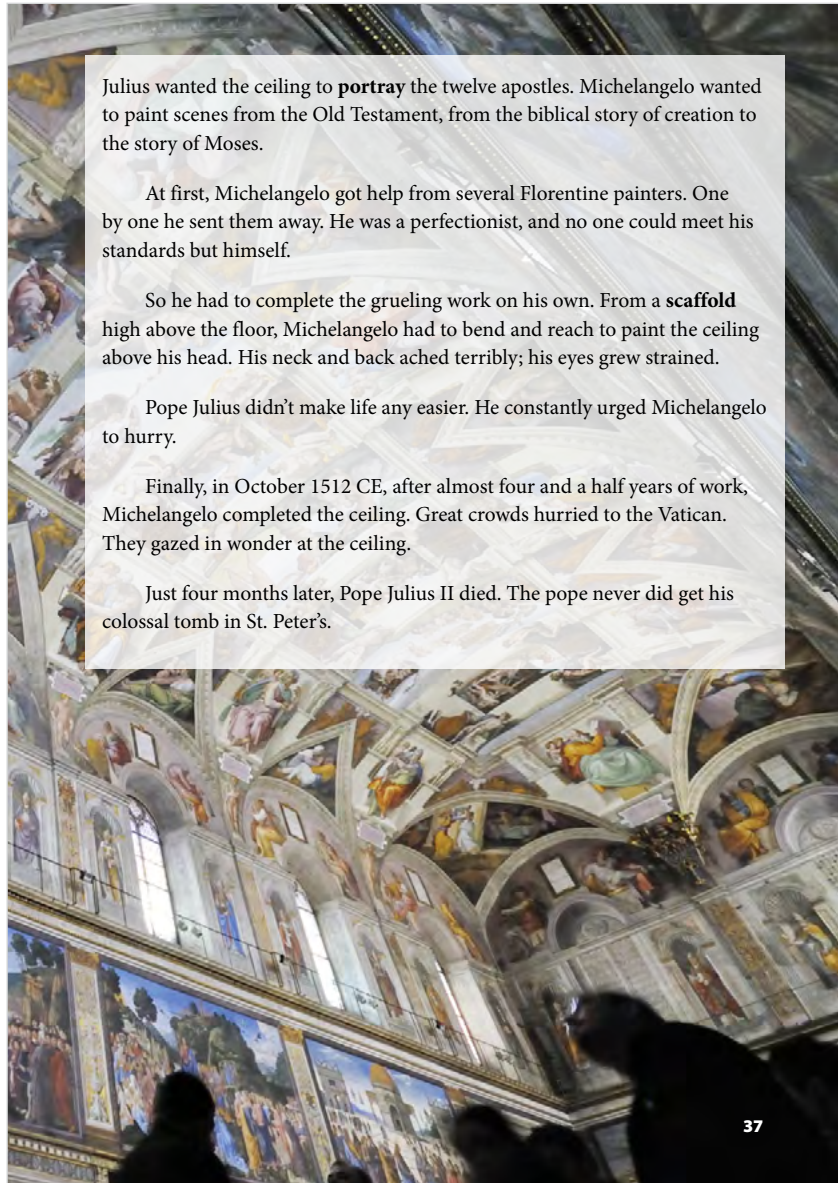

Michelangelo refused: "I am a sculptor, not a painter," he told the pope. And the ceiling itself was immense—a huge, high, curved surface covering more than 5,800 square feet (about twice as big as a tennis court).

Michelangelo urged the pope to give the job to someone else, but the pope insisted. Michelangelo reluctantly agreed.

Years before, when he worked as an apprentice, Michelangelo had learned the technique of fresco painting. In fresco painting, the artist applies a coat of wet plaster to a surface, then paints on the plaster. As the paint and plaster dry together, the painting will become a permanent part of the wall, or in this case, the ceiling.

Michelangelo prepared to start the monumental task of painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. From the beginning, he and the pope disagreed.

In the Sistine Chapel, Botticelli's art is on the walls, and Michelangelo's is on the ceiling.

Julius wanted the ceiling to portray the twelve apostles. Michelangelo wanted to paint scenes from the Old Testament, from the biblical story of creation to the story of Moses.

At first, Michelangelo got help from several Florentine painters. One by one he sent them away. He was a perfectionist, and no one could meet his standards but himself.

So he had to complete the grueling work on his own. From a scaffold high above the floor, Michelangelo had to bend and reach to paint the ceiling above his head. His neck and back ached terribly; his eyes grew strained.

Pope Julius didn't make life any easier. He constantly urged Michelangelo to hurry.

Finally, in October 1512 CE, after almost four and a half years of work, Michelangelo completed the ceiling. Great crowds hurried to the Vatican. They gazed in wonder at the ceiling.

Just four months later, Pope Julius II died. The pope never did get his colossal tomb in St. Peter's.

- Have students silently read pages 36 and 37.

Evaluative. How does Michelangelo's painting of the Sistine Chapel ceiling illustrate the quote, "Man is capable of anything he sets his mind to"?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that Michelangelo overcame many obstacles to complete the painting of the Sistine Chapel ceiling: he saw himself as a sculptor, not a painter; he decided to complete the work without help; the ceiling was very large; the work was quite grueling and physically demanding.

The Great Raphael

Raphael was another talented artist of the period. He was born Raffaello Sanzio in 1483 CE. He was younger than both Leonardo and Michelangelo. Raphael lost both of his parents at an early age. By 11, he was on his own, working as an apprentice in a busy art studio.

In 1504 CE, when Raphael was 21, he moved to Florence where Michelangelo and Leonardo were already living. There, he studied the techniques of the older artists and learned to use them in his own paintings.

Remember, in those days artists supported themselves by getting commissions from patrons. The wealthy people of Florence were eager to own beautiful paintings. By the time Raphael arrived, both Leonardo and Michelangelo were not painting as much. As he aged, Leonardo grew more interested in math and science and was reluctant to paint at all. Michelangelo's energies were consumed by big projects assigned to him by the pope. So, young Raphael had many people ready to pay him to paint.

While in Florence, Raphael created at least 17 paintings of the Madonna, or mother of Jesus, and the Holy Family for various individuals. If you look at one of Raphael's Madonnas and compare it to a Madonna painted during the Middle Ages, you will see how people's view of the world changed in the Renaissance.

In the medieval image, the Madonna looks a little stiff. But the painting wasn't intended to be lifelike—its main purpose was to express religious devotion.

However, Raphael's painting is different. He presents natural human figures that are so lifelike, it is as if they could step out from the painting.

Raphael in Rome

In 1508 CE Raphael was called to Rome by Pope Julius II. While Michelangelo was painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, Raphael was put in charge of painting a series of rooms in the Vatican.

In one room he painted a fresco, or mural, that has become very famous. It is called The School of Athens. The composition of the painting shows how Raphael was a great master of perspective, while the subject matter shows how much the Renaissance movement admired the ancient Greeks. Raphael painted many scholars and philosophers—some are reading, some are discussing big ideas. In the center of the painting, Raphael placed the great philosophers, Plato and Aristotle.

After Raphael's patron, Pope Julius II, died, Raphael became a special favorite of Pope Leo X. Leo put Raphael in charge of the work on St. Peter's Basilica. In addition, Raphael directed the efforts to dig up and study ancient buildings and statues in Rome.

Raphael led a productive life. The artist died on his thirty-seventh birthday. Part of the epitaph on his tomb in Rome reads, "While he lived he made Mother Nature fear to be vanquished by him."

- Have students silently read page 41.

Inferential. Have students review their description of The School of Athens on Activity Page 5.2. What characteristics of The School of Athens make it a great representation of Renaissance art?

- » The painting uses perspective and includes images of important people—scholars and philosophers—from ancient Greece.

GRAMMAR (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students identify and explain the function of prepositions and prepositional phrases in sentences. TEKS 5.11.D.vi

- Tell students that today they will learn about a part of speech called a preposition.
- Tell students that a preposition shows the relationship between a noun or a pronoun and another word or phrase in a sentence.

TEKS 5.11.D.vi Edit drafts using standard English conventions, including prepositions and prepositional phrases and their influence on subject-verb agreement.

- A preposition gives more information about where something happens (place), when something happens (time), or who or what the subject or object of the sentence is with (partner).
- A preposition often answers the questions “Where?” or “When?” or “With whom?”
- Hold up a pencil and a book and tell students you will use these items to help them understand prepositions that tell about place or location.
- Hold the pencil above the book and ask students, “Where is the pencil?” Tell students that the preposition describing the location of the pencil is above.
- Place the pencil below the book. Ask students to tell you the preposition describing the location of the pencil.
  - » below
- Place the pencil inside the book and ask students to tell you the preposition describing the location of the pencil.
  - » inside
- Ask students if they can think of other prepositions for place or location and record their answers on the board.
  - Answers may vary, but should include: on, in, at, behind, in front of, under, over, below, above, beside, next to, between, etc.
- Tell students that prepositions are often used in prepositional phrases. A phrase is made up of two or more words. A prepositional phrase contains a preposition and other words that may include an article (a, an, the) and a noun (dog, basketball). There may also be a possessive noun or pronoun (Jake’s, my), adjectives (red, hairy), and adverbs (quickly, extremely).
- Refer to the Prepositional Phrases Poster. Point out the column labeled “Function.”

➤ Prepositional Phrases Poster

- Tell students that prepositional phrases give information about place, or where something happens (at the elementary school), or about the location of an object (in his messy backpack).
- Help students to point out the prepositions and other parts of speech on the poster.
  - For example, in the first row, at is the preposition followed by an article (the), an adjective (elementary), and a noun (school).

Note: For this lesson, you will focus on prepositions for place. Prepositions for time and partner will be covered in Lesson 9.

| Function | Prepositional Phrases           |
|----------|---------------------------------|
| Place    | at the elementary school        |
|          | in his messy backpack           |

- Have students turn to Activity Page 6.2. Read the directions and review the example with them.

Check for Understanding

Guide students through the first sentence, making sure they are able to identify the correct preposition (in) and the prepositional phrase (a busy area downtown) by circling the preposition and by underlining the prepositional phrase. If necessary, remind students that a preposition often answers the questions “Where?” or “When?” or “With whom?”

- Have students complete Activity Page 6.2 for homework, or if you feel they need more assistance, complete it as a teacher-guided activity.

MORPHOLOGY (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students accurately read multisyllabic words with the prefix ex- out of context. TEKS 5.2.A.iv; TEKS 5.3.C

- Point to the Prefixes Poster on display in the classroom and read it.
- Post the words exhale and exit. Briefly discuss the meaning of each word and then use them each in a sentence.
- Have students provide sentences using each word. (Answers may vary.)
- Tell students the prefix they will study this week is ex-. Explain that ex- means “away” or “out.”

Check for Understanding

Have students turn and talk, using the words exhale and exit to discuss what they think ex- means. Cold call on a student to share with the class. Listen for students to explain that these prefixes mean “away” or “out.” If necessary, remind students of the meaning of each word and prompt them to think about the similarities between these meanings.

- Write the prefix ex- on the poster and point out that it is pronounced /ex/. Write the meaning of the prefix on the poster (“away” or “out”).
- Explain that adding the prefix ex- does not change the part of speech of the root word and that ex- can be added to root words of any part of speech.
- Write on the board/chart paper. With the meaning of ex- in mind, ask students to discuss the possible meaning of exhale.
- Briefly review the meaning of the word and then use it in a sentence. (Exhale means to breathe out. “I didn’t realize I had been holding my breath until I finally exhaled.”)
- Continue in this manner for the remaining ex- words, using the following chart as a guide.

Note: You will not write the information in the shaded columns on the board/chart paper as that information is intended for use during oral instruction. Complete as many examples as time permits.

TEKS 5.2.A.iv Demonstrate and apply phonetic knowledge by decoding words using advanced knowledge of the influence of prefixes and suffixes on base words; TEKS 5.3.C Identify the meaning of and use words with affixes such as trans-, super-, -ive, and -logy and roots such as geo and photo.

| Affixed Word | Meaning  | Sentence   |
|--------------|--|--|
| exhale       | (verb) to breathe out  | Whenever I feel worried, I just slowly inhale and exhale 10 times because it helps me calm down.            |
| excavate     | (verb) to uncover something by digging it out and removing dirt that covers it | My aunt excavates sites to find evidence of dinosaurs.  |
| exclude      | (verb) to leave something out  | The teacher reminded students not to exclude important information from their paragraph.                    |
| export       | (verb) to send a product out of country to be sold in another country          | Brazil exports many products to the United States.  |
| expel        | (verb) to force something out  | My cousin was expelled from the movie theater for talking loudly on his cell phone during a movie.          |
| extract      | (verb) to remove something by pulling it out                                   | We extracted the seeds from the lemon slices before making lemonade.  |
| exit         | (noun; verb) a way out of a place; to go out of a place                        | Whenever I board an airplane, I always double-check where the emergency exits are.                          |
| exterior     | (noun) outside; an outer part or surface                                       | We had to use a special paint to coat the exterior of our house to withstand the hot sun and thunderstorms. |

- Have students begin Activity Page 6.3. If they do not have time to complete it, have them finish it for homework.
- As students are working, check in with each student to informally assess their ability to read multisyllabic words with the prefix ex-. Point to a word on their chart and ask them to read the word to you. Make note of students who struggle with this task and check in with them prior to Lesson 9, when these prefixes will be revisited.

Activity Page 6.3

SPELLING (15 MIN.)

 Primary Focus: Students spell grade-appropriate words correctly. TEKS 5.2.B.iii

- Explain that students will practice ten words related to the content of the Reader, Patrons, Artists, and Scholars. These words do not follow one single spelling pattern. Tell students they will be assessed on these words and will write a dictated sentence including one or more of these words in Lesson 10.
- Introduce the words by writing them on the board/chart paper. First say the word aloud, and then sound out each syllable, naming each letter aloud as you write it. Continue syllable by syllable until the word is spelled correctly. You may wish to use the pronunciation chart to guide students in saying the words.

Note: Remember to point out specific spelling patterns in each word and their relationship to the sounds and spellings on the Individual Code Chart.

- |                |               |
|----------------|---------------|
| 1. achievement | 6. invention  |
| 2. architect   | 7. literature |
| 3. create      | 8. movement   |
| 4. culture     | 9. rebirth    |
| 5. imagine     | 10. sculptor  |

Pronunciation/Syllabication Chart

- As you introduce and write each word, it may be helpful if you point out particular spelling patterns within each word and show students where these spellings are reflected on the Individual Code Chart. For example, you might note that the word sculptor includes a less common spelling for /er/ in the second syllable of the word (i.e., the second syllable is pronounced /ter/, but spelled 'tor') and then point out the 'or' spelling for /er/ that is included on the Individual Code Chart located in the Activity Book (Activity Page SR.3) and in the Teacher Resources section of the Unit 1 Teacher Guide.

 TEKS 5.2.B.iii Demonstrate and apply spelling knowledge by spelling multisyllabic words with multiple sound-spelling patterns.

| sculptor    | /skəlp*ter/          | ə*r-controlled                     |

- After writing and pronouncing the words, use the following chart to define each word and provide an example of how to use it in a sentence.

| Spelling Word | Definition   | Example Sentence  |

Chapter 5

The Bankers Who Loved Art

THE BIG QUESTION

What motivated Renaissance patrons to commission so much art?

The Medici family of Florence was incredibly wealthy. You have already heard some stories about Lorenzo de' Medici and the artists he supported. Let's first learn more about Lorenzo's grandfather, Cosimo, who really established the family as patrons of great art.

By the mid-1400s, Cosimo de' Medici had built a thriving international banking business, taking advantage of the success of Italian merchants trading goods with other countries. Bankers would charge fees to exchange foreign money for local money and to provide loans to customers. He and his family made the city of Florence the banking center of Europe.

Cosimo de' Medici

Like his ancestors, Cosimo was a shrewd businessman. However, something else also captured his interest.

Cosimo had grown up surrounded by the ruins of the Roman Empire. As a child, he had looked at the crumbling buildings and wondered: 'Who were these Romans? What can I learn from them?'

As an adult, Cosimo collected rare books and manuscripts. He hired scribes to copy and translate them. He made sure his own children read great works by the Roman poet Virgil and the Greek philosopher Plato. He built libraries.

- Read page 42 aloud.

Literal. How did the Medici family's involvement in banking allow them to become wealthy?

- » Increased trade between countries allowed bankers, such as the Medici family, to charge fees to exchange types of money and provide loans to customers.

Support. Different countries have different currencies, or forms of money. In order to do business in a country, you must use the particular currency, or type of money, from that country. We use dollars as our currency in the United States. What types of currency are used in other countries?

- » Answers may vary, but may include the peso in Mexico, the quetzal in Guatemala, the lempira in Honduras, the pound in England, the euro in many European countries, the yen in Japan, etc.

Literal. What things did Cosimo de' Medici do that demonstrated he was a humanist of the Renaissance?

- » Cosimo built libraries, collected rare books, and had his children read great works by ancient Romans and ancient Greeks.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing the gist of page 42 and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking aloud about the gist of this section.

Inferential. This image is from the Medici family home. What inferences can you draw about the Medici family from the image?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that the Medici family was wealthy and interested in art.

Who's Really in Charge?

Cosimo de' Medici was a great patron of the arts. The Medici family home became a gathering place for thinkers and artists from around the world. Many artists lived with Cosimo as they worked on their statues and paintings.

One idea from the ancient Greeks really appealed to Cosimo de' Medici. This was the idea of democracy—rule by the people. Cosimo liked the idea of creating a new society in Florence modeled on Greek ideas. But for Cosimo, democracy was only an idea. In reality, the city of Florence was not run in a democratic way because Cosimo controlled Florence.

Here is the way democracy was supposed to work in Florence: The craftsmen and merchants of Florence joined together in special groups called guilds, such as the wool merchants' guild, the silk weavers' guild, and the doctors' and pharmacists' guild. The guild members elected councilmen, and these councilmen were supposed to govern the city.

That was a step toward democracy. But it was actually Cosimo who told guild members which councilmen to elect. These men were friends of his who followed his suggestions closely. By this method, Cosimo de' Medici indirectly ruled Florence for thirty years.

Florence during the Renaissance

- Read page 44 and the first two paragraphs on page 45 aloud.

The citizens of Florence liked Cosimo well enough that they did not protest his way of ruling the city. After all, Cosimo successfully protected the city from its enemies. He made generous gifts to charity and business in Florence was booming.

When Cosimo de' Medici died at the age of 76, the grateful people of Florence gave him the title "Father of Our Country."

Like Father, Not Like Son

After Cosimo's death, his son Piero took charge of Florence. Piero suffered from gout, a painful disease of the joints, and had to be carried from place to place on a stretcher.

Piero did not inherit his father's leadership or banking skills, but he did love art. Frail Piero ruled only a few years before he died. Piero's son, Lorenzo, became ruler of Florence when he was only twenty years old.

Lively, dashing, and popular, Lorenzo was the opposite of his sickly father. He played sports, wrote songs, and loved to discuss poetry and philosophy. Lorenzo enjoyed the good life so much that when his father died, he hesitated to take charge of Florence. He soon realized, however, that in Florence, if you weren't in charge, you wouldn't stay wealthy. His peacemaking skills won the hearts of his countrymen and the respect of other leaders in Europe. People began to call him "Lorenzo the Magnificent."

Support

What is democracy?

- » Democracy is rule by the people, which is an idea from the ancient Greeks.

Support

How was democracy supposed to work in Florence?

- » Democracy was supposed to work with guild members electing councilmen to govern the city.

Inferential. Explain the meaning of the heading "Who's Really in Charge?"

- » The heading refers to how Cosimo ruled the city—by putting his friends in charge instead of properly elected officials.

- Read the rest of page 45 aloud.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing the gist of pages 44 and 45 and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking aloud about the gist of this section.

Support

How did the government actually work in Florence?

- » Cosimo made sure his friends were elected to govern the city, instead of letting the guild members decide who to elect as councilmen.

Patron and Poet

Like his father and grandfather, Lorenzo loved classical literature and art. He wrote poetry. The Platonic Academy, a group of learned scholars, continued to meet at his house. He carried on the family tradition of supporting many painters and sculptors and filling his home with beautiful works of art.

Lorenzo started the school of sculpture where the great Michelangelo trained as a young boy. And as you have discovered, Lorenzo was a patron of and friend to Michelangelo. He also supported such great Renaissance artists as Botticelli and Verrocchio, the master from Leonardo's days as an apprentice.

Severe Savonarola

Lorenzo had ruled Florence for about ten years when the monk named Savonarola came to the city. Little did Lorenzo know the trouble this man would bring. You have already heard about how Savonarola's harsh sermons prompted Botticelli to change his style of painting. As soon as Savonarola arrived in town, he began preaching against the Medici family. He said they ate too much, drank too much, dressed immodestly, and cared too much about their fancy belongings. He made the same charges against the people of Florence.

Lorenzo tried to make peace with Savonarola by giving a donation to the monastery where the monk lived. Savonarola returned the money with an insult. He said a good monk is "like a good watchdog—when a thief comes along and throws him a bone, he puts it to one side and goes on barking."

- Read pages 46 and 47 aloud.

The End of the Medici Family

In 1492 CE, Lorenzo died at the age of forty three, leaving his twenty one-year-old son Piero in charge. This Piero was known as “Piero the Unfortunate” because of his poor judgment and complete lack of political knowledge.

Two years later, the French invaded Florence, and Piero was forced to leave the city. Angry mobs broke into the Medici family home and tore it to pieces, destroying or selling off many valuable items.

After Piero’s departure, Savonarola took charge of the city for a while. He had a grand plan to turn Florence into a model city of Christian virtue. But his expectations were too high, and his rules were too strict. For example, he sent out bands of men who patrolled the streets and carried sticks to beat anyone whose clothing they thought was too fancy.

Although Savonarola’s message was harsh, many people listened to him. Once he urged his followers to build a huge bonfire in the town square. He told the people of Florence to throw in their “vanities,” the things he considered fancy and unnecessary. Men and women tossed jewelry and expensive clothing, even paintings and books, into the roaring blaze, which is remembered as the “bonfire of the vanities.”

Although Savonarola was a monk, he openly insulted the powerful leader of the Church, the pope. He said that Pope Alexander VI was corrupt. At first, the pope ordered Savonarola to stop giving sermons. This didn’t quiet the angry monk. Later, the pope excommunicated Savonarola, which means he took away his membership of the Church. Then Savonarola was accused of the crime of heresy—of holding beliefs that disagreed with the Church. Back then, the Church was very powerful and demanded that people follow its rules. It was a serious crime to be a heretic. Eventually, Savonarola angered the Church so much that he was arrested, convicted, and executed.

Savonarola

Evaluative. Why did the Medici family support artists?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that the Medici family supported artists for the fame and celebrity it brought to them as much as for their admiration of ancient Greek and Roman values.

Support

Who was Savonarola?

- » Savonarola was a monk who came to live in Florence. He delivered harsh sermons and was critical of the ways that the Medici family and others lived in Florence.

Why did Savonarola criticize the Medici family?

- » Savonarola criticized the Medici family for eating and drinking too much, wearing fancy clothes, and caring too much about their belongings.

Challenge

Explain the meaning of the simile that Savonarola used when he said a good monk is “like a good watchdog—when a thief comes along and throws him a bone, he puts it to one side and goes on barking.”

- » Answers may vary, but may include that a good monk keeps his beliefs and practices even if tempted by others to do otherwise.

Inferential. What factors contributed to the fall of the Medici family?

- » Piero’s weak leadership and the French invasion led to the fall of the Medici family.

Evaluative. What impact do you think the fall of the Medici family and the rule of Florence by Savonarola had on the Renaissance movement in Florence?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that the movement was hurt by the fall of the Medici family and the rule of Savonarola, as the work of artists and scholars in Florence lost a primary source of support and even became condemned—resulting in the burning of paintings and books in the “bonfire of the vanities.” Savonarola took over the city and condemned those who wore fancy clothing and jewelry and had expensive books and paintings.

From Florence to Rome

The main activity of the Renaissance now moved from Florence to Rome. Rome was the headquarters of the Church, and home to the pope. From about 1450 CE on, one pope after another took on the role of patron of the arts. Like the wealthy businessmen of Florence, the popes in Rome supported artists in their work.

Why? Pope Nicholas V said that when people saw the spectacular works of art created with the Church's support, they would better appreciate the magnificence and power of the Church.

The popes called many artists to Rome and set them to work on some of the most beautiful paintings, sculptures, and buildings of all time. Rome replaced Florence as the cultural center of the Renaissance.

The Vatican and St. Peter's Today

The pope lives in the Vatican, a short name used for the Palace of the Vatican. This huge building contains the official home of the pope, as well as many museums, chapels, Church offices, and a library. It is located in what is now called Vatican City. Vatican City used to be part of Rome, but now it's a separate country. (That's right, Vatican City is a country; in fact, it's the smallest independent country in the world.)

One of the most important buildings in Vatican City is St. Peter's Basilica, which was designed and built mostly during the Renaissance.

Support

Have students locate Florence and Rome on the map of Renaissance Italy in the back of the Reader.

Literal. After the end of the patronage of the Medici family in Florence, where did the primary focus of the Renaissance movement shift and why?

- » The primary focus of the Renaissance movement shifted to Rome because the popes, who lived in Vatican City near Rome, became patrons of artists.

Literal. Why did the popes in Rome support artists?

- » The popes believed that when people saw the spectacular works of art created with the Church's support, they would better appreciate the magnificence and power of the Church.

Venice: The Floating City

The Republic of Venice, a great trading center of the Renaissance, was a city-state north of Florence and Rome. Venice is perched on the Adriatic Sea, between Europe and Asia. In the Middle Ages, the merchants of Venice were trading in Constantinople and as far away as China. The Venetians loaded their ships with silver, wine, and woolen cloth from Europe, as well as fine glassware produced in Venice, to trade with merchants to the east. They returned with silk and porcelain from China or spices from the East Indies. By the 1400s, Venice was known for more than just trading. It had built a fleet of ships and won battles to take over neighboring city-states. Venice became very wealthy and powerful.

During the Renaissance, wealthy Venetians not only supported many artists, they also built a city that is a work of art. Venice is a city on the water—not just near but on the water. The city rests on more than 100 small islands. To connect many of the islands, the Venetians built bridges as well as a maze of narrow waterways. These waterways, called canals, crisscrossed the city and made it possible to get from one little island to another. The most famous of the canals, the Grand Canal, winds through the city for about two miles. Even today, people travel on the canals in long, sleek, flat-bottomed boats called gondolas.

At the heart of the city's life was the huge open area called St. Mark's Square, where thousands of pigeons flock before the doors of the magnificent church called St. Mark's Basilica.

The Master of Color

Titian was considered to be the greatest Venetian artist of the 1500s. He is perhaps best known for his use of vibrant color. Titian's portraits reveal his ability to capture his subjects' personalities. As well as people, his paintings often contain mythological and religious themes.

Inferential. What factors in Venice contributed to the city becoming a significant source of patronage during the Renaissance?

- » Strong trade created wealth and a strong fleet of ships created power. This money and stability allowed people to pursue and support the arts.

REREAD FOR CENTRAL IDEAS AND DETAILS (15 MIN.)

- Tell students they will identify the central ideas in “The Bankers Who Loved Art” and explain how they are supported by key details.
- Ask students what the central idea of a text is. Listen for responses like “It’s the overarching topic of a text.”
- Explain that a reader can identify the central idea of a text by thinking about what the text is mostly about. Tell students that sometimes more complex texts have more than one central idea.
- Ask students what clues in the text they can use to think about the central idea. Listen for students to identify text features like headings and bolded words, the gist statements they thought about during the first reading of the text, and key details or ideas that are repeated throughout the text.
- Display the Identifying Central Ideas and Supporting Details graphic organizer and explain to students that they will be recording their thinking about the central ideas of this chapter using this graphic organizer. On a new, clean page of their reading journals or on loose-leaf paper, invite students to create the graphic organizer, leaving space to add in their own notes.

- Model rereading pages 42 through 45, thinking about the central idea of the text. As you reread, be sure to model:
  - using the title, headings, and bolded words to identify the central idea
  - thinking aloud about repeated words and phrases to identify repeated ideas
  - using the gist statements from the first reading of the chapter to think about the central idea
  - adding notes to the displayed Identifying Central Ideas and Supporting Details graphic organizer
  - identifying the following central idea: Renaissance patrons commissioned art for many different reasons.
- Invite students to continue rereading pages 46 through 51, thinking about the central idea of the text. Encourage students to identify a different central idea from what was previously identified and to use the Identifying Central Ideas and Supporting Details graphic organizer to record their thinking.

Check for Understanding

Circulate and check in with students as they work. Check for students identifying a central idea of this section of the text. If necessary, remind students to use text features like headings and bolded words, the gist statements they thought about during the first reading of the text, and key details or ideas that are repeated throughout the text.

DISCUSSION AND WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

- Point out that the strategies students used to identify the central idea—text features, the gist statements, and the key details or ideas that are repeated throughout the text—are the evidence they used to identify the central idea. If necessary, make this connection explicit with the central idea identified earlier during the teacher modeling.
- Invite students to gather into groups of three or four. Tell students to share the central ideas they identified for the chapter with each other and to explain how their ideas are supported by key details from the text. Encourage students to use at least three details from the text in their support. Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they work.

- (Optional) Have students respond to The Big Question in five or six sentences on Activity Page 7.2. Tell students that they should include at least two pieces of evidence to support their response.

Note: Question 1 relates to The Big Question of the chapter.

Inferential. What motivated wealthy patrons, such as the Medici family, to commission so much art? What motivated religious patrons, such as popes, to commission so much art? How are their reasons similar?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that the Medici family was inspired by their love of ancient Greek and Roman ideas, art, and literature to support and surround themselves with art and classical ideas. The Medici family became famous for supporting artists. Religious patrons hoped that by supporting art, they would inspire people with the power of the Church and the power of God. The reasons are similar because both wanted to create beautiful things and become known for their support of artists and art.
- Allow students to share their writing and discuss the points they make.

WORD WORK: SHREWD (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter, you read, “Like his ancestors, Cosimo was a shrewd businessman.”
  2. Say the word shrewd with me.
  3. Shrewd means clever, or able to understand things and make good judgments.
  4. My mother has a shrewd financial sense and she is always able to find the best price for whatever she wants to buy.
  5. How would someone who is shrewd begin to save a large amount of money? Be sure to use the word shrewd in your response.
    - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “Someone who is shrewd would _____.”
  6. What part of speech is the word shrewd?
    - » adjective
- Use a Making Choices activity for follow-up.

- Tell students, “The following sentences describe situations in which someone can be described as shrewd or not shrewd. Say, ‘That is shrewd,’ if the sentence describes a situation in which someone can be described as shrewd. Say, ‘That is not shrewd,’ if the sentence describes a situation in which someone can be described as not shrewd.
1. My teacher listened carefully to the news report and questioned whether or not both sides of the issue were presented.
    - » That is shrewd.
  2. My cousin did not carefully read the contract before signing the papers to buy a house.
    - » That is not shrewd.
  3. They bought the first plane tickets to Italy that they could find; they did not research cheaper prices or better departure times.
    - » That is not shrewd.
  4. We decided to take extra water on our hike on a very hot day.
    - » That is shrewd.

Lesson 7: Reading Informational Texts for Supporting Reasons and Evidence

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will identify the points a classmate makes and explain how their point is supported by reasons and evidence.

TEKS 5.1.A; TEKS 5.1.C; TEKS 5.9.D.i

MODEL PRESENTING (10 MIN.)

- Tell students they will choose one of their informational paragraphs composed in either Lesson 4 and Lesson 5 to present to a small group. Students will listen to each other and identify the points a classmate makes in their paragraph and explain how the points are supported by reasons and evidence.
- Have students turn to Activity Page 7.3.

Activity Page 7.3

| Topic                              | Leonardo da Vinci's Ideas and Accomplishments | Raphael's Artistic Achievements |
|------------------------------------|---|---------------------------------|
| What is the central idea?          |   |                                 |
| How is the central idea supported? |   |                                 |

TEKS 5.1.A Listen actively to interpret verbal and non-verbal messages, ask relevant questions, and make pertinent comments; TEKS 5.1.C Give an organized presentation employing eye contact, speaking rate, volume, enunciation, natural gestures, and conventions of language to communicate ideas effectively; TEKS 5.9.D.i Recognize characteristics and structures of informational text, including the central idea with supporting evidence.

- Explain the Informational Paragraph Presentations Chart, using the following as a guide:
  - The question in the first row prompts students to notice the central idea, or point made about the topic, which is often stated in the introductory or topic sentence.
  - The question in the second row prompts students to identify supporting information for the point made about the topic.
- Tell students they will make notes in the chart as they listen to other students present their paragraphs.
- Remind students that this is exactly what they did in the reading segment of this lesson. If necessary, before students listen to and take notes about each other's informational paragraphs, model practicing by listening to a paragraph from the Reader.
- Model presenting informational writing:
  - Review expectations for speaking: Use appropriate volume for the group and speak at a slower pace.
  - Remind students to be respectful listeners by keeping their bodies still, making eye contact, and using appropriate nonverbal responses, such as subtle facial expressions.
  - Read aloud the sample informational paragraph about Savonarola from the bottom of page 47:
    - Although Savonarola was a monk, he openly insulted the powerful leader of the Church, the pope. He said that Pope Alexander VI was corrupt. At first, the pope ordered Savonarola to stop giving sermons. This didn't quiet the angry monk. Later, the pope excommunicated Savonarola, which means he took away his membership in the Church. Then Savonarola was accused of the crime of heresy—of holding beliefs that disagreed with the Church. Back then, the Church was very powerful and demanded that people follow its rules. It was a serious crime to be a heretic. Eventually, Savonarola angered the Church so much that he was arrested, convicted, and executed.
- Have students refer to the chart on Activity Page 7.3 and discuss the answers to the questions with a partner. Note that the question below the chart does not need to be discussed now as students will address it after listening to their classmates' writing.

Speaking and Listening Presenting

Beginning

Provide 1:1 prompting and support for students as they listen to their classmates' presentations.

Provide students with a sentence frame for recording the central idea and key supporting details (e.g., The main point in this paragraph is _____. A detail that supports this point is _____.)

Intermediate

Prompt students to orally discuss with a partner the main point of the paragraph and supporting details to aid in note-taking.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for understanding the task as needed.

ELPS 2.1

- Then review answers to the questions on the chart with the whole group as they relate to the sample informational paragraph.
  - Central idea about Savonarola
    - » He disagreed with the Church.
  - Supporting information for the central idea
    - » He insulted the pope and suffered division from the Church, leading to his death; he was ordered to stop giving sermons; and he was excommunicated, accused of heresy, arrested, convicted, and executed.

PRACTICE PRESENTING (20 MIN.)

- Have students move into their presentation groups and assign the order for presenting. Remind them to have the informational paragraph they selected, Activity Page 7.3, and a pencil with them.
- Determine the amount of time each student will have to present based upon the number of students and the allotted time for this activity.
- Use a timer to time the turns for the groups:
  - Prompt the first speaker to stand up with their paragraph.
  - Remind the seated students to use respectful listening and take notes on the activity page once the speaker finishes.
  - Say, “Begin,” and start the timer.
  - Once the speakers have finished and the listeners have had about 3 minutes to write their notes, tell groups to prepare for the next speaker.
  - Repeat until all students have had a turn.
- Circulate the classroom and check in with groups to offer reminders about respectful speaking and listening and to support students as they take notes in the chart.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they present. Check for students identifying a main point of the paragraph and explaining how the points are supported by reasons and evidence. If necessary, remind students to think about the key details or ideas that are repeated throughout their classmates' paragraphs.

WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

- Tell students to refer to their notes and think about all the paragraphs they have heard to respond to the question below the chart on Activity Page 7.3. Remind them that effective supporting information is logically related to the topic and reinforces the central idea and contains fact-based details.
- Select students to share their responses to the question below the chart.
- Feedback. Provide reinforcing and corrective feedback about student identification of supporting information that is logically related to a point about a topic.
- Collect Activity Page 7.3 to review and monitor student progress. Tell students you will circle the parts of their response that identify relevant supporting information and add a star if the response explains how the supporting information reinforces the point about the topic.

Lesson 7: Reading Informational Texts for Supporting Reasons and Evidence

Mid-Unit Content Assessment

Note: This is a good opportunity to use the Tens scoring system to gather formative assessment data.

- You may wish to pause one day before proceeding to Lesson 8 so you can assess students' comprehension of the domain content presented in the Reader thus far. During your next ELA period, administer the Mid-Unit Content Assessment (Activity Page PP.1), which will take approximately 30–45 minutes for students to complete. You may choose to collect the assessments so a grade can be assigned and/or you may review the answers with students after they complete the assessment. You may use the remainder of the period for remediation and/or enrichment, including having students reread Reader chapters or read Fluency Supplement selections.

- Have them find the word on page 52 of the Reader. Explain that this vocabulary word is in the chapter title.
- Have students refer to the glossary at the back of the Reader, locate morals, and then have a student read the definition.
- Explain the following:
  - the part of speech
  - alternate forms of the word

 TEKS 5.6.G Evaluate details read to determine key ideas; TEKS 5.7.C Use text evidence to support an appropriate response; TEKS 5.7.G Discuss specific ideas in the text that are important to the meaning.

- Read the purpose for reading from the board/chart paper:
  - Read to learn about the Renaissance ideals of behavior for leaders and members of the court.
- Have one student read The Big Question at the beginning of the chapter. Ensure students understand the meaning of The Big Question before reading the chapter.
  - What were the Renaissance ideals about how a prince or a courtier should act?
- Explain to students that like in Lesson 7, they will think about the central ideas in “Morals, Modesty, and Manners” and explain how these ideas are supported by key details.

READ THE CHAPTER FOR GIST (20 MIN.)

- Explain to students that like in previous lessons, they will be reading this chapter several times. Remind them that the first time they read it, they might not understand every word or idea. Remind students that good readers read texts over and over for a variety of different reasons. Tell students that the first time they read this chapter, they will read for gist.
- If necessary, invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing what it means to read for gist. Listen for students explaining that it means to think about what the section of the text is mostly about.
- Students should begin to think about the central ideas of the chapter. Ask them what it means to identify the central idea of a text. Listen for responses like, “It means to tell the big ideas or main points of a text.”
- Ask students how a reader identifies the central idea. Listen for responses like, “Readers use text features like headings and bolded words, the gist statements they thought about during the first reading of the text, and key details or ideas that are repeated throughout the text.”

Chapter 6

Morals, Modesty, and Manners

THE BIG QUESTION

What were the Renaissance ideals of how a prince or a courtier should act?

Niccolò Machiavelli worked for the government of Florence in the late 1400s. He witnessed the Medici family fall from power, and he witnessed the bitter struggles between the city-states in Italy, between city-states and foreign countries, and between the pope and other rulers.

All this fighting among rulers made him think. He thought about how a prince should rule his people. Because of all the fighting, he especially thought about how a prince should defend himself against enemies and remain in power. He wrote his ideas in a famous book called The Prince. This book was a study of the art of politics and its publication caused much discussion among the rulers of the time.

What is the chief goal of a prince? “To stay in power,” said Machiavelli. Machiavelli thought that to keep his power, a prince might at times have to be dishonest. “A wise leader,” Machiavelli wrote, “cannot and should not keep his word when keeping it is not to his advantage.”

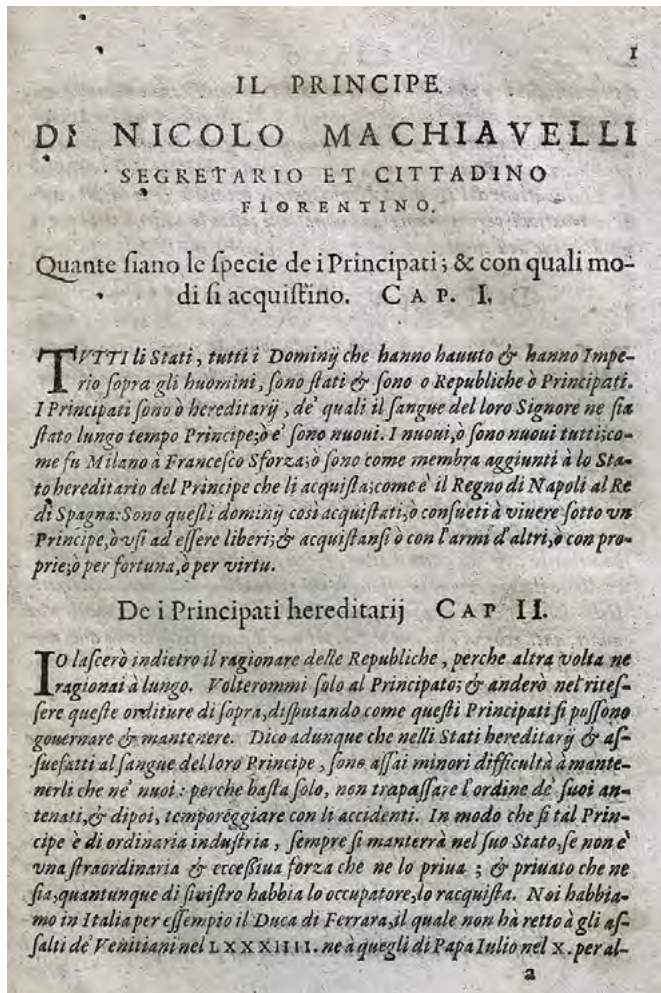

Machiavelli asked, “Is it better [for a prince] to be loved than to be feared, or the reverse?” Machiavelli said that a prince should wish to be both loved and feared. But he also said that if a ruler had to choose one or the other, then it would be better for people to fear him.

The first page of The Prince by Machiavelli

These ideas and others were misinterpreted and have given Machiavelli a bad reputation over the years. Even today, if you describe someone as “Machiavellian,” you mean that person is crafty, sneaky, power-hungry, and willing to use any means to achieve their ends.

Get Real!

Some historians think Machiavelli doesn't deserve his bad reputation. They say he was a wise man who preferred a government in which the people had a say, as it had been back in the Roman Republic. They say that in The Prince, Machiavelli was just being realistic. He was simply writing about what men do, rather than what they should do, and the challenges of governing a large population.

Others disagree. They think that Machiavelli had a too dark and pessimistic view of human nature. They think that people aren't as bad as Machiavelli thought.

The Bad Borgias

When Machiavelli wrote about princes who didn't keep their promises, he often had the Borgia family in mind.

Many historians agree that the Borgias were often cruel, dangerous, and violent people. Rodrigo Borgia, who became Pope Alexander VI, holds the unpleasant reputation of being one of the most corrupt popes of all times. In The Prince, Machiavelli wrote this about Alexander VI: “There never was a man more effective in swearing that things were true, and the greater the oaths with which he made a promise, the less he observed it.”

Rodrigo's second son, Cesare Borgia, was considered to be a brute. Unfortunately, he was put in charge of an army. Machiavelli traveled with Cesare at times and was impressed by his military skills. Cesare knew how to get power and keep it. He ruthlessly tried to conquer everything that lay in his path.

When Cesare decided he wanted to take possession of the city of Camerino, he visited his friend, the Duke of Urbino. Cesare asked to borrow all of Urbino's cannons so he could use them to attack Camerino.

Inferential. Explain what Niccolò Machiavelli meant when he wrote, “A wise leader cannot and should not keep his word when keeping it is not to his advantage.”

- » Answers may vary, but should include that even if a leader says or promises that he will (or will not) do something, he should evaluate each situation and weigh the pros and cons of following through on his promise.

Support. Why did Machiavelli decide to write The Prince, a book about the art of politics?

- » He witnessed struggles between various groups and people, and he decided he needed to write a book about how a prince should rule his people and stay in power.

- Have students describe what they see on page 53.
  - » Answers may vary, but may include that it is the first page of The Prince and it is not written in English (it is written in Italian).

The Duke, a trusting man, agreed to Cesare's request. But that night, Cesare marched back into his friend's city and conquered Urbino with its own cannons!

Later, Cesare went on to capture Camerino by deception, too. He negotiated with the rulers of the city. If they would surrender, then Cesare promised to let them off easily. They agreed to surrender. Then Cesare betrayed them. As soon as Cesare and his army entered the city, he gave orders for the rulers to be killed.

Cesare Borgia

Fortunately, the Borgias did not stay in power long. Rodrigo Borgia, also known as Pope Alexander VI, died in 1503 CE. Cesare was chased out of Italy. He died in battle in Spain at the age of 31.

Evaluative. The adjective Machiavellian was created to describe people who act in a way that is selfish or dishonest. What things did Machiavelli write in The Prince that led to the creation of this adjective?

- » Machiavelli wrote that a prince's main goal is to stay in power, even if it means he must be dishonest. He also wrote that it is best if a prince is both loved and feared, but if he has to choose one, it is better to be feared than to be loved.

- Have students silently read the rest of page 54 and page 55.

Literal. What are the two different views of Machiavelli among historians?

- » Some historians believe Machiavelli does not deserve a bad reputation because he was writing about what people do, not what they should do when he wrote The Prince. Other historians believe Machiavelli was pessimistic, or had a negative attitude about people and expected the worst of them.

Inferential. What things did some members of the Borgias family do that led some people to think Machiavelli wrote The Prince with that family in mind?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that Rodrigo Borgia became one of the most corrupt popes of all time. Cesare Borgia lied to the Duke of Urbino and captured Urbino with its own cannons. Cesare captured Camerino by deception and then betrayed the rulers of the city and ordered them to be killed.

From The Prince

Machiavelli also greatly admired ancient Greece and ancient Rome. In a letter he wrote to a friend, Machiavelli said that he wrote The Prince after reading many works of history by “the ancients,” the classical writers of Greece and Rome. “I give myself completely over to the ancients,” Machiavelli said. Here are some excerpts from The Prince.

“Anyone who determines to act in all circumstances the part of a good man must come to ruin among so many who are not good. Hence, if a prince wishes to maintain himself, he must learn how not to be good, and to use that ability or not as is required.”

“The experience of our times shows that the princes who have done great things are the ones who have taken little account of their promises and who have known how to addle the brains of men with their craft.”

“If men were all good, this advice would not be good, but since men are wicked and do not keep their promises to you, you likewise do not have to keep your promises to them.”

“So far as he is able, a prince should stick to the path of good but, if the necessity arises, he should know how to follow evil.”

56

- Have students read the first paragraph on page 56 and skim the rest of the page. Explain that they will focus more on these excerpts from The Prince in the next lesson.

Literal. What did Machiavelli say influenced his creation of The Prince?

- » He was influenced by works of history by “the ancients,” the classical writers of Greece and Rome.

Castiglione and The Courtier

In the early 1500s, Baldassar Castiglione wrote The Book of the Courtier. It's commonly known as The Courtier for short. In great detail, the book describes how the ideal courtier should behave.

What's a Courtier?

The word court is in courtier. There is the kind of court where trials take place with a judge and sometimes a jury. But this is a different kind of court—the court of a king or prince. A prince's court might mean the palace or mansion where the prince lives. The court also includes the royal family, servants, officers, and advisers of the prince.

A courtier is a person who spends a lot of time at the court of the prince. Sometimes, when people refer to a courtier, they mean a person who hangs around the prince and flatters him and tries to gain his favor, but this doesn't apply to all courtiers.

- Have students silently read page 57.

The Book of the Courtier describes the right ways to behave at court among royals and nobles. It describes the ideals of courtly life.

Castiglione said that a lady should be “witty, elegant, and cultured.” He said a gentleman should be “loyal to his prince and courteous to women.” The courtier should be “athletic, sensitive, artistic, and well-educated.”

A perfect courtier should be able to do everything well: he should be a skilled horseman, a bold soldier in battle, a graceful dancer, and more. He should be “well built and shapely of limb,” not too short or too tall. And he should be a remarkable athlete: he should excel in jousting, wrestling, tennis, and spear-throwing! But, said Castiglione, the courtier should avoid some activities, “such as turning somersaults, rope-walking, and the like, which ... little befit a gentleman.”

You might think that a courtier who can do everything well would be rather conceited, but it’s important, Castiglione said, to be “gentle, modest, and reserved.” In other words, don’t be a show-off.

Most important of all, the courtier “must accompany his actions, gestures, habits, in short his every movement, with grace.” Even when the courtier is doing something very difficult, he should do it so gracefully that it looks easy. The Italian word for this quality is sprezzatura. It means the ability to make things look easy, as though you hardly have to try or think about what you’re doing.

- » They are similar in that they both give advice to a group of people about the proper way to behave. They are different in that The Prince tells a ruler, a prince, how to behave to keep power, whereas The Courtier tells a courtier, or one who spends a lot of time around a ruler, such as a prince, how to behave to stay in favor among royals and nobles.

Della Casa's Guide to Manners of the Renaissance

During the Renaissance, what people considered “good manners” changed quite a bit. In the 1500s, Giovanni della Casa wrote a book about etiquette, or the customs for polite behavior. Della Casa was a poet and diplomat from Florence. The book, known in Italian as Il Galateo, is largely addressed to his nephew, and therefore takes on a familiar tone, though he intended to reach a wide range of people.

Della Casa detailed proper ways to sit and stand in the company of others. He explained how best to blow your nose, to cut your nails, and to chew your food. He even discussed situations where it might be okay—or not—to express your feelings. The excerpts below reveal just how important good manners and polite behavior were to della Casa.

“It is moreover extremely indecent to spit, cough, and expectorate (as it were) in company, as some hearty fellows are apt to do: and more so, when you have blown your nose, to draw aside and examine the contents of your handkerchief; as if you expected pearls or rubies to distill from your brain. These kinds of habits, in good company, are so very nauseous and disgusting, that if we indulge ourselves in them, no one can be very fond of our acquaintance.”

“It is also an inelegant custom, for any one to apply his nose, by way of smelling to a glass of wine, which another person is to drink; or to a plate of meat, which another is to eat. Nay, I would not advise anyone to smell to anything, which he himself intends to eat or drink: since there is a possibility, at least, that his nose may drop upon it; or the very idea may offend the company, though by good luck that accident may not then befall them.”

“What now can we suppose...to say to those people, whom we sometimes see thrusting, like hogs, their very snouts into their soup, so as not once to lift up their eyes from their hands, from what is set before them? Who, with their cheeks inflated as if they were sounding a trumpet, or puffing up the fire, do not so properly eat, as devour their food?”

- Have students silently read page 59.

Evaluative. How is Giovanni della Casa's Il Galateo similar to The Prince and The Courtier?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that all three books explain the ways people should behave.

Challenge

How is della Casa's Il Galateo different from The Prince and The Courtier?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that The Prince and The Courtier were written for people in power (The Prince) or those who were close to the people in power (The Courtier). Il Galateo was written to advise a wide range of people about good manners.

- Invite students to Think-Pair-Share, thinking about the central ideas of the chapter. Cold call students to share with the whole group. Encourage students to identify two central ideas for the chapter and explain how they are supported by key details. Listen for students to identify one central idea being that Renaissance ideals were described in works of Renaissance literature, and that there were many ideals of behavior during the Renaissance.

Note: The Discussion questions and Activity Page 8.2 relate to The Big Question of this chapter.

- Invite students to turn to Activity Page 8.2. Explain that they will use this chart to explain how a central idea is supported by key details using one of the central ideas they just identified: that there were many ideals of behavior during the Renaissance.
- Using Activity Page 8.2, record information about each of the following three works of Renaissance literature: The Prince, The Courtier, and Il Galateo. Complete notes on the advice provided in each work with evidence from the text, which may include the following:

Connect that the advice given in each piece of literature would be key details that support the central idea previously identified. Remind students to use text features like headings, bolded words, and key details that are repeated throughout the text.

- Use the following questions to discuss the chapter.
- 1. Inferential. Explain the title for this chapter, “Morals, Modesty, and Manners.”
  - » Answers may vary, but should reflect the understanding that The Prince addresses the morality of a prince’s behavior, The Courtier addresses the value of modesty for a courtier, and Il Galateo addresses general manners for any person.
- 2. Evaluative. What is a common theme across all three examples of Renaissance literature?
  - » All three works address ideals of behavior.
- Have students take home Activity Page 8.3 to read and complete for homework.

WORD WORK: MACHIAVELLIAN (5 MIN.)

Note: Today’s Word Work departs from the usual practice of selecting a vocabulary word from the chapter to instead highlight a popular, modern idiom derived from Machiavelli’s legacy.

1. Machiavelli’s ideas about how a leader should govern gave rise to a new word which is a synonym for clever in a dishonest way. This word is Machiavellian.
2. Say the word Machiavellian with me.
3. Machiavellian means using clever tricks to achieve something.
4. The governor used Machiavellian tactics in order to get elected as he made promises he knew he would never keep.
5. What sorts of Machiavellian tactics did the Borgia family use to stay in power? Be sure to use the word Machiavellian in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “The Borgia family was Machiavellian when they...”

6. What part of speech is the word Machiavellian?

» adjective

- Use a Discussion activity for follow-up:
- Talk with your partner about whether or not the Medici family's control of Florence was achieved in a Machiavellian manner. Be sure to use the word Machiavellian in complete sentences as you discuss this with your partner.

Lesson 8: Reading Informational Texts for Supporting Reasons and Evidence

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will be able to plan an informational piece about a person from the Renaissance by identifying a topic and gathering evidence related to the topic. TEKS 5.7.E; TEKS 5.11.A; TEKS 5.13.A; TEKS 5.13.B; TEKS 5.13.C;

TEKS 5.13.D; TEKS 5.13.E; TEKS 5.13.F

INTRODUCING THE TASK (5 MIN.)

TEKS 5.13.A–E

- Tell students they will use what they have been learning about the artists of the Renaissance to research and write a longer informational piece. Tell students they will choose one of the artists they have been learning about to research further: Brunelleschi, Leonardo, or Michelangelo.
- Remind students to focus their writing by selecting one specific moment, object, or idea from the artist's life and use precise details to write about it. The focus of the piece will be the person they decide to write about.
- Have students recall what kind of genre this piece will be, knowing that it is an informational piece about a real person. If necessary, remind students to think back to the Personal Narratives unit. Listen for student responses like, "This piece will be a biography because it is a text written about the life of a real person, by someone other than the person whose life is being described."
- Students will use several sources to gather their research. Ask students what texts they have read so far in this unit that they could draw from. Listen for students recognizing the Reader as a possible source. Explain that the Reader will be their main and most important source of information for their biography research.

TEKS 5.7.E Interact with sources in meaningful ways such as notetaking, annotating, freewriting, or illustrating;

TEKS 5.11.A Plan a first draft by selecting a genre for a particular topic, purpose, and audience using a range of strategies such as brainstorming, freewriting, and mapping; TEKS 5.13.A Generate and clarify questions on a topic for formal and informal inquiry; TEKS 5.13.B Develop and follow a research plan with adult assistance; TEKS 5.13.C Identify and gather relevant information from a variety of sources; TEKS 5.13.D Understand credibility of primary and secondary sources; TEKS 5.13.E Demonstrate understanding of information gathered; TEKS 5.13.F Differentiate between paraphrasing and plagiarism when using source materials.

REVIEW NOTE-TAKING TECHNIQUES (15 MIN.)

- Review note-taking techniques. Remind students they learned about note-taking for informational writing in the Early American Civilizations unit, and they have worked on paraphrasing in this unit.
  - Search the text for information related to the topic.
  - Remind students that paraphrasing means putting someone else's ideas in your own words. Plagiarism means using someone else's words without giving them credit.
  - Record notes in fragments and use paraphrasing to avoid plagiarism.
- Ask students what their topic will be for this piece. Listen for students recognizing that the artist they choose to write about will be their topic.
- Explain to students that strong informational pieces provide a general observation and focus about the topic. Ask students to Think-Pair-Share, discussing what the general observation or focus might be for this piece.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they talk. Listen for student responses like, "The focus will be on the artist's life and achievements." If necessary, prompt students by asking, "Why would a reader want to read a piece about an artist from the Renaissance?"

- Tell students they will choose one of the artists from the three listed and take notes about the artist from the Reader. Explain that, like they just discussed, biographies focus on a person's life, accomplishments, challenges, and achievements.

- Have students turn to Activity Page 8.4. Explain to students that they will use this graphic organizer to record notes as they research to learn more about the artist they choose.

- Review the categories on the Biography Notes Chart.
  - Early Years: This will include information about the artist's childhood, family, or life when they started as an artist.
  - Projects/Accomplishments: This will include information about significant works the artist created. For each work, note the name, location, patronage, and interesting facts. Tell students they will later create a diary entry about one of the artist's projects.
  - What made him great? This will include information about why the artist is remembered.
- Have students turn to the Biography Rubric (Activity Page SR.4) and point out that the criteria you introduced for the project are included in the rubric. This rubric will be used to assess this writing project.

Writing Texts to Explain Information

Beginning

Photocopy the relevant chapter from the Reader and allow student to color-code information for each note-taking category by highlighting evidence in the text. Consider allowing students to use combination notes (writing both pictures and words) when recording notes on Activity Page 8.4.

Intermediate

Give clear examples of what information or key points are important to record on Activity Page 8.4.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for note-taking as needed.

ELPS 5.F

- If necessary, remind students of the topic of the piece (Raphael's biography) and that each note-taking category is a point they will make about the topic. Remind students that they must develop their points with evidence related to the topic, which includes facts, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples related to the topic.
  - "Early Years": birth name was Raffaello Sanzio; born in 1483; lost his parents when he was a child; by eleven years old he was working as an apprentice in an art studio; 1504 moved to Florence; studied the techniques of Michelangelo and Leonardo.
  - "Projects/Accomplishments": the painting The School of Athens, located in the Vatican in Rome, commissioned by Pope Julius II, reflecting admiration for the ancient Greeks; multiple paintings of the Madonna and Jesus's family for patrons in Florence.
  - "What made him great?": masterful representation of natural, human form; application of perspective.
- Tell students they will begin their list of sources on the back of Activity Page 8.4. For Raphael they would fill in "Raphael" in the blank for the title of the chart, and in the first row they would write and underline "Patrons, Artists, and Scholars" for the title of the first source, "2014" for the date it was published, and "book" for the type of source.

TAKE NOTES FOR A BIOGRAPHY (20 MIN.)

- Tell students to think about the person they are most interested in writing about, circle his name, and write a sentence explaining their choice at the top of Activity Page 8.4.
- Have students turn to the chapter indicated for the person they selected and start taking notes.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students. Review student sentences explaining their choice and if the sentence is vague, encourage them to provide more concrete reasons for the choice. If necessary, ensure students are in the right section of the Reader for the person selected and that their note-taking is done with sentence fragments and paraphrasing.

WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Prompt students to record their source on the back of Activity Page 8.4 if they have not already done so.
- Have a few students share examples of notes where they used paraphrasing. Have them read the line from the text and then their paraphrased notes.
- Provide reinforcing or corrective feedback for students related to the topic and use of fragments and paraphrasing in their notes.
- Collect Activity Page 8.4 to review and monitor student progress. Written feedback may include comments such as:
  - Great job finding a concrete detail that is an example of the artist's accomplishments!
  - Great job using your own words to paraphrase this information from the text.
  - This fact is so interesting! I hope you write more about it in the biography.
  - Reread this fact in the text. Make sure your paraphrasing does not change the information.
  - Reread this fact in the text. Make sure it is relevant to the topic you are writing about.

Reading

Primary Focus: Students will analyze the relationship between particular words and phrases in “Morals, Modesty, and Manners” to better understand the words and phrases and draw inferences from the text. TEKS 5.3.B; TEKS 5.6.F

REVIEW THE CHAPTER (5 MIN.)

- Using the Answer Key at the back of this Teacher Guide, review student responses to Activity Page 8.3, which was assigned for homework.
- Tell students they will reread Chapter 6, “Morals, Modesty, and Manners.”
- Have students turn to the table of contents, locate the chapter, and then turn to the first page of the chapter.
- Have one student read The Big Question at the beginning of the chapter. Ensure students understand the meaning of The Big Question before reading the chapter.
  - What were the Renaissance ideals of how a prince or a courtier should act?
- If necessary, review the central ideas presented in the chapter by reviewing Activity Page 8.2.

TEKS 5.3.B Use context within and beyond a sentence to determine the relevant meaning of unfamiliar words or multiple-meaning words; TEKS 5.6.F Make inferences and use evidence to support understanding.

These ideas and others were misinterpreted and have given Machiavelli a bad reputation over the years. Even today, if you describe someone as “Machiavellian,” you mean that person is crafty, sneaky, power-hungry, and willing to use any means to achieve their ends.

Get Real!

Some historians think Machiavelli doesn't deserve his bad reputation. They say he was a wise man who preferred a government in which the people had a say, as it had been back in the Roman Republic. They say that in The Prince, Machiavelli was just being realistic. He was simply writing about what men do, rather than what they should do, and the challenges of governing a large population.

Others disagree. They think that Machiavelli had a too dark and pessimistic view of human nature. They think that people aren't as bad as Machiavelli thought.

The Bad Borgias

When Machiavelli wrote about princes who didn't keep their promises, he often had the Borgia family in mind.

Many historians agree that the Borgias were often cruel, dangerous, and violent people. Rodrigo Borgia, who became Pope Alexander VI, holds the unpleasant reputation of being one of the most corrupt popes of all times. In The Prince, Machiavelli wrote this about Alexander VI: “There never was a man more effective in swearing that things were true, and the greater the oaths with which he made a promise, the less he observed it.”

Rodrigo's second son, Cesare Borgia, was considered to be a brute. Unfortunately, he was put in charge of an army. Machiavelli traveled with Cesare at times and was impressed by his military skills. Cesare knew how to get power and keep it. He ruthlessly tried to conquer everything that lay in his path.

When Cesare decided he wanted to take possession of the city of Camerino, he visited his friend, the Duke of Urbino. Cesare asked to borrow all of Urbino's cannons so he could use them to attack Camerino.

REREAD TO ANALYZE WORDS AND PHRASES (25 MIN.)

- As a class, read the title of the chapter, “Morals, Modesty, and Manners.” As you read portions of the chapter, pause to explain or clarify the text at each point indicated.

The Duke, a trusting man, agreed to Cesare's request. But that night, Cesare marched back into his friend's city and conquered Urbino with its own cannons!

Later, Cesare went on to capture Camerino by deception, too. He negotiated with the rulers of the city. If they would surrender, then Cesare promised to let them off easily. They agreed to surrender. Then Cesare betrayed them. As soon as Cesare and his army entered the city, he gave orders for the rulers to be killed.

Cesare Borgia

Fortunately, the Borgias did not stay in power long. Rodrigo Borgia, also known as Pope Alexander VI, died in 1503 CE. Cesare was chased out of Italy. He died in battle in Spain at the age of 31.

Pronunciation Table

| Word(s) | CK Code  |
|---------|----------|
| Borgia  | /bor*jə/ |

- Have students silently read the section, "The Bad Borgias," on pages 54 and 55.

Inferential. The sentence at the end of the fifth paragraph on page 54 is a complex one, so let's break it apart to see what it conveys. What does the first part of this sentence, "There never was a man more effective in swearing that things were true," mean?

- » It means that the man Machiavelli wrote about, Pope Alexander VI, was very good at convincing people something was true.

Inferential. What does the last part of this statement, "and the greater the oaths with which he made a promise, the less he observed it," mean? What evidence from the text helps you to know?

- » It means that the more strongly he promised something, the more likely he was to ignore his promise. Machiavelli remembers the Borgias family when he writes about princes that do not keep their promises. Rodrigo Borgia became Pope Alexander VI.

Check for Understanding

Explain what this sentence means.

- » Machiavelli thought Pope Alexander VI was good at convincing people something was true, but the more strongly he promised something, the more likely he was to ignore his promise. If necessary, remind students to think about what the first part of the sentence means and connect it to the second part of the sentence.

From The Prince

Machiavelli also greatly admired ancient Greece and ancient Rome. In a letter he wrote to a friend, Machiavelli said that he wrote The Prince after reading many works of history by “the ancients,” the classical writers of Greece and Rome. “I give myself completely over to the ancients,” Machiavelli said. Here are some excerpts from The Prince.

“Anyone who determines to act in all circumstances the part of a good man must come to ruin among so many who are not good. Hence, if a prince wishes to maintain himself, he must learn how not to be good, and to use that ability or not as is required.”

“The experience of our times shows that the princes who have done great things are the ones who have taken little account of their promises and who have known how to addle the brains of men with their craft.”

“If men were all good, this advice would not be good, but since men are wicked and do not keep their promises to you, you likewise do not have to keep your promises to them.”

“So far as he is able, a prince should stick to the path of good but, if the necessity arises, he should know how to follow evil.”

56

- Have students silently read page 56.

Inferential. What did Machiavelli mean when he said, “I give myself completely over to the ancients”?

- » He meant that he admired the writers and historians of ancient Greece and Rome, and that his writing of The Prince was greatly influenced by them.

Support. What clue does the text provide to help you determine who “the ancients” were?

- » When a word or phrase is used in a text that may be unfamiliar to the audience, it is often followed by a comma and a word or phrase that defines the unfamiliar text. In this text, in the third line of the paragraph, the words “the ancients” appear in quotation marks followed by a comma and the phrase “the classical writers of Greece and Rome.”

Support

What does Machiavelli mean in the second passage when he says that the greatest princes are those “who have taken little account of their promises”?

- » He means that the greatest princes are those who don’t always keep their promises.

Evaluative. What view of human nature is represented in these four passages?

- » These four passages indicate that Machiavelli thought people were both good and bad, and that a leader might need to be dishonest to stay in power.

Inferential. What words or phrases from these four passages support the view of human nature presented in the passages? What specific information from the text supports your answer?

- » Answers may vary, but may include, “anyone who determines to act in all circumstances the part of a good man must come to ruin among so many who are not good” and “men are wicked and do not keep their promises to you.”

Castiglione and The Courtier

In the early 1500s, Baldassar Castiglione wrote The Book of the Courtier. It's commonly known as The Courtier for short. In great detail, the book describes how the ideal courtier should behave.

What's a Courtier?

The word court is in courtier. There is the kind of court where trials take place with a judge and sometimes a jury. But this is a different kind of court—the court of a king or prince. A prince's court might mean the palace or mansion where the prince lives. The court also includes the royal family, servants, officers, and advisers of the prince.

A courtier is a person who spends a lot of time at the court of the prince. Sometimes, when people refer to a courtier, they mean a person who hangs around the prince and flatters him and tries to gain his favor, but this doesn't apply to all courtiers.

Part of the title page of The Book of the Courtier

The Book of the Courtier describes the right ways to behave at court among royals and nobles. It describes the ideals of courtly life.

Castiglione said that a lady should be “witty, elegant, and cultured.” He said a gentleman should be “loyal to his prince and courteous to women.” The courtier should be “athletic, sensitive, artistic, and well-educated.”

A perfect courtier should be able to do everything well: he should be a skilled horseman, a bold soldier in battle, a graceful dancer, and more. He should be “well built and shapely of limb,” not too short or too tall. And he should be a remarkable athlete: he should excel in jousting, wrestling, tennis, and spear-throwing! But, said Castiglione, the courtier should avoid some activities, “such as turning somersaults, rope-walking, and the like, which ... little befit a gentleman.”

You might think that a courtier who can do everything well would be rather conceited, but it’s important, Castiglione said, to be “gentle, modest, and reserved.” In other words, don’t be a show-off.

Most important of all, the courtier “must accompany his actions, gestures, habits, in short his every movement, with grace.” Even when the courtier is doing something very difficult, he should do it so gracefully that it looks easy. The Italian word for this quality is sprezzatura. It means the ability to make things look easy, as though you hardly have to try or think about what you’re doing.

Baldassar Castiglione

Pronunciation Table

| Word(s)     | CK Code          |
|-------------|------------------|
| sprezzatura | /spret*so*tor*ə/ |

- Have students silently read page 58.

Inferential. In the third paragraph, the author uses an exclamation point to end the sentence, “And he should be a remarkable athlete: he should excel in jousting, wrestling, tennis, and spear-throwing!” An author’s use of punctuation can help to set the tone of their writing. What tone does the author set here by using an exclamation point?

- » It sets a tone of surprise or amazement. The author seems to be surprised that Castiglione would expect anyone to be able to do all of the listed things well.

Inferential. What are some antonyms for the word conceited in the fourth paragraph?

- » Answers may vary, but may include modest, humble, and reserved.

Check for Understanding

Some antonyms for the word conceited are in the same paragraph as conceited. What clues do you see that show those words are antonyms?

- » The word but indicates that the information that follows that word will be different from, and the opposite of, the information that comes before it. If necessary, direct students to specific sentences on the page.

Della Casa's Guide to Manners of the Renaissance

During the Renaissance, what people considered “good manners” changed quite a bit. In the 1500s, Giovanni della Casa wrote a book about etiquette, or the customs for polite behavior. Della Casa was a poet and diplomat from Florence. The book, known in Italian as Il Galateo, is largely addressed to his nephew, and therefore takes on a familiar tone, though he intended to reach a wide range of people.

Della Casa detailed proper ways to sit and stand in the company of others. He explained how best to blow your nose, to cut your nails, and to chew your food. He even discussed situations where it might be okay—or not—to express your feelings. The excerpts below reveal just how important good manners and polite behavior were to della Casa.

“It is moreover extremely indecent to spit, cough, and expectorate (as it were) in company, as some hearty fellows are apt to do: and more so, when you have blown your nose, to draw aside and examine the contents of your handkerchief; as if you expected pearls or rubies to distill from your brain. These kinds of habits, in good company, are so very nauseous and disgusting, that if we indulge ourselves in them, no one can be very fond of our acquaintance.”

“It is also an inelegant custom, for any one to apply his nose, by way of smelling to a glass of wine, which another person is to drink; or to a plate of meat, which another is to eat. Nay, I would not advise anyone to smell to anything, which he himself intends to eat or drink: since there is a possibility, at least, that his nose may drop upon it; or the very idea may offend the company, though by good luck that accident may not then befall them.”

“What now can we suppose...to say to those people, whom we sometimes see thrusting, like hogs, their very snouts into their soup, so as not once to lift up their eyes from their hands, from what is set before them? Who, with their cheeks inflated as if they were sounding a trumpet, or puffing up the fire, do not so properly eat, as devour their food?”

Challenge

How is Castiglione's advice about being an athlete similar to the spirit of the Renaissance?

» The spirit of the Renaissance included pursuits in multiple fields of study (for example, philosophy, art, music, government, etc.). This diversity of knowledge was valued, and similarly, Castiglione is saying ability in multiple sports is valued.

- Have students silently read page 59.

Inferential. Explain the advice della Casa gives in the third paragraph.

- » He says that it is not polite to blow one's nose in public. He says it is especially bad manners, after blowing your nose, to look at the contents of the handkerchief, because that is a disgusting habit that will make others not want to be around you.

DISCUSS THE CHAPTER AND WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

- Use the following questions to discuss the chapter.
1. Evaluative. Remember the quote from Chapter 1, “Men can do anything with themselves, if they will.” Explain how each of the following people might interpret this quote: a prince, a courtier, and a gentleman/lady.
    - » Answers may vary, but may include the following: a prince should be in complete control; a courtier should be good at all things; and a gentleman/lady should have good manners at all times.
  2. Inferential. How do The Prince, The Courtier, and Il Galateo, respectively, support a prince, courtier, and gentleman/lady in accomplishing the abilities they strive to master?
    - » These works of literature provide guidelines for each type of person regarding the abilities valued for each.
- Have students take home Activity Page 9.1 to complete for homework. Remind students to use Activity Page 8.3 as they complete Activity Page 9.1.

WORD WORK: WITTY (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter, you read, “Castiglione said that a lady should be ‘witty, elegant, and cultured.’”
2. Say the word witty with me.
3. Witty means clever and funny.
4. Mr. Simpson made a witty comment about a book we were reading in class, which made everyone laugh.
5. What are some other examples of witty comments you have made or heard? Be sure to use the word witty in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “I thought it was witty when _____.”
6. What part of speech is the word witty?
  - » adjective

Lesson 9: Synthesizing Text Details to Make Inferences

Language

GRAMMAR (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students will use and explain the function of prepositions and prepositional phrases in sentences. TEKS 5.11.D.vi

- Remind students they have learned about the parts of speech called prepositions and prepositional phrases.
- Ask students what kind of information a preposition gives a reader. Listen for responses like, “A preposition gives more information about where something happens (place), when something happens (time), or who or what the subject or object of the sentence is with (partner)” and “A preposition often answers the questions Where?, When?, or With whom?”
- Remind students that a prepositional phrase contains a preposition and other words that could include articles, nouns, possessive nouns or pronouns, adjectives, and adverbs.

TEKS 5.11.D.vi Edit drafts using standard English conventions, including prepositions and prepositional phrases and their influence on subject-verb agreement.

- Refer to the Prepositional Phrases Poster with students. Focus on the function of particular prepositional phrases and whether they are used to give information about place, time, or partner.
  - Review that when prepositional phrases give information about place, it is about where something happens or about the location of an object.
  - Tell students that prepositional phrases can also give information about time, such as when something happens (around 3:30 in the afternoon.) This function is labeled “time.” Other prepositions that show time include in, on, at, for, before, after, during, etc.
  - Prepositional phrases can also tell about the people or things that are with the subject or object of the sentence (with her little sister, Min-jun.) This function is labeled “partner.”
- Have students create a prepositional phrase for each type of function to include on the poster.
- Have students turn to Activity Page 9.2. Read the directions and review the example with students.

Check for Understanding

Guide students through the first sentence, making sure they are able to choose the correct preposition (to) and identify the proper function (place). If necessary, remind students that a preposition often answers the questions Where?, When?, or With whom?

- Have students complete Activity Page 9.2 independently.
- Collect Activity Page 9.2 to review and grade at a later time.

MORPHOLOGY (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students will use the prefix ex– as a clue to determine the meaning of words. TEKS 5.3.C

- Review the definition of prefix: A prefix is a syllable or syllables placed at the beginning of a root word to change the word's meaning.
- Ask students what the prefix ex– means. Listen for responses like “away” or “out.” Remind students the prefix ex– does not change the part of speech of the root word.

TEKS 5.3.C Identify the meaning of and use words with affixes such as trans-, super-, -ive, and -logy and roots such as geo and photo.

Support

Students may complete Activity Page 9.2 in pairs, or you may wish to complete it as a teacher-guided activity.

- Direct students' attention to the Practice Prefix ex- chart you prepared in advance.
- Tell students you will read a sentence aloud that is missing a word. Then students must decide which word from the four options in the chart best fits in the blank. Point out that the word choices are listed in the left column and the sentences are in the right column.
- Practice with the first sentence from the Practice Prefix ex- chart.
- Ask students if they know the correct word to complete the sentence and explain how they know. Listen for students identifying the word expelled, because it means to force something or someone out, and using the meaning of the prefix ex- as a clue to determine this meaning.

Check for Understanding

Continue in this manner with the remaining sentences as time permits, as you listen for students identifying the correct word for each sentence by using the meaning of the prefix ex- as a clue. If necessary, ask which words students could eliminate from the list to narrow down the options.

Chapter 7

Women in the Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

What opportunities did the Renaissance movement afford to some wealthy women of the time?

Although many Renaissance women ran a household as expected by the cultural norms of the day, some women became powerful and influential despite all that stood in their way. One such woman was Isabella d’Este.

Isabella was born in the Italian city-state of Ferrara in 1474 CE. Fortunately, her father, the Duke of Ferrara, believed in the importance of educating both his sons and his daughters.

Isabella blossomed into a brilliant student. When she was only six years old, she knew Latin and Greek and played the lute, a popular instrument during the Renaissance, similar to a guitar. She was a feisty little girl who could and would debate anyone on any topic. Other children called her “La Prima Donna” or “The First Lady.”

Isabella d’Este

Engaged at Six!

As was the custom long ago, the Duke of Ferrara arranged marriages for his children. Arranged marriages allowed powerful families to form political ties and alliances with other powerful families. So, at the tender age of six years old, Isabella became engaged to Francesco Gonzaga of Mantua. But he was much older—all of 14!

60

Note: The following guided reading supports are intended for use with Small Group 1.

- Have students silently read page 60 and 61.

The wedding took place when Isabella turned 16, a normal age in those times for a girl to get married. Through this marriage Isabella became related to many ruling families in Italy.

After Isabella moved to Mantua, a beautiful city in northern Italy, she wasted no time getting involved in the politics of the city. Francesco was often away, fighting one battle after another with various city-states and countries. When Francesco was out of town, Isabella skillfully governed the people.

In 1509 CE, while Francesco was leading troops against the city of Venice, he was captured and put in jail for several years. With Francesco gone, it might have seemed like a good opportunity for the princes of unfriendly city-states to try to take over Mantua. But Isabella made it clear to potential enemies that she was very much in charge and they had better not try anything. While Francesco was in prison, she managed to fight off enemies and form strong alliances with other rulers.

Once released from jail, Isabella's husband left to fight more battles. He fought against the French for a few years, and died in 1519 CE.

After that, Isabella led Mantua on her own. She kept her enemies out and made certain that both Mantua and her home city of Ferrara stayed independent and unharmed.

Pronunciation Table

| Word(s)           | CK Code                     |
|-------------------|-----------------------------|
| Francesco Gonzaga | /fran*ches*koe/ /gon*zog*ə/ |

Inferential. In what ways did Isabella d'Este's father's beliefs and behavior influence her life?

- » Isabella's father thought girls should be educated just like boys. When she was only six years old, she knew Latin and Greek and played the lute. He arranged her marriage to a son from a powerful ruling family.

Inferential. How did Isabella's arranged marriage position her for power later in life?

- » Isabella's arranged marriage made her related to many important ruling families in Italy and led her to govern Mantua.

Check for Understanding

Ask students what inferences they can make about the opportunities women had during the Renaissance.

- » Answers may vary, but should include that most women were not powerful or influential during this time and that some women gained power because of whom they married. Direct students back to specific paragraphs in the text, and encourage them to find the evidence that supports their inferences.

- Have students record the answers to questions 1 and 2 on Activity Page 10.3.

Support

What does it mean that Isabella's father arranged her marriage?

- » It means he selected the man she would marry.

Activity Page 10.3

A Passion for the Arts

Not only was Isabella an outstanding ruler, she was also a great patron of the arts. She collected antiques, rare books, and all types of artwork.

Tucked away in the Castle of St. George in Mantua, Isabella built a special room. She called it her grotta, which means “cave.” This treasure chamber contained the works of many of the great artists of the day. Gorgeous paintings hung on the walls of the grotta. In beautifully carved wooden cabinets she kept ancient coins and medals, precious jewels, and gemstones.

Sculptors, writers, and painters visited Isabella’s home often. She employed many of them. In fact, for many years she tried to persuade the great Leonardo da Vinci to paint her portrait. All she could get him to do was a drawing. At one point, he made the excuse that he was too busy working out geometry problems to stop and paint.

Finally, Isabella paid another great Renaissance artist, Titian, to capture her likeness on canvas. Titian did too precise a job. His portrait accurately portrayed Isabella, who was sixty years old at the time. When she looked at the picture, Isabella became furious and demanded that he repaint it. On his second try, Titian wisely made Isabella look a good twenty years younger!

Isabella didn’t forget her fellow women, either. She started a school where young girls could learn Greek, Latin, the arts, philosophy, and literature.

Isabella was an unusual woman for her time. She is justly remembered as the “First Lady of the Renaissance.”

Noble Women

Renaissance women inspired writers to create poetry, sculptors to fashion statues, and artists to paint beautiful portraits. However, the sculptor’s chisel and the painter’s brush were mostly kept out of the hands of women.

Although Renaissance men believed they could do almost anything, they didn’t think the same of women. Men of the Renaissance believed that a young woman born into a noble, wealthy family had three duties: (1) she should marry a rich man from an important family; (2) she should be loyal to that husband; and (3) she should give him sons.

Challenge

The text says Leonardo “made the excuse that he was too busy” to paint Isabella. Based on that phrase, do you believe he wanted to paint her? Why or why not?

- Have students read page 62 silently.

Evaluative. How do Isabella’s achievements compare to the primary expectations for a woman born into a noble, wealthy family?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that Isabella’s achievements as a ruler and patron are astonishing compared to the expectations for women born into wealthy families. Usually noblewomen during this time period were expected only to marry and have children.

Support. Identify Isabella's achievements.

- » Isabella governed the people of Mantua in place of her husband, defended Mantua from invaders, was a great patron of artists and scholars, and established a school for girls. During the Renaissance, ruling, defending against invaders, being a patron, and establishing schools were things usually done only by men.

Support. Identify the primary expectations for both men and women born into noble, wealthy families at this time.

- » A woman born into a noble, wealthy family at this time was expected to get married, be loyal to her husband, and have sons. Women were generally not educated like men were; women were expected to do other things, such as focusing on their family duties, which would leave little time for becoming artists; men of the time did not believe women could do things like paint and sculpt.
- Have students record the answer(s) to question 3 on Activity Page 10.3.

Overcoming Obstacles

Some women overcame the obstacles of their time and became respected artists in their own right. Well-known for her portrait work, Sofonisba Anguissola (1530–1625 CE) is one of the earliest known female artists. Most female artists of the time were the daughters of painters. However, Sofonisba’s father was not a painter but a wealthy nobleman.

The oldest of seven children, Sofonisba had five younger sisters and a brother. Her father, Amilcare Anguissola, read and lived by the famous words of Castiglione’s The Courtier, including the importance of educating young women. Both Sofonisba and her sister Elena lived and trained with prominent local artists. Under her father’s encouragement, Sofonisba received early inspiration from notable artists including Michelangelo. As a young artist, Sofonisba trained three of her younger sisters to be painters.

Her most well-known works include many self-portraits and the famous family portrait Lucia, Minerva, and Europa Anguissola Playing Chess. Lucia, Minerva, and Europa are three of her younger sisters. The painting captures a glimpse of noble family life during this time.

One of the first-known women to paint large figure paintings was

64

the daughter of Italian painter Prospero Fontana. Lavinia Fontana (1552–1614 CE) received patronage from the family of Pope Gregory XIII and painted portraits of many well-known individuals. Recognized for her attention to detail and the use of vibrant colors, her self-portraits and family paintings were reminiscent of Sofonisba Anguissola. Lavinia married lesser-known artist Gian Paolo Zappi, who ultimately worked as her agent.

- Have students silently read page 64.

Evaluative. Compare what Sofonisba's father and Isabella's father did for each of them when they were young to help them accomplish what they did later in life.

- » Both Sofonisba and Isabella were educated at a time when many girls were not. Isabella also had an arranged marriage into a powerful family. Sofonisba had training with prominent local artists.

Inferential. What does it mean that Lavinia Fontana's family paintings "were reminiscent of Sofonisba Anguissola"?

- » It means they were similar to the family paintings created by Sofonisba Anguissola.

Check for Understanding

Ask students what inferences they can make about the opportunities women had during the Renaissance.

- » Answers may vary, but should include that women did not have as many opportunities as men, and that some women had unique opportunities because their family members believed in the importance of educating girls. If necessary, direct students back to specific paragraphs in the text.

- Have students record the answers to questions 4 and 5 on Activity Page 10.3.

Renaissance Style

During the European Renaissance, there was more freedom in the style of dress, and headdresses allowed more hair to show than had previously been considered acceptable. The high collars and starched ruffs, or pleated collars, of this period led to upswept hairstyles that were sometimes formed over a wire frame in a heart shape. In England a variety of beards, mustaches, and hairstyles for men became popular during the reign of Henry VIII. The popularity of Queen Elizabeth I inspired her subjects to wear red wigs or dye their hair red and shave their hairlines to give the appearance of a high forehead like hers.

Toward the end of the 1500s, a red-blond hair color was popularized in paintings by Italian artist Titian. To achieve the color, Venetian women applied mixtures of alum, sulfur, soda, and rhubarb to their hair and sat in the sun to let it dry. A new custom in Renaissance France was to grind flowers into a powder and apply the mixture to hair. Blonde hair was considered especially stylish for women. Women often bleached their hair to make it blonde. Wigs or fake locks of hair made from yellow or white silk were also common.

Clothing was an important status symbol during the Renaissance. The wealthy dressed in fancy clothing. A wealthy person would have a variety of clothes made from fine materials, furs, and silks. Peasants, on the other hand, typically had only one or two sets of clothing. Wealthy men wore colorful tights or stockings with a shirt and tight-fitting coat called a doublet.

Renaissance

- Have students silently read pages 66 and 67.

They also often wore hats. Wealthy women wore long dresses with high waists and puffy sleeves and shoulders. Sometimes their dresses were embellished with embroidery stitched with gold and silver thread. Women had elaborate gold jewelry decorated with expensive jewels like pearls and sapphires. In some areas, laws that had been in effect since the early 1300s prevented the lower classes from wearing nice clothes. In England there were many laws that specified who could wear what types of clothes. Only certain social classes could wear clothes of specific colors and materials. In some areas only nobles were allowed to wear fur.

Marriages to Keep the Peace

During the Renaissance, in upper-class families most marriages were arranged by parents, usually while the children were still young. Therefore, men and women did not usually date each other, fall in love, and then get married.

Fathers preferred that their daughters marry rich and powerful men from other city-states or countries. There was a good reason for this. When the daughter of a prince in one city-state married the son of a ruler in another city-state, the two families would be much less likely to go to war. With a son, daughter, and grandchildren between them, the two rulers would have too much in common to fight each other.

This practice of arranged political marriages became common all across Europe. After a while, many of the ruling families were related to each other.

The wedding of Catherine de' Medici to Prince Henry of France

Literal. Provide an example of how a monarch influenced how people looked during the Renaissance.

- » Because Queen Elizabeth I had red hair and a high forehead, other women dyed their hair red and shaved their hairlines to look like her.

Inferential. If you saw a person walking down the street during the Renaissance period, how would you know their degree of wealth and social class?

- » You would be able to determine a person's degree of wealth and social class by their fashion. Peasants often had only one or two sets of clothing, and in some places there were laws against lower classes wearing nice clothes. Sometimes laws specified who could wear what types of clothes. Wealthy people had a variety of clothes, often made of fine materials such as fur and silk, of high style such as doublets and puffy sleeves, and complemented with accessories such as jewelry and hats.

- Have students record the answer(s) to question 6 on Activity Page 10.3.

Literal. How did many of the European ruling families become related to one another?

- » Fathers of young girls in upper-class families would arrange the marriages of their daughters to rich and ruling families from other city-states.

Support. Why did the European ruling families practice arranged marriage?

- » When the daughter of a ruler in one city-state married the son of a ruler in another city-state, the two families would be much less likely to go to war.

DISCUSSION AND WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

Note: Question 1 relates to The Big Question of this chapter.

- Bring students back together and use the following question to discuss the chapter.

Evaluative. Describe the opportunities the Renaissance movement afforded to some wealthy women that were not typical for women at that time.

- » Answers may vary, but may include that, typically, although men in the Renaissance were thought to be able to do anything, this was not the view of women. In general, a woman was considered to have three duties: (1) marry a rich man from an important family, (2) be loyal to her husband, and (3) give her husband sons. There were exceptions to the typical role of women during the Renaissance. Some wealthy families educated their daughters and supported their interests in art and learning. Some women ruled and defended city-states. Others amassed large collections of art and supported artists with their patronage. Still other women trained with prominent artists and became renowned for their own works of art.
- Tell students they will take home Activity Page 10.4 to read and complete for homework.

WORD WORK: FORTUNATELY (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter you read “Fortunately, her father, the Duke of Ferrara, believed in the importance of educating both his sons and his daughters.”
2. Say the word fortunately with me.
3. Fortunately means luckily or by good fortune.
4. I didn’t know it was going to rain; fortunately, I had an umbrella in my book bag.
5. What are some examples of times when you felt lucky? Be sure to use the word fortunately in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “_____(situation); fortunately, _____(solution).”
6. What part of speech is the word fortunately?
  - » adverb

- Use a Making Choices activity for follow-up.
    - An antonym, or word with an opposite meaning, of fortunately is unfortunately. I am going to read several sentences that have a blank. Fill in the blank with either the word fortunately or its opposite, unfortunately.
1. I was running late to the bus stop and was scared I was going to miss the bus; _____, the bus driver saw me running and waited for me.
    - » fortunately
  2. I forgot to have my mom sign the permission slip for the field trip; _____, it rained and the field trip was postponed for the next week.

Lesson 10: Reading and Writing Informational Texts: Making Inferences

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will continue to plan an informational piece about a person from the Renaissance by gathering evidence related to the topic.

TEKS 5.7.E; TEKS 5.13.B; TEKS 5.13.C

MODEL TAKING BIOGRAPHY NOTES (10 MIN.)

- Remind students that in Lesson 8 they began gathering evidence for their informational pieces. Review that the piece will be a biography about an artist from the Renaissance.

TEKS 5.7.E Interact with sources in meaningful ways such as notetaking, annotating, freewriting, or illustrating; TEKS 5.13.B Develop and follow a research plan with adult assistance; TEKS 5.13.C Identify and gather relevant information from a variety of sources.

- Tell students that you learn more about a topic when you gather information from more than one source. So far, they have gathered information about the person they selected as the subject of a biography from their main source, the Reader. Today students will use a second source to gather more information for their biography.
- Explain that information sources come in many forms: books, websites, video, interviews, and more. The second source students will use today is a document, which is an important paper that provides information.
- Discuss how multiple sources may confirm (tell the same thing), complete (fill in gaps in information), or contradict (tell something different) each other. As a researcher, students should know the following:
  - Information that confirms provides confidence in the knowledge someone already has. Repeated information should not be written down again when taking notes. The source, nonetheless, should be written down.
  - Information that completes helps fill in knowledge gaps. This information should be grouped with the related information when taking notes.
  - Information that contradicts creates questions about the knowledge. Additional sources should be consulted to provide clarity and to help the student determine the most accurate information.
- Have students refer to Activity Page 8.4 as you model selecting information from a second source about Raphael.
- Refer to the Biography Notes Chart from Lesson 8. If you did not fill in the notes from Lesson 8, remind students of the information you identified for Raphael from the Reader as you model.
  - For “Early Years”: birth name was Raffaello Sanzio; born in 1483; lost his parents when he was a child; by eleven years old he was working as an apprentice in an art studio; 1504 moved to Florence; studied the techniques of Michelangelo and Leonardo
  - For “Projects/Accomplishments”: the painting The School of Athens, located in the Vatican in Rome, commissioned by Pope Julius II, reflecting admiration for the ancient Greeks; multiple paintings of the Madonna and Jesus’s family for patrons in Florence
  - For “What made him great?”: masterful representation of natural, human form; application of perspective

Writing

Writing Texts to Explain
Information

Beginning

Allow students to color-code information for each note-taking category by highlighting evidence in the text. Consider allowing students to use combination notes (writing both pictures and words) when recording notes on Activity Page 8.4.

Intermediate

Give clear examples of what information or key points are important to record on Activity Page 8.4.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for note-taking as needed.

ELPS 4.G

- Read the Raphael Second Source document. Underline or highlight relevant information in the text and think aloud about which category the information falls under.
  - For “Early Years”: n/a
  - For “Projects/Accomplishments”: worked in Duke of Urbino’s court; portrait of Castiglione; friends with Castiglione
  - For “What made him great?”: n/a
  - Point out that the mention of painting in the Vatican is confirming information, which does not need to be repeated in the notes.
- Tell students they will add their second source to their list of sources on Activity Page 8.4. Remind them to underline the title, use “2014” for the date of publication, and write “document” for the source.

Note: The title should be in italics if word-processed.

PRACTICE TAKING BIOGRAPHY NOTES (15 MIN.)

- Distribute copies of the Second Source documents about Brunelleschi, Leonardo, and Michelangelo, and have students start taking notes. Tell them to first complete taking notes from the Reader if needed. If they have completed taking notes from the Reader, they should read and take notes from their second source.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the room and check in with students. Check that students are appropriately incorporating information from their second source. If necessary, ask students if they are basing their decision to add information on whether it is confirming, completing, or contradicting; also check that they are using fragments and paraphrasing for note-taking.

WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Prompt students to record their second source at the bottom of Activity Page 8.4 if they have not already done so.
- Have a few students share a note they added from the second source and explain why it is complementary information.
- Feedback. Provide reinforcing or corrective feedback for students' identification of complementary information from a second source.
- Collect Activity Page 8.4 to review and monitor student progress. Written feedback may include comments such as:
  - These words and phrases will help you include interesting information about what made him great.
  - Great job working in information from your second source! I noticed you added only new information. Way to go!
  - You've included important facts about this painting. What about it was interesting to you? Including this will make your writing more interesting to read.
  - Skim back through your sources and see if you can find two more facts about his early years.

- It may be helpful to refer back to the Pronunciation/Syllabication chart.

| Word        | CK Code              | Syllable Type                          |

| sculptor    | /skəlp*ter/          | ə*r-controlled                         |

- Students might make the following errors:
  - achievement: using 'ee' or 'ea' instead of 'ie' for /ee/
  - create: using 'ee' instead of 'e' for /ee/
  - architect: using 'c' or 'k' or 'ck' instead of 'ch' for the first /k/
  - culture, literature: using 'cher' instead of 'ture' for /cher/
  - imagine: using 'i' instead of 'i-e' for /in/
  - invention: using 'shun' instead of 'tion' for /shən/
  - movement: using 'oo' instead of 'o_e' for /oo/
  - rebirth: using 'er' for 'ir' for /er/
  - sculptor: using 'er' for 'or' for /er/
- Although any of the above student-error scenarios may occur, misspellings may be due to many other factors. You may find it helpful to use the analysis chart to record any student errors. For example:
  - Is the student consistently making errors on specific vowels? Which ones?
  - Is the student consistently making errors at the ends of the words?
  - Is the student consistently making errors in multisyllable words but not single-syllable words?
- Also examine the dictated sentence for errors in capitalization and punctuation.

Reading

Primary Focus: Students describe the relationship between the cultural norms set for women in the Renaissance and ways women challenged those

✚ norms. TEKS 5.6.H; TEKS 5.7.C

REVIEW THE CHAPTER (10 MIN.)

- Using the Answer Key for Activity Page 10.4, review student responses on Activity Page 10.4, which was assigned for homework.

✚ TEKS 5.6.H Synthesize information to create new understanding; TEKS 5.7.C Use text evidence to support an appropriate response.

- Tell students they will reread Chapter 7, “Women in the Renaissance.”
- Have students turn to the table of contents, locate the chapter, and then turn to the first page of the chapter.
- Review the chapter using the following questions:

1. What does the word norms mean?

- » standards of acceptable behavior

2. How did the people of the Renaissance decide whom to marry?

- » Fathers arranged marriages for their children while they were still young.

3. What practice resulted in many of the ruling families of Europe being related to one another?

- » Political marriages were arranged between ruling families all across Europe because these alliances made it less likely that the various city-states would go to war with one another.

- You may want to review the following vocabulary words before you have the students reread the chapter:

norms, n. customs; standards of acceptable behavior (60)

fortunately, adv. luckily; by good fortune (60)

alliance, n. a formal agreement to work together (alliances) (60)

fashion, 1. v. to make, shape, or form; 2. n. a popular way of dressing during a particular time or among a particular group of people (62)

obstacle, n. a challenge; something that blocks the way or makes it more difficult to do something else (obstacles) (64)

prominent, adj. important; well-known; easily seen (64)

reminiscent, adj. similar to something else (64)

status symbol, n. something someone owns that shows he or she is wealthy or important (66)

- Remind students they can look up a word in the glossary if they forget its meaning.
- Have one student read The Big Question at the beginning of the chapter. Ensure students understand the meaning of The Big Question before reading the chapter.
  - What opportunities did the Renaissance movement afford to some wealthy women of the time?

REREAD “WOMEN IN THE RENAISSANCE” (20 MIN.)

- Pair students to read and discuss the chapter.
- Using established procedures, have students read the chapter in pairs. Students may ask their partner for help sounding out or defining words, as necessary. Have students make a note of vocabulary, phrases, or concepts they do not understand, noting the page number, so they may seek clarification.
- Have students complete Activity Page 11.1 with their partners while they read.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students. Check that students are using evidence from the text to describe the cultural norms during the Renaissance and evidence describing how women challenged these norms. If necessary, remind students of the meaning of the term “cultural norms” and give examples of modern-day cultural norms.

DISCUSS THE CHAPTER AND WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

Note: Activity Page 11.1 and questions 1-3 relate to The Big Question of this chapter.

- Review the correct answers to Activity Page 11.1 with the whole class by recording student responses on the Women in the Renaissance Chart. Use the following questions to prompt discussion about the chart.
1. Literal. What were the cultural norms for women in the Renaissance?
    - » Answers may vary, but may include that they were expected to marry men (usually rich ones from important families) chosen for them by their fathers; they were expected to marry at a young age; they were expected to be loyal to their husbands; they were expected to give their husbands sons; they were not expected to receive the type of education usually given to men; they were not expected or permitted to do some of the things men were doing, such as paint or sculpt; and they were expected to wear the clothes, jewelry, and hairstyles that were status symbols of their wealth.

3. Inferential. How did Sofonisba Anguissola challenge the cultural norms for women in the Renaissance?
  - » Answers may vary, but may include that she became one of the earliest-known female artists whose father was not an artist; she trained with prominent local artists; and she trained three of her sisters to be painters.
4. Inferential. How did Lavinia Fontana challenge the cultural norms for women in the Renaissance?
  - » Answers may vary, but should include that she was one of the first-known women to paint large figure paintings; she received patronage from Pope Gregory XIII; and she painted portraits of many well-known people.
5. Evaluative. Think-Pair-Share. Which of these three women do you think did the most to challenge the norms set for women during the Renaissance? Use evidence from the text to support your answer.
  - » Answers may vary, but should be supported with evidence from the text.

WORD WORK: OBSTACLE (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter you read, "Some women overcame the obstacles of their time and became respected artists in their own right."
2. Say the word obstacle with me.
3. An obstacle is a challenge; something that makes it more difficult to do something else.
4. After the storm, tree branches in the road created obstacles for drivers trying to get home.

5. What are some obstacles you have faced before? Be sure to use the word obstacle in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students' responses to make complete sentences: "One obstacle I have faced was ____."
6. What part of speech is the word obstacle?
  - » noun
  - Use a Synonym and Antonym activity for follow-up.
  - What are some synonyms, or words that have a similar meaning, of obstacle?
    - Prompt students to provide words such as barrier, difficulty, and problem.
  - What are some words or phrases that are antonyms, or words that have the opposite meaning, of obstacle?
    - Prompt students to provide words such as aid, assistance, and support.

GRAMMAR (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students use correlative conjunctions when writing or speaking.

 TEKS 5.11.D

- Tell students that today they will learn about sets of words that go together called correlative conjunctions.
- Write the word correlative on the board. Circle co. Tell students that co means "together." Correlative conjunctions are words that work together in pairs to relate one part of a sentence to another part of a sentence.
- Refer to the Correlative Conjunctions Poster. Explain that these are just four examples of correlative conjunctions that are commonly used.
- Have different students read the example sentences on the poster. After each sentence, ask students what each pair of conjunctions show or indicate to the reader.

 TEKS 5.11.D Edit drafts using standard English conventions.

Intermediate

Advanced/Advanced High

ELPS 5.F

| Correlative Conjunctions | Function    | Example   |
|--------------------------|-------------|---|
| either/or         | alternative | After dinner, we can either play a board game or watch a movie. |
| neither/nor       | alternative | The baby could neither crawl nor walk yet.                      |
| both/and          | addition    | Both Lou and Nader are absent today.                            |
| not only/but also | addition    | Abeni is not only smart, but also kind.                         |

- Discuss the following about each correlative conjunction:
  - The correlative conjunctions either/or show an alternative, indicating that you can choose between two things: You can play a board game or watch a movie.
  - The correlative conjunctions neither/nor also show an alternative, indicating that the two things cannot happen: The baby could not crawl or walk.
  - The correlative conjunctions both/and show addition by adding two subjects or objects together: Lou and Nader are absent.
  - The correlative conjunctions not only/but also show addition by adding two nouns, two verbs, or two adjectives together: Abeni is smart and kind.
- Have students turn to Activity Page 11.2. Read the directions and guide students through the first sentence, making sure they are able to complete the sentence with the correct correlative conjunction.
- Have students complete Activity Page 11.2 independently.

Support

Students may complete Activity Page 11.2 in partners, or you may wish to complete it as a teacher-guided activity.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students. Check that students are able to complete each sentence with the correct correlative conjunction. If necessary, remind students of what correlative conjunctions are, and ask what how the first part of the sentence relates to the second part of the sentence.

- Collect Activity Page 11.2 to review and grade at a later time.

MORPHOLOGY (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students use the root serv as a clue to determine the meaning of words. TEKS 5.3.C

- Remind students that prefixes are added to the beginning of root words, and suffixes are added to the end of root words to make new words. Today they will focus on a word part that is a Latin root and can appear at different places within a word.
- Write the words preserve, serve, reserve, service, and servant on the board. Invite students to chorally read the words aloud. Ask students to look closely at these words to see what they all have in common. Listen for students noticing that they all have “serv” in them.
- Explain to students that serv is a Latin root and write it on the board or chart paper. Tell students that it is pronounced /serv/.
- Explain to students that a root is a main element of a word that forms the base of its meaning.
- Ask students to think about the meanings of these words, and then turn, and talk with a partner about what the root serv might mean. Cold call students to discuss the meaning of this root, and, if necessary, explain that serv means “to save, protect, or serve.” Add this meaning to the poster.
- Remind students that adding prefixes and suffixes can change the part of speech of a root. Tell students that words with the root serv can be nouns, verbs, or adjectives.
- Point out preserve on the board. Briefly discuss the part of speech and the meaning of the word. (Preserve is a verb. It means to protect something in order to keep it safe or in good condition.)
- Remind students that they read about how Muslim scholars helped to preserve the classical writings of ancient Greek philosophers and scientists by translating their works into Arabic.
- Have students provide sentences using the word preserve. (Answers may vary.)
- Continue in this manner for the remaining serv words, using the following chart as a guide.

 TEKS 5.3.C Identify the meaning of and use words with affixes such as trans-, super-, -ive, and -logy and roots such as geo and photo.

Check for Understanding

As you continue through the remaining serv words, listen for students using the meaning of serv discussed earlier in the segment and drawing on their knowledge of prefix and suffix meanings. If necessary, remind students that serv means to save, protect, or serve and point out any prefix or suffix the word being discussed may have.

Note: You will not write the information in the shaded columns on the board/chart paper, as that information is intended for use during oral instruction. Complete as many examples as time permits.

| Affixed Word    | Meaning   | Example Sentence   |
|-----------------|---|--|
| serve    | (verb) to give food or drink to people; to perform a duty or job                                    | The waiter served the guests their dinner.  |
| service  | (noun) an act of helping; work performed by one who serves; a religious ceremony                    | The firefighter was praised for her service to the city.                                    |
| servant  | (noun) a person who is hired to do household duties such as cleaning and cooking                    | The royal family had many servants working in their palace.  |
| reserved | (adjective) put aside or saved for a particular purpose; not openly expressing feelings or opinions | The front rows of the theater are reserved for the parents of students who are in the play. |
| conserve | (verb) to keep safe from loss, waste, or destruction  | It is important to conserve fresh water because the earth's supply is limited.              |

- Have students turn to Activity Page 11.3. Briefly review the directions. Complete the first sentence together as a class. Have students complete the rest of Activity Page 11.3 for homework.

SPELLING (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students spell grade-appropriate words correctly. TEKS 5.2.B.iii

- Explain that students will practice ten words related to the content of the Reader, Patrons, Artists, and Scholars. These words do not follow one single spelling pattern. Tell students they will be assessed on these words and will be asked to write a dictated sentence including one or more of these words in Lesson 15.

TEKS 5.2.B.iii Demonstrate and apply spelling knowledge by spelling multisyllabic words with multiple sound-spelling patterns.

- This list includes words from the Reader and their antonyms. Review that antonyms are the words opposite in meaning to one another. Have students provide a few examples of antonyms.
- Introduce the words by first sharing a word from the Reader, and then providing its antonym, writing each one on the board or chart paper. First, say the word aloud; second, sound out each syllable, naming each letter aloud as you write it. Continue syllable by syllable until the word is spelled correctly. You may wish to use the pronunciation chart to guide students in saying the words.

Note: Remember to point out specific spelling patterns in each word and their relationship to the sounds and spellings on the Individual Code Chart (Activity Page SR.3).

| Word from Reader        | Antonym                |
|-------------------------|------------------------|
| 1. apprentice    | 2. expert       |
| 3. democracy     | 4. tyranny      |
| 5. extraordinary | 6. conventional |
| 7. rivalry       | 8. harmony      |
| 9. stunning      | 10. mundane     |

Pronunciation/Syllabication Chart

- As you introduce and write each word, it may be helpful if you point out particular spelling patterns within each word and show students where these spellings are reflected on the Individual Code Chart. For example, you might note that the word rivalry includes a schwa sound (/ə/) in the second syllable of the word (that is, the second syllable is pronounced /vəl/, but spelled 'val') and then point out the 'al' spelling for /əl/ that is included on the Individual Code Chart.

| Words                | CK Code               | Syllable Type                                |

| conventional  | /kən*ven*shən*əl/     | *ə*closed*ə*ə                                |
| rivalry       | /rie*vəl*ree/         | open*ə*open                                  |
| harmony       | /har*mə*nee/          | r-controlled*ə*open                          |
| stunning      | /stun*ing/            | closed*closed                                |

Chapter 8

The Northern Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

How did the Renaissance movement in Italy impact the artists of northern Europe?

Until now, we have only read about the Renaissance movement in Italy. The Renaissance reached other parts of Europe as well.

Scholars and artists in other countries were also enjoying a rebirth of learning. Sometimes these scholars and artists visited the city-states of Italy, especially Florence, and brought ideas and artwork back to their home countries. These countries included Germany and the region that used to be called Flanders, which is now part of the Netherlands and Belgium.

We are going to read about four painters: two were German, and two were Flemish, which means they were from Flanders. Because they lived in countries north of Italy, people often say that they are part of “The Northern Renaissance.”

The Master of Detail

Jan van Eyck was born in about 1390 CE. He lived in Flanders. Van Eyck’s countrymen called him the “King of the Painters.” He is one of the early figures involved in the Northern Renaissance. Van Eyck painted at about the same time that Brunelleschi was working as an architect in Italy.

Van Eyck developed new kinds of oil paint that gave his pictures a sharp and brilliant look. He discovered new ways to show light and texture in his paintings. He could realistically portray the tiniest details in a painting. In a painting of Giovanni Arnolfini, a portrait that van Eyck painted for an Italian businessman living in Flanders, van Eyck emphasized the texture of the subjects’ clothing, as well as the light pouring through the open window.

- Have students silently read pages 68 and 69.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing the gist of pages 68 and 69 and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking aloud about the gist of this section.

- Repeat for the remainder of the chapter, having students read sections of the chapter silently and then discussing the gist of these sections.

REREAD “THE NORTHERN RENAISSANCE” (15 MIN.)

- Refer to the Map of Europe during the Renaissance at the back of the Reader. Have students locate Flanders.

Check for Understanding

How did van Eyck's innovations add to the innovations of Italian Renaissance artists?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that van Eyck discovered new ways to show light and texture, which could add new features to the lifelike paintings that were the focus of Italian Renaissance artists. If necessary, direct students back to specific paragraphs in the text.

Dürer: Self-Portrait of the Artist

Albrecht Dürer was born in 1471 CE to Hungarian parents living in Germany. (He was just a little older than Michelangelo, who was born in 1475 CE.) Dürer was fascinated by the artistic developments happening in Italy at the time. He made two trips to Italy in order to learn as much as he could from the great masters.

Dürer was a proud supporter of the Renaissance movement. The very fact that he painted so many portraits and self-portraits demonstrates his desire to understand the humanity of his subjects. It shows his belief in the importance of the individual, especially one particular individual—himself!

Dürer began sketching himself when he was only 13 and would continue to capture his likeness in self-portraits throughout his career. In the Self-Portrait he painted in 1498 CE, Dürer shows himself as a handsome young man with a taste for fine clothes. It is a painting that reveals how much he has been influenced by his Italian masters. In the famous Self-Portrait painted in 1500 CE, Dürer looks directly at us with bold, confident eyes. Many portraits at the time showed the person from the side, or a three-quarters angle, rather than head on. Dürer perfected the art of portraiture. His keen artist's eye captured not only a range of human expressions and emotions, but also that of skin tone and texture.

Dürer was not only a great painter, he was also a master of the art of making prints with woodcuts or engravings. As a young apprentice he learned how to make woodcuts by carving pictures in blocks of wood, as well as engravings by using a sharp tool to cut an image into a metal plate. He would spread ink on the carved wood or the metal plate then print the image on paper. Dürer's woodcuts and engravings made him famous, partly because they could be quickly and easily reproduced, so many people could see

- Invite students to read page 70 and the caption on page 71 independently.

- Refer to the Map of Europe during the Renaissance at the back of the Reader. Point to the Holy Roman Empire, which encompasses what is now Germany.

Evaluative. The text says, “Dürer was a proud supporter of the Renaissance movement.” Find two pieces of evidence from the text that support this statement.

- » Answers may vary, but may include the fact that he painted so many portraits and self-portraits in an attempt to understand the humanity of his subjects; Dürer’s expertise at capturing human expressions and emotion; and the fact that he perfected the art of portraiture, which focused on the individual.

How did Dürer's work differ from artists of the Renaissance movement in Italy?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that he captured his subjects head-on, captured a range of human expressions and emotion, and captured a range of skin tone and texture.

Pieter Bruegel the Elder

Pieter Bruegel the Elder was born in the city of Antwerp, which is in the country we now call Belgium. (He is called the Elder because his son, Pieter the Younger, was a painter, too.) Like Venice and Florence in Italy, Antwerp was a busy trading city with many banks and businesses—which meant there were many wealthy people ready to buy works of art. Most of these people wanted paintings in the style of the great Italian masters such as Michelangelo and Raphael. So Bruegel traveled to Italy to see what he could learn.

When it came to painting, however, Bruegel went his own way. You won't find heroic-looking, muscular figures such as the ones Michelangelo painted on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. You won't find many scenes from classical mythology in Bruegel's work. His paintings are very different from anything like Botticelli's Birth of Venus.

One of the few paintings in which Bruegel did choose to use a classical myth as the theme is Landscape with the Fall of Icarus. It's as though Bruegel were saying, "What's all the fuss about these myths? I'll give you a painting about a myth, but in my own way."

Challenge

Tell students that many poets, including William Carlos Williams and W. H. Auden, have written poems describing this painting. Have students try writing their own poem about Bruegel's Landscape with the Fall of Icarus.

| Word(s)        | CK Code              |
|----------------|----------------------|
| Pieter Bruegel | /pee*ter/ /broi*gel/ |

- Cold call students to read pages 72 and 73 aloud.

Bruegel's way was to make the myth only a small part of the painting. He chose the Greek myth of Daedalus, the master inventor, and his son Icarus. For King Minos, Daedalus designed a giant maze called the Labyrinth, from which no one could escape. Later, when the king grew angry with Daedalus, he locked him in the Labyrinth along with Icarus. But Daedalus soon came up with a plan to escape. Little by little, he gathered many feathers, then fastened them together with wax to make wings like those of a bird. He and his son used the wings to fly out of the Labyrinth. But in his excitement Icarus ignored his father's warnings not to fly too high. Up and up he flew until the sun began to melt the wax. The feathers fell from his wings, and down plunged Icarus into the sea.

Bruegel's painting shows the fall of Icarus, though at first glance you might not even notice it. Look at the bottom right corner of the painting. Do you see two legs sticking out of the water near the ship? That's Icarus falling into the water—and that's all of the myth Bruegel chose to show. Bruegel draws our attention away from the myth and makes us look at everyday life; at the farmer plowing and the shepherd with his flock.

Bruegel is best known for his pictures of everyday people. For example, he painted Peasant Wedding (also known as The Wedding Feast) in the late 1560s. Bruegel shows the peasants as he saw them. He doesn't try to "prettify" the scene. This is not a fancy feast. The simple food is being carried on rough boards. In the foreground, you can see a child licking her fingers, making sure she gets every last bit out of the bowl. In the middle left, the piper is looking hungrily at the food passing by. He's probably hoping there will be some food left for him after he finishes playing!

Bruegel's sons, grandsons, and even great-grandsons became artists. But none equaled or surpassed his great works.

Refer to the Map of Europe during the Renaissance at the back of the Reader. Have students locate Antwerp, a city in what is now Belgium.

Check for Understanding

What did Bruegel do differently from Italian Renaissance artists?

- » Bruegel generally chose to paint everyday scenes instead of religious or mythological scenes. Even when he painted Landscape with the Fall of Icarus, based on the myth of Daedalus and Icarus, Icarus is not a central figure in the painting; only his legs are painted.

Hans Holbein the Younger

German painter, draftsman, and designer Hans Holbein the Younger (1497–1543 CE) came from a family of notable artists. His father, Hans Holbein the Elder, was a renowned artist. His uncle and brother were acclaimed artists, too. Following the tradition of Albrecht Dürer, Hans Holbein the Younger was a master portrait artist. He knew many famous humanist scholars of the time and painted many of their portraits. For example, he created portraits of the great Renaissance scholar Erasmus and the English humanist Sir Thomas More. Hans Holbein the Younger was painting in Europe when religious division created a movement called the Reformation. He worked and painted at the court of King Henry VIII during this time of religious upheaval when the English Church split apart from the Catholic Church and the pope. He painted government ministers, Church leaders, kings, queens and at the time, controversial religious leaders. The leaders of the English Reformation asked

Hans Holbein to create art that promoted the king as the new head of the Church and the new religious movement.

Art in every form was used to denounce the pope and the old Church. Men like Martin Luther and John Calvin challenged the authority of the Catholic Church, as well as its doctrine.

Hans Holbein the Younger created a body of work that allows us to know the faces of the people who helped transform Western Europe.

- Read page 75 aloud.
- Refer to the Map of Europe during the Renaissance at the back of the Reader. Have students locate the Holy Roman Empire, or what is now Germany, and England.

Literal. Why did the leaders of the English Reformation ask Holbein to create art?

- » The leaders of the English Reformation asked Holbein to create art to denounce the pope and the old Church and promote the king and the new religious movement.

Support. What new religious movement occurring during the time of Hans Holbein was he painting?

- » The new religious movement was the English Reformation, which was when the English Church split from the Catholic Church. The English Reformation challenged the Catholic Church's authority and doctrine.

DISCUSS THE CHAPTER AND WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

Note: Question 1 relates to The Big Question of this chapter.

- Have students look at the following questions on Activity Page 12.2 as you explain the directions. Tell students that they should include at least two pieces of evidence to support their response, and remind them they may have marked this evidence with sticky notes or in the margin.
1. Evaluative. How did the Renaissance movement in Italy impact the artists of Northern Europe? Provide examples to support your answer.
    - » Answers may vary, but may include that the Renaissance movement in Italy caused a rebirth of learning, and the artists of Northern Europe also experienced this revived focus on learning.
  2. Evaluative. In what ways did the artists in Northern Europe differ from artists of the Renaissance movement in Italy?
    - » Answers may vary but should include that the artists in Northern Europe placed less emphasis on ancient Greek and Roman and religious subject matter and paid increased attention to details of light and texture and highlighted contemporary issues (Bruegel depicting peasant life; Holbein depicting religious division); etc.
- Tell students to take home Activity Page 12.3 to read to a family member for fluency.

WORD WORK: PROMOTE (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter you read, “The leaders of the English Reformation asked Hans Holbein to create art that promoted the king as the new head of the Church and the new religious movement.”
  2. Say the word promote with me.
  3. Promote means to publicize and support.
  4. The colorful posters in the cafeteria promoted healthy lunches to school children.
  5. What are some examples of things you would like to see promoted in your school? Be sure to use the word promote in your response.
- Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “I would like to see _____ promoted because _____.”

Lesson 12: Reading and Writing Informational Texts:

Making Inferences

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will draft an informational piece about a person from the Renaissance by using reasons and gathered evidence related to the topic.

 TEKS 5.11.B.i; TEKS 5.11.B.ii; TEKS 5.12.B; TEKS 5.13.E

MODEL DRAFTING A BIOGRAPHY (10 MIN.)

Activity Page 8.4

- Tell students they will begin drafting their biography by referring to the completed Biography Notes chart from Activity Page 8.4.
- Ask students what the topic of this example biography will be. Listen for students identifying Raphael's life as the topic. Ask students what a good title would be for the piece. Listen for responses like, "The Life of Raphael," or simply "Raphael."
- As a class, decide on a title and model setting up the title on the board/chart paper.
  - As you write the title, tell students it should be centered on the page, and in bold (if word processing), or underlined (if handwriting).
- Point out that this piece will include headings. Ask students to refer to Activity Page 8.4 and think about what some logical headings may be for this piece. Listen for responses like, "Early Years," "Projects/Accomplishments," or "What made him great?"

 TEKS 5.11.B Develop drafts into a focused, structured, and coherent piece of writing by: (i) organizing with purposeful structure, including an introduction, transitions, and a conclusion; (ii) developing an engaging idea reflecting depth of thought with specific facts and details; TEKS 5.12.B Compose informational texts, including brief compositions that convey information about a topic, using a clear central idea and genre characteristics and craft; TEKS 5.13.E Demonstrate understanding of information gathered.

- As a class, decide on the first heading and model setting up the heading on the board/chart paper.
  - As you write the first heading, tell students the headings should be left justified, and in bold (if word processing), or underlined (if handwriting).
- Model beginning to draft the biography using the Raphael information.
- Explain to students that the topic of the first paragraph will be Raphael's early years.
- Remind students that most of their notes are in sentence fragments, which are incomplete sentences because they do not include a subject and/or predicate, or do not express a complete idea.
- Tell them the next step is to select information from the notes about Raphael's early years to draft complete sentences.
- Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, brainstorming at least two possible topic sentences for this paragraph. Cold call several students to share their topic sentences and record on the displayed Informational Paragraph Plan. Listen for responses like:
  - The great Renaissance artist, Raphael, was named Raffaello Sanzio when he was born in 1483 CE.
  - Born in 1483 CE, Raphael Sanzio was a great Renaissance artist.
- If necessary, think aloud as you decide to lead with “birth name was Raffaello Sanzio” and “born in 1483,” to compose the initial sentence. Explain that you selected two notes related to the same concept, or general idea about Raphael—his birth—to put together in a sentence.
- As you write the initial sentence on the board/chart paper, remind students to indent the first sentence of each paragraph.
  - The great Renaissance artist, Raphael, was named Raffaello Sanzio when he was born in 1483 CE.
- Remind students that strong informational paragraphs include several reasons that support the topic sentence. Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing possible reasons that support the topic. Cold call several students to share their reasons. Listen for responses like:
  - During his childhood, he lost both of his parents.
  - Other examples using evidence from the completed Biography Notes Chart from Activity Page 8.4

Writing
Writing Texts to Explain
Information

Beginning

Provide 1:1 prompting and support for students while drafting their informational pieces. Consider providing sentence or paragraph frames for students to use.

Intermediate

Have students practice their pieces orally prior to writing it. Provide a bank of transitional words or phrases to choose from to support organization of the piece.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for drafting their informational paragraphs as needed.

ELPS 5.G

Support

Have students who may benefit from more guided practice with composing sentences join you in a small group, while those who demonstrate a strong understanding of composing sentences continue working independently.

- If necessary, think aloud as you follow the initial sentence with “lost his parents when he was a child” and compose the second sentence.
  - During his childhood, he lost both of his parents.
- Point out the use of during as a signal phrase for sequence. Remind students that biography writing often follows the sequence of events in the person’s life, and have them refer to the list of Sequence Words and Phrases on display.
- Explain that this sequence of information creates a logical flow because providing a fact about Raphael’s childhood after information about his birth keeps the information in chronological order, or the order in which events happened in his life.
- Continue in this fashion, writing and projecting for additional sentences and sections until students have had adequate modeling to begin their own pieces. Leave model displayed for students to reference.

PRACTICE DRAFTING A BIOGRAPHY (25 MIN.)

- Tell students to take out Activity Page 8.4 and their writing journals, and begin drafting. Remind students to start by setting up their title and the first heading.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they write. Ensure students are formatting their paragraphs correctly and using their notes to write sentences with reasons and gathered evidence related to the topic. If necessary, have students circle the information from their notes as they select it for each new sentence and then cross it off once each sentence is drafted.

WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Have a few students share a section they drafted.
- Feedback. Provide reinforcing or corrective feedback about the logical flow of information and the appropriate use of sequence words and phrases.
- Collect biography drafts to review and monitor student progress. Written feedback may include comments such as:
  - You put information into a logical sequence as you drafted. Way to go!
  - The sentence I underlined is a fragment. Decide what's missing: subject, predicate, or both, and complete the sentence.
  - The sequence phrase I circled is a little awkward. See if a different phrase or no phrase at all would work better.
  - Great job stating reasons related to your topic and using evidence to support your reasons!

  2. What did artists of the Northern Renaissance focus on in their work?
    - » The artists of the Northern Renaissance focused on details in their work.
  3. How were Northern Renaissance artists influenced by the Italian Renaissance movement?
    - » Northern Renaissance artists were influenced by the Italian Renaissance movement's emphasis on the naturalistic human form and expression.

- Explain to students that, like in previous lessons, they will be reading this chapter several times. Remind students that the first time they read it, they might not understand every word or idea. Remind students that good readers read texts over and over for different reasons. Tell students that the first time they read this chapter, they will read for gist.
- If necessary, invite students to turn and talk, discussing what it means to read for gist. Listen for students explaining that it means “to think about what the section of the text is mostly about.”

Chapter 9

Popular Prose on Page and Stage

THE BIG QUESTION

How did writers, such as Cervantes and Shakespeare, embody the ideals of the Renaissance movement?

Painting and architecture were features of the Renaissance, but so too was literature. Talented and highly original writers appeared and their work transformed the literary landscape. Miguel de Cervantes was one of these writers.

When Miguel de Cervantes published the first part of Don Quixote in 1605 CE, the novel was read widely by literate members of society. It became a popular novel in later centuries. It has been translated from Spanish into more than a hundred languages. Only the Bible has been translated into more languages than Don Quixote.

Bad Luck Trails a Good Man

Miguel de Cervantes was born in Spain in 1547 CE. As a young man, Cervantes published some poems, but he did not set out to be a writer. Instead he became a soldier. He joined a Spanish regiment stationed in Naples.

After six years as a soldier, Cervantes headed back to Spain. With him, he carried letters that gloriously described his military service. He thought these papers might help him find a good job when he got back home. Instead, the letters became quite a problem.

This is what happened: just off the coast of France, Cervantes's ship was attacked by pirates. When the pirates read the letters, they assumed they had captured an important and wealthy gentleman. They took Cervantes to Algeria, where they put him in prison and held him for a high ransom. He tried to escape many times, but never made it. Finally, after five years, Cervantes's family was able to scrape together the money to set him free.

- Have students silently read pages 76 and 77.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to turn and talk, discussing the gist of pages 76 and 77 and writing it in the margin or on a sticky note. If necessary, model thinking aloud about the gist of this section.

- Display the Linking Points with Reasons graphic organizer and explain to students that they will be recording their thinking about the point the author is trying to make in each section of the chapter using this graphic organizer. On a new, clean page of their reading journals or on loose leaf, invite students to create the graphic organizer, leaving space to add in their own notes. Note that students should complete only the first two columns, and the remaining three columns will be completed later in the lesson:

| Section                            | Author's Point |  |  |  |
|------------------------------------|----------------|--|--|--|
| Bad Luck Trails a Good Man         |                |  |  |  |
| Back in Jail                       |                |  |  |  |
| What's So Great About Don Quixote? |                |  |  |  |
| The Young Bard of Avon             |                |  |  |  |
| The Lost Years                     |                |  |  |  |
| The Globe Theater                  |                |  |  |  |

- Ask students what point the author is trying to make in this section of the text. Listen for responses like, “Cervantes was a good man who worked hard, but he had bad luck.” Invite students to write this in the appropriate spot on their graphic organizers.
- Repeat for the remainder of the chapter: students read sections of the chapter silently, discuss the gist of these sections, and then determine the author’s point for each section, and then record it on their graphic organizers.

REREAD THE CHAPTER (20 MIN.)

- Explain to students that they will now reread the chapter, looking for reasons that support the points they just identified. Invite students to add “Reasons that Support the Author’s Point” to the heading of the third column on the Linking Points with Reasons graphic organizer.

- Discuss the title of the chapter: The word prose refers to the ordinary language used in speaking and writing. The word page refers to the page of a book, while the word stage refers to a place where plays are performed.
- Have students silently read page 76 and look at the image on page 77. Remind students that they read The Adventures of Don Quixote in an earlier unit.

Inferential. What words or phrases in the text let you know that The Adventures of Don Quixote was a popular novel that transformed literature?

- » It was widely read by literate members of society; it was a popular novel in later centuries; and only the Bible has been translated into more languages.

Support

What does the word transformed mean?

Support

You learned the word translate in an earlier lesson. What does it mean to translate something?

- » It means to change the text from one language to another.

Check for Understanding

Ask students what reasons the author included that support the point made in this section(s). Have students add notes to the Reasons that Support the Author's Point column of the Linking Points with Reasons graphic organizer. Listen for students to identify specific pieces of text evidence that support the point(s). If necessary, point students back to specific sentences.

Back in Jail

When a soldier with a distinguished war record returned from battle, he could usually get a good job with a nobleman. But Cervantes received no such reward. So there he was, thirty three years old and out of work. What to do? Why not try writing again?

And boy, did he write! Cervantes churned out dozens and dozens of poems and plays. Although people liked his work, he still didn't make much money. To put bread on the table, he took a job with the government.

In one of his government jobs, Cervantes got into trouble again. He was working as a tax collector—a job that's not likely to help anyone win a popularity contest. Once, when he had collected a lot of tax money, Cervantes felt anxious about carrying it as he traveled along the roads. He left the money with an innkeeper he thought he could trust. When he returned to get the money, the innkeeper had run off with it! The government held Cervantes responsible for the stolen money. Since he couldn't repay it all, he was thrown in jail.

Some people believe that while Cervantes was in jail, he came up with the idea for Don Quixote, and perhaps even wrote some of the book behind bars. When Cervantes published The History of Don Quixote de la Mancha in 1605 CE, it was well received. It made Cervantes famous, but not rich.

Near the end of his life, Cervantes did find a patron whose support allowed him to concentrate on his writing. He wrote a second part to Don Quixote and more short stories. He completed a novel just four days before he died in Madrid in 1616 CE.

What's So Great About Don Quixote?

Don Quixote was written about 400 years ago. Why has it remained so popular?

For one thing, much of the book is very funny. There's a story that once the king of Spain was looking out a window when he saw a man who, while reading a book, kept slapping his leg and roaring with laughter. "I'll bet," said the king, "that he's reading Don Quixote."

- Have students silently read pages 78 and 79.

Cervantes wrote Don Quixote to make fun of books about romance and chivalry. These books, which were very popular in Cervantes's time, told stories of brave knights in shining armor who set out to rescue damsels in distress. They were full of fantastic adventures, powerful magicians, fierce dragons, and brave deeds.

And so Cervantes created Don Quixote. (Don is a title of respect, like Sir in English.) The Don is an elderly gentleman who loves to read romances about the knights of the Middle Ages. In fact, he reads so many romances that he loses touch with reality. He begins to believe the romances are true—that all the enchantments and battles and rescues really happened. Soon, he doesn't just want to read about knights anymore—instead, he decides to become one. His goal is to wander the world in search of adventures and to gain fame and honor by his daring deeds.

A man who attacks windmills may seem foolish, and Don Quixote does many foolish things. But the more you get to know Don Quixote, the more you begin to see that he is, at heart, noble and generous—sometimes a lot more noble and generous than the world around him.

In Cervantes's novel, Don Quixote mistakes windmills for giants. 79

Inferential. In what ways does the heading on page 76 (“Bad Luck Trails a Good Man”) apply to Cervantes’s life?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that he did a good job in the military and received letters that should have helped him find a good job but ended up getting him captured by pirates; although he worked hard at writing and became famous, he never became rich; and as a tax collector, he entrusted some tax money with an innkeeper he thought he could trust, but the man ran off with the money and Cervantes ended up in jail.

- » This image depicts the scene in The Adventures of Don Quixote in which Don Quixote believes the windmills he sees are giants who will hurt people. He decides to fight the giants to protect others from them. In doing so, Don Quixote is hit by one of the windmills and is thrown off his horse.

Check for Understanding

Ask students what reasons the author included that support the point made in this section(s). Have students add notes to the Reasons that Support the Author's Point column of the Linking Points with Reasons graphic organizer. Listen for students identifying specific pieces of text evidence that support the point(s). If necessary, point students back to specific sentences.

Challenge

How do you know Don Quixote's missions were not realistic?

- » Don Quixote believes what he reads in romances to be true and loses touch with reality.

The Young Bard of Avon

William Shakespeare was an English playwright, poet, and actor during the Renaissance. Many people believe Shakespeare was the greatest playwright of all time. Shakespeare is sometimes called the “Bard of Avon.” Bard is another word for poet. This well-known poet was born in England, in Stratford-upon-Avon, in 1564 CE.

He was the third of eight children. His father worked as a leather merchant and glove maker. During Shakespeare’s early years, his father served as bailiff (something like an officer of the law) of their town and the family seemed pretty well-off.

In Shakespeare’s time, well-off boys attended school, while girls stayed home. Young Will probably spent long hours learning Latin, Greek, the Bible, and English history. It seems he didn’t enjoy school much: in one of his plays, he described “the whining schoolboy, with his satchel . . . creeping like a snail unwillingly to school.”

- Have a student read page 80 continuing to the end of the section on page 82 aloud.

Shakespeare married Anne Hathaway. It's believed that Shakespeare met his wife near her family home. Today, many people visit this home now known as Anne Hathaway's Cottage.

81

By the time Shakespeare reached college age, his father had become so poor that he owed money, couldn't pay taxes, and didn't show his face in public for fear of being thrown in jail. It's likely that the Shakespeare family didn't have enough money to pay for a college education for William.

What did William do when he finished his schooling? No one knows for sure.

The Lost Years

There's a lot about Shakespeare's life we don't know. No one even knows for sure the exact date of Shakespeare's birthday.

Most of the information we have about Shakespeare comes from the town's official records of baptisms, marriages, and deaths. We also know a little from what his friends wrote about him. Over the years, scholars have closely examined the available documents, as well as Shakespeare's own writings, to put together a picture of the playwright's life. Sometimes parts of the picture are missing, and then scholars have to use whatever evidence they have to make an informed guess.

We do know that eighteen-year-old William married twenty-six-year-old Anne Hathaway in 1582 CE. Over the next few years, Anne gave birth to their daughter Susanna, followed by twins, a daughter named Judith and a son named Hamnet.

After the twins were born, Shakespeare did not linger very long in Stratford-upon-Avon. We're not certain why he left. Nor does anyone know what Shakespeare did during what are called "The Lost Years" from 1582 to 1592 CE.

We do know that by 1592 CE, Shakespeare had arrived in London and was establishing a reputation as a playwright, actor, and poet. Though some of his more highly educated competitors said his plays were "vulgar," the people loved his work, and the royalty also enjoyed them. His acting company frequently performed in the court of Queen Elizabeth and later for King James.

Literal. Who was William Shakespeare?

- » He was an English playwright, poet, and actor who lived during the Renaissance; he is considered by many to be the greatest playwright of all time; and he is known as the "Bard of Avon."
- Have students silently read the rest of page 82.

Inferential. Why are some things about Shakespeare's life known and other things unknown?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that, because he was not a famous person in the early part of his life, no one was keeping very detailed records of what he did; details from that early part of his life come from the town's official records, such as those involving baptisms, marriages, and deaths. More is known about his later life because he was becoming a popular and famous playwright.

Elizabeth I, Queen of England

- Have students examine the image on page 83.

Inferential. How can you tell the woman in this image lived during the Renaissance movement? Refer to Chapter 7 for evidence to support your answer.

- » The woman's fashion in this image is similar to that worn by wealthy women during the Renaissance. The dress looks like it is made from fine material, it is long with puffy sleeves and shoulders, and it has a high pleated collar. She is also wearing an upswept hairstyle that was often worn during this time.

Have students add notes to the Reasons that Support the Author's Point column of the Linking Points with Reasons graphic organizer. ---

Did you know that in Shakespeare's time, only men acted on stage? No women were allowed to be actors! The women's parts were played by young boys who still had high voices and no beards.

The Globe Theater

Many of Shakespeare's plays were performed in the Globe Theater, which was built in 1599 CE on the south bank of the Thames River in London. The Globe was a wooden, circular building with an open courtyard in the middle. The theater could hold up to 2,500 people. People who didn't have a lot of money could pay a penny to stand in the yard and watch the play; they were called the groundlings. Richer people could buy seats in the galleries, which were along three sides of the theater and were covered by a roof to protect the audience from the sun or a sudden rain. Performances were given only in daylight and only in good weather.

A performance at the Globe was different from most theaters today. Audiences could be rude and noisy. It was common for viewers to shout comments and throw objects on stage. There were no curtains on stage and hardly any scenery. Although the scenery was simple, costumes were often quite fancy.

In 1613 CE, a cannon fired as part of a performance of Henry VIII set fire to a thatched roof, and the theater burned to the ground. But if you visit London today, you can still see a Shakespeare play at the Globe—that is, at the new Globe Theater.

In the 1990s the theater was rebuilt very near its original location. Scholars and architects worked together closely to make the new Globe as much like the original as possible.

And so, as the Bard himself said, "All's well that ends well."

- Have students silently read page 85.

Evaluative. How was Shakespeare's Globe Theater different from theaters where plays are performed today?

- » Answers may vary, but may include that the audiences in the Globe were often rude and noisy, and audiences today are usually expected to be quiet and respectful; audience members at the Globe commonly threw objects on the stage; and there was no curtain and very little scenery at the Globe.

- Have students examine the image on page 84 and read the caption that accompanies the image.

DISCUSS THE CHAPTER AND WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

Note: Question 2 relates to The Big Question of this chapter.

- Use the following question to discuss the chapter.

Evaluative. In what ways do Cervantes and Shakespeare embody Renaissance characteristics?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that Cervantes believed that “Men can do anything with themselves, if they will,” so he created a character who believed he could wander the world in search of adventures and fame and honor by his daring deeds; he relied on a patron to support him while he created his literary works; and, although he encountered some bad luck in his life, he continued to write poems, plays, and stories; he shared the humanists’ interest in literature, a fascination with “a greater understanding of the world at large,” and a respect for “power of the human spirit and mind.” Shakespeare also relied on various patrons to support him and shared the humanists’ fascination with the world at large and their belief in the individual.
- Have students take home Activity Page 13.2 to read and complete for homework.

WORD WORK: ANXIOUS (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter you read, “Once, when he had collected a lot of tax money, Cervantes felt anxious about carrying it as he traveled along the roads.”
2. Say the word anxious with me.
3. Anxious means nervous or worried.
4. Mr. Rodriguez told his students that they did not need to be anxious about the test if they read the book thoroughly.
5. Have you ever been anxious about anything? Be sure to use the word anxious in your response.

Lesson 13: Reading and Writing Informational Texts: Linking Points and Reasons

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will revise an informational piece by linking ideas within and across categories of information.

TEKS 5.10.C; TEKS 5.11.B.i; TEKS 5.11.C; TEKS 5.11.D

MODEL REVISING FOR LINKING IDEAS (15 MIN.)

- Tell students they will revise their biographies to better link ideas throughout the piece. Explain that authors do this in several ways: both through the headings they include and through using linking words throughout the piece.
- Tell students that first they will revise their headings so they are creative and purposeful for the sections of their biography writing.
- Have students take out Patrons, Artists, and Scholars and turn to Chapter 9 to look at headings in the Reader.
- If necessary, remind students that the title of a chapter is a heading for the entire chapter.
- Think-Pair-Share. Read the title of Chapter 9, “Popular Prose on Page and Stage.” Why did the author craft this title for this chapter?

TEKS 5.10.C Analyze the author’s use of print and graphic features to achieve specific purposes; TEKS 5.11.B.i Develop drafts into a focused, structured, and coherent piece of writing by organizing with purposeful structure, including an introduction, transitions, and a conclusion; TEKS 5.11.C Revise drafts to improve sentence structure and word choice by adding, deleting, combining, and rearranging ideas for coherence and clarity; TEKS 5.11.D Edit drafts using standard English conventions.

Biography Revisions

- Guide student thinking to the following understandings:
  - The two authors highlighted in this chapter are Cervantes and Shakespeare. Cervantes is well known for a book (page), and Shakespeare is well known for his plays (stage).
  - Both forms of writing are prose, and both are noteworthy for their popularity.
  - The title is creative in the use of alliteration and rhyme. Remember, alliteration means the use of words beginning with the same letter or sound. Rhyme means the repetition of ending sounds.
  - The title summarizes the primary, or main, concepts from the entire chapter.
- Invite students to look back at the Linking Points with Reasons graphic organizer begun earlier in the lesson. Explain that they have already begun to analyze the headings in this chapter.
- Add “Creative Aspect” and “Purposeful Aspect” to the last two column headings. As a class, discuss the creative aspect of the first heading, “Bad Luck Trails a Good Man.” Discuss the creative elements the author included that make this heading strong. Listen for responses like, “It uses antonyms—good/bad.” Add this to the chart.
- Discuss the purposeful aspects of the heading: How does it link ideas within the chapter? Listen for responses like, “It characterizes Cervantes (good) and the life event (bad).” Add this to the chart.

Check for Understanding

Have students examine the headings throughout the chapter, noting the creative and purposeful aspects of each heading on their graphic organizers. Listen for students noticing ways the heading links ideas within the chapter.

- Share with the whole class, guiding student thinking to the understandings presented in the following chart as necessary.

| Heading                            | Author's Point   | Reasons that Support the Author's Point   | Creative Aspect   | Purposeful Aspect  |

- Support. As the words in bold from the chart are addressed, create a list of the heading techniques to display for students to reference later. Start the list with alliteration, rhyme, and summarize, which were addressed in the discussion about the title.

Intermediate

Advanced/Advanced High

ELPS 5.F

- Tell students that another way authors link ideas is through the words and phrases they use. Remind students of the correlative conjunctions they have been learning about. Ask students what correlative conjunctions help a reader notice as they are reading a text. Listen for response like, “They work together in pairs to relate one part of a sentence to another part of a sentence.”
- Explain to students that, as they revise their drafts, they can refer to the Correlative Conjunctions Poster and add correlative conjunctions to their writing to help signal to the reader that ideas are related in their sentences.

PRACTICE CREATING HEADINGS (15 MIN.)

- Tell students to take out Activity Page 8.4 and their biography drafts.
- Point out that the title is simply the person’s name, and the headings are simply pulled from the Biography Notes chart.
- Have students craft their own creative and purposeful title and headings for the sections of their biography. Remind them to:
  - Select a primary concept from the sections to make the headings and title purposeful.
  - Use the heading techniques identified from Chapter 9 to make it creative.
- Tell students that it is often easier to craft a title or heading after completing the writing for the section. Therefore, they should finish drafting a section before crafting a heading for it, and finish drafting the entire biography before crafting a title.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they continue to draft and begin to revise their pieces for linking ideas. Look for students revising their titles and headings and adding or revising correlative conjunctions to link ideas within their drafts. If necessary, refer students to the charts discussed in the previous segment as exemplars.

WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Have several students share their favorite revision for linked ideas.
- Feedback. Provide reinforcing or corrective feedback for the use of identified heading techniques to highlight a primary concept and achieve creative and purposeful headings.
- Have students who have not finished drafting their biography complete it for homework.
- Collect completed biography drafts to review and monitor student progress. Written feedback may include comments such as:
  - This heading is catchy! Nice use of alliteration.
  - Nice job working the notes from your second source in for this section. I like the way you connected information here with the phrase I circled.
  - Look at the two sentences I underlined. They basically say the same thing. Try to write a new sentence that combines these two.

Chapter 9

Popular Prose on Page and Stage

THE BIG QUESTION

How did writers, such as Cervantes and Shakespeare, embody the ideals of the Renaissance movement?

Painting and architecture were features of the Renaissance, but so too was literature. Talented and highly original writers appeared and their work transformed the literary landscape. Miguel de Cervantes was one of these writers.

When Miguel de Cervantes published the first part of Don Quixote in 1605 CE, the novel was read widely by literate members of society. It became a popular novel in later centuries. It has been translated from Spanish into more than a hundred languages. Only the Bible has been translated into more languages than Don Quixote.

Bad Luck Trails a Good Man

Miguel de Cervantes was born in Spain in 1547 CE. As a young man, Cervantes published some poems, but he did not set out to be a writer. Instead he became a soldier. He joined a Spanish regiment stationed in Naples.

After six years as a soldier, Cervantes headed back to Spain. With him, he carried letters that gloriously described his military service. He thought these papers might help him find a good job when he got back home. Instead, the letters became quite a problem.

This is what happened: just off the coast of France, Cervantes's ship was attacked by pirates. When the pirates read the letters, they assumed they had captured an important and wealthy gentleman. They took Cervantes to Algeria, where they put him in prison and held him for a high ransom. He tried to escape many times, but never made it. Finally, after five years, Cervantes's family was able to scrape together the money to set him free.

- » It means their work caused a significant change in literature.

Back in Jail

When a soldier with a distinguished war record returned from battle, he could usually get a good job with a nobleman. But Cervantes received no such reward. So there he was, thirty three years old and out of work. What to do? Why not try writing again?

And boy, did he write! Cervantes churned out dozens and dozens of poems and plays. Although people liked his work, he still didn't make much money. To put bread on the table, he took a job with the government.

In one of his government jobs, Cervantes got into trouble again. He was working as a tax collector—a job that's not likely to help anyone win a popularity contest. Once, when he had collected a lot of tax money, Cervantes felt anxious about carrying it as he traveled along the roads. He left the money with an innkeeper he thought he could trust. When he returned to get the money, the innkeeper had run off with it! The government held Cervantes responsible for the stolen money. Since he couldn't repay it all, he was thrown in jail.

Some people believe that while Cervantes was in jail, he came up with the idea for Don Quixote, and perhaps even wrote some of the book behind bars. When Cervantes published The History of Don Quixote de la Mancha in 1605 CE, it was well received. It made Cervantes famous, but not rich.

Near the end of his life, Cervantes did find a patron whose support allowed him to concentrate on his writing. He wrote a second part to Don Quixote and more short stories. He completed a novel just four days before he died in Madrid in 1616 CE.

What's So Great About Don Quixote?

Don Quixote was written about 400 years ago. Why has it remained so popular?

For one thing, much of the book is very funny. There's a story that once the king of Spain was looking out a window when he saw a man who, while reading a book, kept slapping his leg and roaring with laughter. "I'll bet," said the king, "that he's reading Don Quixote."

78

- Have students silently read the first and second paragraphs on page 78.

Support

How did Cervantes earn enough money to put bread on the table?

- » He took a job with the government.

- Have students silently read the third and fourth paragraphs on page 78.

Inferential. The author says Cervantes' The History of Don Quixote de la Mancha was "well received." What does the phrase well received mean?

- » It means people liked it.

Check for Understanding

What words or phrases in this paragraph give clues to the meaning of well received?

- » It made Cervantes famous. If necessary, direct students back to specific sentences in the text.

Cervantes wrote Don Quixote to make fun of books about romance and chivalry. These books, which were very popular in Cervantes's time, told stories of brave knights in shining armor who set out to rescue damsels in distress. They were full of fantastic adventures, powerful magicians, fierce dragons, and brave deeds.

And so Cervantes created Don Quixote. (Don is a title of respect, like Sir in English.) The Don is an elderly gentleman who loves to read romances about the knights of the Middle Ages. In fact, he reads so many romances that he loses touch with reality. He begins to believe the romances are true—that all the enchantments and battles and rescues really happened. Soon, he doesn't just want to read about knights anymore—instead, he decides to become one. His goal is to wander the world in search of adventures and to gain fame and honor by his daring deeds.

A man who attacks windmills may seem foolish, and Don Quixote does many foolish things. But the more you get to know Don Quixote, the more you begin to see that he is, at heart, noble and generous—sometimes a lot more noble and generous than the world around him.

The Young Bard of Avon

William Shakespeare was an English playwright, poet, and actor during the Renaissance. Many people believe Shakespeare was the greatest playwright of all time. Shakespeare is sometimes called the “Bard of Avon.” Bard is another word for poet. This well-known poet was born in England, in Stratford-upon-Avon, in 1564 CE.

He was the third of eight children. His father worked as a leather merchant and glove maker. During Shakespeare’s early years, his father served as bailiff (something like an officer of the law) of their town and the family seemed pretty well-off.

In Shakespeare’s time, well-off boys attended school, while girls stayed home. Young Will probably spent long hours learning Latin, Greek, the Bible, and English history. It seems he didn’t enjoy school much: in one of his plays, he described “the whining schoolboy, with his satchel . . . creeping like a snail unwillingly to school.”

Shakespeare married Anne Hathaway. It's believed that Shakespeare met his wife near her family home. Today, many people visit this home now known as Anne Hathaway's Cottage.

By the time Shakespeare reached college age, his father had become so poor that he owed money, couldn't pay taxes, and didn't show his face in public for fear of being thrown in jail. It's likely that the Shakespeare family didn't have enough money to pay for a college education for William.

What did William do when he finished his schooling? No one knows for sure.

The Lost Years

There's a lot about Shakespeare's life we don't know. No one even knows for sure the exact date of Shakespeare's birthday.

Most of the information we have about Shakespeare comes from the town's official records of baptisms, marriages, and deaths. We also know a little from what his friends wrote about him. Over the years, scholars have closely examined the available documents, as well as Shakespeare's own writings, to put together a picture of the playwright's life. Sometimes parts of the picture are missing, and then scholars have to use whatever evidence they have to make an informed guess.

We do know that eighteen-year-old William married twenty-six-year-old Anne Hathaway in 1582 CE. Over the next few years, Anne gave birth to their daughter Susanna, followed by twins, a daughter named Judith and a son named Hamnet.

After the twins were born, Shakespeare did not linger very long in Stratford-upon-Avon. We're not certain why he left. Nor does anyone know what Shakespeare did during what are called "The Lost Years" from 1582 to 1592 CE.

We do know that by 1592 CE, Shakespeare had arrived in London and was establishing a reputation as a playwright, actor, and poet. Though some of his more highly educated competitors said his plays were "vulgar," the people loved his work, and the royalty also enjoyed them. His acting company frequently performed in the court of Queen Elizabeth and later for King James.

Did you know that in Shakespeare's time, only men acted on stage? No women were allowed to be actors! The women's parts were played by young boys who still had high voices and no beards.

The Globe Theater

Many of Shakespeare's plays were performed in the Globe Theater, which was built in 1599 CE on the south bank of the Thames River in London. The Globe was a wooden, circular building with an open courtyard in the middle. The theater could hold up to 2,500 people. People who didn't have a lot of money could pay a penny to stand in the yard and watch the play; they were called the groundlings. Richer people could buy seats in the galleries, which were along three sides of the theater and were covered by a roof to protect the audience from the sun or a sudden rain. Performances were given only in daylight and only in good weather.

A performance at the Globe was different from most theaters today. Audiences could be rude and noisy. It was common for viewers to shout comments and throw objects on stage. There were no curtains on stage and hardly any scenery. Although the scenery was simple, costumes were often quite fancy.

In 1613 CE, a cannon fired as part of a performance of Henry VIII set fire to a thatched roof, and the theater burned to the ground. But if you visit London today, you can still see a Shakespeare play at the Globe—that is, at the new Globe Theater.

In the 1990s the theater was rebuilt very near its original location. Scholars and architects worked together closely to make the new Globe as much like the original as possible.

And so, as the Bard himself said, "All's well that ends well."

- Have students silently read page 85.

Inferential. The phrase all's well that ends well is an adage and the title of one of Shakespeare's plays. What does it mean?

- » It means that the problems that may occur along the way do not matter very much if things turn out as one hoped in the end. TEKS 5.3.D

TEKS 5.3.D Identify, use, and explain the meaning of adages and puns.

Inferential. What does the expression eaten out of house and home mean?

- » It means that someone has eaten everything that was in someone's house.

A simile compares two things using the word like or as.

Have you ever come across any of these famous lines?

All's well that ends well.

A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!

If music be the food of love, play on.

Sweets to the sweet.

Romeo, Romeo! Wherefore art thou Romeo?

Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

To be, or not to be: that is the question.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears.

All the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players.

Shakespeare wrote many poems, but he is best known for writing plays. When Shakespeare wrote his plays, England was ruled by Queen Elizabeth I and later King James I. Elizabeth was a powerful and intelligent leader, and very popular with the English people. The arts thrived during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. She filled her court with poets, playwrights, and musicians.

If you haven't read one of Shakespeare's plays yet, you probably will soon!

- Have students take turns reading the famous lines on page 87 aloud. Have students discuss whether they have ever heard any of the famous lines.
- Try to use some of these expressions, as appropriate, in the classroom throughout the remainder of the year.

LESSON WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

- Use the following question to discuss the chapter:

Inferential. Think-Pair-Share. The last quote on page 87 (“All the world’s a stage and all the men and women merely players”) is one of the Shakespearean lines quoted most often. What might this line mean?

- » Answers may vary, but should include that life is like a play, and people are like the actors, acting out different roles during their lifetimes.

WORD WORK: LINGER (5 MIN.)

1. In the chapter you read, “After the twins were born, Shakespeare did not linger very long in Stratford-upon-Avon.”
2. Say the word linger with me.
3. Linger means “to wait around or stay longer.”
4. Although Rosita wanted to linger and talk with her friends after school, she had to hurry home.
5. When was a time you wanted to linger somewhere? Be sure to use the word linger in your response.
  - Ask two or three students to use the target word in a sentence. If necessary, guide and/or rephrase students’ responses to make complete sentences: “I wanted to linger _____.”
6. What part of speech is the word linger?
  - » verb
  - Use a Synonyms activity for follow-up.
  - Ask, “What does the word linger mean? What are some synonyms of, or words that have a similar meaning to, linger?
    - Prompt students to provide words like remain, stay, and delay.
  - With a partner, create a sentence for each of the synonyms they provide.

GRAMMAR (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students will use correlative conjunctions when writing sentences.

TEKS 5.11.D

- Remind students that they have learned about the part of speech called “correlative conjunctions.”
- Ask students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing what correlative conjunctions are. Listen for students to discuss that correlative conjunctions are words that work together in pairs to relate one part of a sentence to another part of a sentence.
- Review the Correlative Conjunctions Poster from Lesson 11 with students.

| Correlative Conjunctions | Function    | Example   |
|--------------------------|-------------|---|
| either/or                | alternative | After dinner, we can either play a board game or watch a movie. |
| neither/nor              | alternative | The baby could neither crawl nor walk yet.                      |
| both/and                 | addition    | Both Lou and Nader are absent today.                            |
| not only/but also        | addition    | Abeni is not only smart, but also kind.                         |

- Have students turn to Activity Page 14.1. Read the directions and invite students to turn and talk with a partner, sharing a sentence for the first correlative conjunction.
- Cold call students to share their partner’s sentence with the whole class.

Check for Understanding

Have students write a sentence for the first correlative conjunction. Look for students using either and or or to relate one part of their sentence to another part of their sentence. If necessary, ask students how the first part of their sentence relates to the second part.

- Have students complete Activity Page 14.1 independently.

TEKS 5.11.D Edit drafts using standard English conventions.

MORPHOLOGY (15 MIN.)

Primary Focus: Students will use and spell words with the root serv in sentences.

 TEKS 5.2.B.vi; TEKS 5.3.C

- Ask students what the root serv means. (save, protect, or serve)
- Explain that you will give students two word choices, each of which features the root serv. Then, you will read a statement and students must decide which word the statement demonstrates.
  - Service or servant? The school offers many programs to help students and their families. (service)
  - Conserve or preserve? The government passed a law that prohibits the cutting down of trees in the forest in order to keep the forest safe. (preserve)
  - Reserved or deserve? The mayor thinks the student group should get a reward for their community service. (deserve)
  - Conserve or preserve? In an effort to save electricity, the family made sure all the lights were turned off before they left their home. (conserve)
- Have students turn to Activity Page 14.2. Read the directions and tell students to work in pairs to complete it.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and support students as they work. Look for students accurately using the words with the root serv. If necessary, support students in using the root as a clue to the meaning of each word by asking what serv means and asking them to point out any prefix or suffix the word being discussed may have.

- As time allows, ask a few partner pairs to share their sentences aloud.
- Collect Activity Page 14.2 to review and grade at a later time.

Lesson 15: Unit Assessment

Unit Assessment

UNIT ASSESSMENT (75 MIN.)

- Make sure each student has a copy of Activity Page 15.2. You may have collected this activity page from students at the beginning of the unit.
- Tell students they will read two selections, answer questions about each, and respond to a writing prompt. In the next sections, they will answer grammar and morphology questions to evaluate the skills they have practiced in this unit.
- Encourage students to do their best.
- Once students have finished the assessment, encourage them to review their papers quietly, rereading and checking their answers carefully.
- Circulate around the room as students complete the assessment to ensure everyone is working individually. Assist students as needed, but do not provide them with answers.

Reading Comprehension

The reading comprehension section of the Unit Assessment contains two selections and accompanying questions. The first selection is about Venice during the Renaissance. The second selection includes excerpts from letters written by an artist to his patron during the Renaissance.

These texts are considered worthy of students' time to read and meet the expectations for text complexity in Grade 5. The texts feature core content and domain vocabulary from The Renaissance unit that students can draw on to comprehend the text.

Optional Fluency Assessment TEKS 5.4

Note: You may wish to assess students' fluency in reading using the selection "Michelangelo."

Administration Instructions

- Turn to the student copy of “Michelangelo” that follows the Unit Assessment Analysis section. This is the text students will read aloud. Turn to this copy each time you administer this assessment.
- Using one Recording Copy of “Michelangelo” for each student, create a running record as you listen to each student read aloud.
- Call the student you will assess to come sit near you.
- Explain that you are going to ask them to read a selection aloud and you are going to take some notes as they read. Also, explain that they should not rush but rather read at their regular pace.
- Read the title of the selection aloud for the student, as the title is not part of the assessment.
- Begin timing when the student reads the first word of the selection. As the student reads aloud, make a running record on the Recording Copy using the following guidelines:

| words read correctly | No mark is required.                                                                                           |
|-----------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

- When 1 minute has elapsed, draw a vertical line on the Recording Copy to mark where the student was in the text at that point. Allow the student to finish reading the selection aloud.

- Assess the student’s comprehension of the selection by asking them to respond orally to the following questions:
  1. Literal. What did Michelangelo do whenever he had spare time?
    - » Michelangelo drew—or made sketches—on the walls.
  2. Inferential. During the Renaissance movement, who generally earned more money—an artist or a businessman?
    - » a businessman
  3. Literal. Besides drawing, what else was Michelangelo good at doing?
    - » He was good at carving statues and copying other’s carvings.
  4. Literal. When Michelangelo copied the marble statue head, what made his statue better than the original?
    - » He added his own touches to the statue, such as making it have an open mouth to show the teeth and tongue.
- Repeat this process for additional students as needed. Scoring can be done later, provided you have kept running records and marked the last word students read after 1 minute elapsed.

- It may be helpful to refer back to the Pronunciation/Syllabication Chart from Lesson 11.

- Students may make the following errors:
  - harmony: using 'ie,' 'ey,' or 'ee' instead of 'y' for /ee/
  - conventional: using 'shun' instead of 'tion' for /shən/; using 'ul' instead of 'al' for /əl/
  - democracy: using 'u' instead of 'e' for /ə/; using 's' or 'ss' instead of 'c' for /s/; using 'ie,' 'ey,' or 'ee' instead of 'y' for /ee/

  - rivalry: using 'ul' instead of 'al' for /əl/; using 'ie,' 'ey,' or 'ee' instead of 'y' for /ee/
  - tyranny: using 'e' or 'ee' instead of 'y' for the first /ee/; using 'ie,' 'ey,' or 'ee' instead of 'y' for the second /ee/

- Although any of the above student-error scenarios may occur, misspellings may be due to many other factors. You may find it helpful to use the analysis chart to record any student errors. For example:
  - Is the student consistently making errors on specific vowels? Which ones?
  - Is the student consistently making errors at the end of the words?
  - Is the student consistently making errors in multi-syllable words, but not single-syllable words?
- Also, examine the dictated sentence for errors in capitalization and punctuation.

UNIT ASSESSMENT ANALYSIS

Quantitative and Qualitative Analysis of the Text

The texts used in the reading comprehension assessment, “Venice: Jewel of the Adriatic” (informational text) and “Venice, 6th January, 1506 CE” (literary text), have been profiled for text complexity using standard qualitative and quantitative measures.

Note: To receive a point for a two-part question, students must correctly answer both parts of the question.

Optional Fluency Assessment

The following is the text for the Optional Fluency Assessment, titled “Michelangelo.” Turn to this copy of the selection each time you administer this assessment.

You will also find a Recording Copy of the text for doing a running record of oral reading for each student you assess. There is also a Fluency Scoring Sheet. Make as many copies of the Recording Copy and the Fluency Scoring Sheet as you need, having one for each student you assess.

| As Michelangelo grew up, his interests were clear. He did not care         | 13  |
| about school, but let him have a pencil and paper and his mind was         | 27  |
| wide awake at once. Every spare moment he spent making sketches on         | 39  |
| the walls. Yet his father would not hear of the boy becoming an artist.    | 53  |
| It would be much more fitting that Michelangelo should go into the         | 65  |
| silk and wool business and learn to make money.                            | 74  |
| But there was no point in trying to make the boy try to learn business.    | 89  |
| Scold as they might, Michelangelo cared for nothing but his pencil. Little | 101 |
| by little, his father began to see that he had to let his son create art.  | 117 |
| Michelangelo and his friend went to study in the gardens of San            | 129 |
| Marco and work with Lorenzo the Magnificent. Without needing a             | 139 |
| lesson, Michelangelo began to copy the statues in terra-cotta, and his     | 150 |
| work was very clever.                                                      | 154 |

“See what you can do with marble,” Lorenzo said to him. Michel- 166 angelo had never handled a chisel before, but he chipped and cut away 178 the marble so marvelously that life seemed to spring out of the stone. 191
There was a marble head in the garden, and Michelangelo set to copy 204
it. Such a wonderful copy did Michelangelo make that Lorenzo was 215 amazed. It was even better than the original. The boy had introduced 227 ideas of his own and had made the laughing mouth a little open to 241 show the teeth and the tongue. 247

Guidelines for Fluency Assessment Scoring

- To calculate a student's W.C.P.M. (Words Correct Per Minute) score, use the information you wrote on the Recording Copy and follow these steps. You may wish to have a calculator available.
1. Count Words Read in 1 Minute. This is the total number of words the student read or attempted to read in 1 minute. It includes words the student read correctly as well as words the student read incorrectly. Write the total in the box labeled Words Read in 1 Minute.
  2. Count the Uncorrected Mistakes in 1 Minute. You noted these on the Recording Copy. They include words read incorrectly, omissions, substitutions, and words you had to supply. Write the total in the box labeled "Uncorrected Mistakes in 1 Minute" on the Fluency Scoring Sheet. (A mistake that the student self-corrects is not counted as a mistake.)
  3. Subtract Uncorrected Mistakes in 1 Minute from Words Read in 1 Minute to get Words Correct. Write the number in the box labeled "W.C.P.M." Although the analysis does not include any words the student read correctly (or incorrectly) after 1 minute, you may use this information from your Recording Copy for anecdotal purposes.
- As you evaluate W.C.P.M. scores, here are some factors to consider.
    - It is normal for students to show a wide range in fluency and in W.C.P.M. scores. However, a major goal of Grade 5 is to read with sufficient fluency to ensure comprehension and independent reading of school assignments in this and subsequent grade levels. A student's W.C.P.M. score can be compared with the score of other students in the class (or grade level) and also with the national fluency norms obtained by Hasbrouck and Tindal (2006). Hasbrouck and Tindal suggest that a score falling within 10 words above or below the 50th percentile should be interpreted as within the normal, expected, and appropriate range for a student at that grade level at that time of year. For example, if you administered the assessment during the winter of Grade 5, and a student scored 130 W.C.P.M., you should interpret this as within the normal, expected, and appropriate range for that student.

Lesson 16: Writing Narrative Texts: Historical Fiction

Writing

Primary Focus: Students will plan and draft a historical fiction narrative by introducing a narrator and/or characters and using concrete words and phrases and sensory details to convey experiences and events precisely.

TEKS 5.7.E; TEKS 5.11.A; TEKS 5.12.A; TEKS 5.13.F

INTRODUCE THE TASK (15 MIN.)

- Tell students they will write a historical fiction narrative using what they have been learning about artists in the Renaissance. Explain that the format of the narrative will be a diary entry to include at the beginning of their biography about Brunelleschi, Leonardo, or Michelangelo.
- Explain that a diary entry is writing people do, usually just for themselves, to record life experiences. Diary entries usually include the writer's own thoughts and feelings.
- Remind students that they focus on a piece of writing by selecting one specific moment, object, or idea and use precise details to write about it. The focus of the diary entry will be what the subject of their biography experienced while completing one of his famous projects.

TEKS 5.7.E Interact with sources in meaningful ways such as notetaking, annotating, freewriting, or illustrating; TEKS 5.11.A Plan a first draft by selecting a genre for a particular topic, purpose, and audience using a range of strategies such as brainstorming, freewriting, and mapping; TEKS 5.12.A Compose literary texts such as personal narratives, fiction, and poetry using genre characteristics and craft; TEKS 5.13.F Differentiate between paraphrasing and plagiarism when using source materials.

Support

Explain that historical fiction is a narrative that is set in the past. The details about the time period are true, but the characters and their experiences are fictional.

- Tell students they will follow the same process they did for their biography when they wrote by first taking notes and then referring back to those notes to compose their writing. However, students will write the diary entry from the perspective of the artist who is the subject of their biography. That means the diary entry will be written from the first-person point of view, using words like I, me, and my.
  - Explain that the diary entry will include a combination of fact and fiction. Ask students what the facts will be in their pieces. Listen for responses like, “the facts are the true information researched about the famous project.” Ask students what the fiction will be. Listen for responses like, “the fiction will be what you imagine the artist’s thoughts and feelings might have been related to the project.”
  - Have students practice recognizing the difference between facts about a project and fiction about the artist’s thoughts or feelings by identifying the fact and fiction in each of the following statements. The statements are from Raphael’s perspective about being hired to create a painting of the Madonna. Read each aloud. You may wish to have students discuss their answers with a partner before responding.
1. Upon my arrival in Florence, I have found that Michelangelo and Leonardo are not painting as much these days, and I am excited to have so many patrons looking to hire me instead.
    - » Fact: arrival in Florence; Michelangelo and Leonardo are not painting as much.
    - » Fiction: I am excited.
  2. Another patron has requested a painting of the Madonna, and while some may think it is boring to paint the same image over and over, I look forward to the opportunity to perfect my vision.
    - » Fact: another painting of the Madonna.
    - » Fiction: I look forward to perfecting my vision.
  3. I could stay up all night working to capture the beauty of the naturalistic look that people want in their paintings today.
    - » Fact: People want a naturalistic look in a painting.
    - » Fiction: I could stay up all night working.

MODEL TAKING NOTES FOR A DIARY ENTRY (25 MIN.)

- Tell students they will take notes from the Reader, and then briefly review the note-taking process.
  - Search the text for information related to the topic.

- Record notes in fragments and use paraphrasing to avoid plagiarism.
- Have students take out Activity Page 16.1, and explain that the chart at the top of the page gives them choices for their diary entry depending on the person they wrote about in the biography. Tell students that the chart at the bottom of the page is for notes.
- Review the categories in the Diary Entry Notes chart.
  - Renaissance Artist: Name of the artist written about in the biography.
  - Project and Location: Name of the project this person did and where it is located.
  - Patronage: Name of the person who commissioned and supported the project.
  - Interesting Facts: May include information about what the artist wanted to accomplish, difficulty and duration of the work, facts about the outcome, etc.

- Have students turn to the Biography Rubric (Activity Page SR.4) and look at the first row on the rubric. Remind them of the criteria for an exemplary diary entry: The diary entry is a creative expression of the relevant content from the artist's perspective.
- Have students follow along in their Reader as you model searching for information for each category for Raphael's work, The School of Athens. Point out relevant information in the text (page 41) and think aloud about which category of the chart on Activity Page 16.1 the information falls under. Remind students to use concrete words and phrases in their notes so they can convey the experiences and events in their diary entries precisely.
  - Renaissance Artist: Raphael.
  - Project and Location: The School of Athens; part of painting a series of rooms in the Vatican, Rome.
  - Patronage: Pope Julius II.

Check for Understanding

---

Invite students to reread the text, looking for any interesting facts to add to the chart on Activity Page 16.1. After a few minutes, cold call students to share whole class. Listen for students sharing facts like the painting reflects techniques developed during the Renaissance movement (e.g., perspective). If necessary, direct students back to specific sections of the text.

---

- Tell students they will finish planning their diary entry by responding to the question on the back of Activity Page 16.1. Explain that so far they have collected facts for their writing. When they imagine what the artist may have been thinking and feeling, they will incorporate fiction into the writing. Remind students that they should use concrete words and phrases and sensory details to convey the experiences and events in their diary entries precisely.
- Model doing so by sharing that for Raphael you imagine:
  - He might have felt weary, or tired, from painting so much of the Vatican.
  - Painting on a wall takes a toll, or is hard, on his whole body.
  - He feels motivated or excited about honoring Plato and Aristotle.
  - He feels relieved or satisfied when he is done.

Check for Understanding

Invite students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing how they imagine what the artist may have been thinking and feeling. Cold call students to share with the whole class. Listen for students sharing ideas about what Raphael may have thought or felt. If necessary, ask students to justify what Raphael may have thought or felt using evidence from the text.

- Tell students to read the completed Sample Diary Entry for Raphael on Activity Page 16.1, and notice the blend of fact and fiction as they read by:
  - underlining the facts.
  - circling the points about what they imagine were Raphael's thoughts and feelings.

PRACTICE TAKING NOTES AND DRAFTING (40 MIN.)

- Have students refer to Activity Page 16.1, choose which project they want to write about for their Renaissance artist, go to the Reader page(s) indicated for the selected project, and start taking notes.
- Tell students that once they complete their Diary Entry Notes chart, they should then respond to the question on the back and work on drafting their diary entry on their own paper.

Writing Writing Texts to Describe

Beginning

Provide 1:1 prompting and support for students while planning and drafting their diary entries. Consider providing sentence or paragraph frames for students to use.

Intermediate

Have student practice their pieces orally prior to writing it. Provide a bank of concrete words and phrases and sensory details for students to choose from to support students in conveying experiences and events precisely.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for planning and drafting students' diary entries as needed.

ELPS 5.G

Diary Entry Draft

Check for Understanding

Ensure students paraphrase using sentence fragments for their notes, blending the factual information with their fictional guesses about the person's thoughts and feelings in their draft, and writing in first person. If necessary, direct students back to the text and ask students to justify what their artist may have thought or felt using evidence from the text.

Challenge

Have students add specific details to show how the artist felt about something connected to the Renaissance Period. Alternately, students may choose to create a short conversation or dialogue in their writing, using appropriate conventions..

- If students complete their draft, pair them with another student to exchange drafts and complete the same fact/fiction identification task they did with the sample Raphael diary entry:
  - Underline the facts.
  - Circle the Renaissance artist's thoughts and feelings.

WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

- Have students share their favorite sentence from their diary entry that combines fact and fiction in the same sentence.
- Feedback. Provide reinforcing or corrective feedback for students' blending of fact and fiction and their use of first person voice.
- Have students who have not finished drafting their diary entry complete it for homework.
- Collect diary entry drafts to review and monitor student progress. Written feedback may include comments such as:
  - Nice job including all the facts from your notes chart.
  - I like the blend of fact and fiction in this sentence.
  - This fact is written almost word for word from the Reader. Use the key words I circled to write a new sentence in your own words.
  - There's a great opportunity to include how he might have been feeling with this fact. Rewrite the sentence to include what you imagine his feelings were and see if you like it.

ADVANCE PREPARATION

Writing

- Prepare and display an enlarged version Activity Page 17, “Revise to Expand a Sample Biography.” Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components for this unit.
- The enlarged version of the Biography Rubric used in Lessons 8 and 16 should also be displayed.

Universal Access

- Consider providing sentence or paragraph frames for students to use when expanding their ideas. Provide a bank of transitional words and phrases for students to choose from to support students in organizing their writing.

Lesson 17: Writing Informational Texts: Developing the Topic Writing

Primary Focus: Students will revise an informational piece to develop the topic with information and examples related to the topic. TEKS 5.11.B.ii; TEKS 5.11.C

MODEL REVISING TO EXPAND TEXTS (25 MIN.)

- Tell students they will work on the revising stage of the writing process to expand on important and interesting details in their biography writing.
- Explain to students that writers often revise their writing to expand on their original ideas. Invite students to look back through their Readers to find ways the author of the Reader expanded her ideas.

Check for Understanding

Ask students to turn and talk with a partner, discussing how ideas were expanded in the Reader using evidence from the text. Cold call students to share with the whole group, listening for students to notice ideas that were expanded on using facts, definitions, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples. If necessary, direct students back to specific examples in the text.

TEKS 5.11.B.ii Develop drafts into a focused, structured, and coherent piece of writing by developing an engaging idea reflecting depth of thought with specific facts and details; TEKS 5.11.C Revise drafts to improve sentence structure and word choice by adding, deleting, combining, and rearranging ideas for coherence and clarity.

- Have students turn to Activity Page 17.1 and explain that they will practice revising to expand writing before doing the same with their own biographies.
- Have students silently read the biography paragraph about Raphael's early years on Activity Page 17.1.
- Read the paragraph aloud and stop when you notice an important or interesting detail that you want to expand upon.
- Read from the heading to the word apprentice.
- Have students write the word apprentice on the first "Detail" line below the paragraph.
- Think aloud as you remember that there is a definition of apprentice in the glossary and you read about being an apprentice in Chapter 3, "The Spirit of the Renaissance."
- Work with students to write two or three sentences about being an apprentice using what you know from these sources. Point out that you want the sentences to relate to Raphael, and since being an apprentice was one of his experiences, you want to write about what it was like. (Answers may vary, but should include that being an apprentice was hard work and that an apprentice was busy either helping with chores or practicing what they learned from the master artist.)
- Tell students that you now have sentences expanding on an important detail from the biography by including the definition of an important word.
- Select a student to read the next sentence aloud, and identify Florence as another detail you know more about from the Reader. Have students write Florence on the next "Detail" line.
- Select a student to read the final sentence aloud, and then identify Michelangelo and Leonardo as details you want to expand upon. Have students write Michelangelo and Leonardo on the final "Detail" line.

Support

Create a small group comprising those who completed Page 16.1 for homework. Work with those students to provide feedback on their diary entries before they begin revising to expand their biographies.

Challenge

Have students try expanding a detail using facts. Then have them try expanding that same detail with a quotation or definition. Have them review each version and decide which is best for their writing. Students should offer a reason for their choice.

Activity Page 17.2

- Think aloud to guide students to refer back to the Reader to write two or three expansion sentences about Florence, Michelangelo, and Leonardo. Remind them to also refer to the Reader to write sentences that relate to Raphael.
  - expanded information about Florence (throughout the Reader): great place for an artist to live, learn, and work; Renaissance movement thrived there; many great artists lived and worked there; many famous works were created and remain there today; Medici family was powerful and a great patron of the arts there
  - expanded information about Michelangelo and Leonardo (pages 23–26, 32–35): Leonardo’s use of natural human figures (e.g., The Baptism of Christ) and his use of perspective (e.g., The Last Supper); Michelangelo’s use of natural human figures (e.g., Pietà)
- Summarize by having students explain what you did as a whole group to create potential revisions for the biography of Raphael. Listen for students noticing that they added facts and concrete details to the paragraph.

REVISE TO EXPAND TEXTS (35 MIN.)

- Return completed Activity Page 16.1 to students who finished during the previous lesson.
- Have students turn to Activity Page 17.2, their own biography drafts, and their diary entry drafts.
- Tell students to start by reading through their writing and circling details they could expand upon.
- Once they have circled the details they feel are important or interesting, tell students to choose three details to expand upon, using Activity Page 17.2. Remind them to think about whether each detail relates to the artist they wrote about. This thinking will help them choose which details are worth expanding. Remind students that they can expand their ideas using facts, definitions, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples related to the detail they want to expand upon.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they work. If necessary, help students find relevant information in the Reader for each detail they have chosen to expand upon. If necessary, remind students to expand their ideas by using facts, definitions, concrete details, quotations, or other information and examples related to the topic.

SHARE TO EVALUATE TEXTS (20 MIN.)

- As students complete the detail expansion portion of Activity Page 17.2, pair them with another student to share their biography writing with each other.
- Tell students they may read each other’s writing silently or take turns reading aloud.
- Explain that they should give each other at least one compliment and ask at least one question to help the writer evaluate their own writing. Remind students that they should be giving feedback to their partners based on expanding ideas and details in their writing.
- After sharing, students should complete the rest of Activity Page 17.2 by:
  - taking notes from the discussion with their partner
  - referring to the Biography Rubric on Activity Page SR.4 to evaluate their own writing
  - recording two revision goals
- Have students continue working on revising their draft based on their revision goals.

LESSON WRAP-UP (10 MIN.)

- Have a few students share a revision goal and explain what they did or plan to do to address it.
- Feedback. Point out when and how student revision goals connect to the Biography Rubric.
- Collect Activity Page 17.2 to review and monitor student progress. Written feedback may include comments such as:
  - This is a great detail to expand because it helps you understand more about the artist’s life.
  - Nice job using information from the Reader to compose your expansion sentences.
  - I don’t know how this connects to your artist. Can you explain how it connects? If not, you might not want to include this expansion.
  - The information I put in a box might not be true. It is logical, but it wasn't in the Reader. Try rewriting the sentence by sticking to information you know is true.

TEKS 5.11.D.i; TEKS 5.11.D.ix–xi

FORMAT A BIOGRAPHY (45 MIN.)

- Tell students they will work on the editing stage of the writing process to prepare their biography writing for publication. They will present their published biography to the class during the next lesson.
- Have students turn to Activity Page SR.5, the Biography Format. Refer students to the word-processed or handwritten version, according to the method they will use for publishing. Point out the following format elements:
  - titles set on their own lines and centered
  - headings set on their own lines and left-justified
  - titles and headings underlined (if handwritten) or in bold (if word processed)
  - sources in the reference list underlined (if handwritten) or in italics (if word processed) and followed by the publication date in parentheses

TEKS 5.11.D Edit drafts using standard English conventions, including: (i) complete simple and compound sentences with subject-verb agreement and avoidance of splices, run-ons, and fragments; (ix) capitalization of abbreviations, initials, acronyms, and organizations; (x) punctuation marks including commas in compound and complex sentences, quotation marks in dialogue, italics and underlining for titles and emphasis; (xi) Correct spelling of words with grade-appropriate orthographic patterns and rules and high-frequency words.

- Have students turn to Activity Page SR.6, the Biography Editing Checklist. Prompt students to silently read through the criteria for each section of the checklist, and ask if they have any questions.
- Remind students to keep the criteria on the checklist in mind as they edit and format their biography. Tell them they will have a chance to use the checklist with a partner to do a final cleanup of mechanics as the writing is prepared for publication.
- Have students use their biography draft, diary entry draft, revisions from Activity Page 17.2, and list of sources from Activity Page 8.4 to edit and format their biography writing.
- Explain that students will use the diary entry as a hook to engage the reader. To do this, they should place the diary entry before the biography portion of their writing.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they work. Check that student writing is rewritten in the appropriate format. If necessary, review the formatting modeled on Activity Page SR.5.

Intermediate

Allow students to edit for meaning by reading their biographies aloud and asking themselves if it sounds right. Encourage students to edit for meaning by combining statements in various ways to make their sentences more complex.

Advanced/Advanced High

Provide support for editing biographies as needed.

ELPS 5.D

Challenge

Have students identify a sentence or passage that should be read in a specific tone (eg., serious, happy, excited, etc.). Have students explain why this tone is appropriate for this passage, then have them practice reading the passage with that tone.

EDIT A BIOGRAPHY (25 MIN.)

- As students finish rewriting and formatting their biography writing, pair them with a classmate to exchange their biographies and review them using Activity Page SR.6.
- After partners finish reviewing each other's writing, have students complete the final editing of their own writing and note two personal editing goals at the bottom of the checklist.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they work. Check that student writing is edited using the checklist for standard English capitalization, punctuation, and spelling. If necessary, review and briefly model editing for various points on the checklist based on student needs.

- Have students word process or handwrite the published version of their writing.

PRACTICE PRESENTING A BIOGRAPHY (15 MIN.)

- As students complete final editing, pair them with a partner to practice presenting their biographies by reading them aloud for fluency.

LESSON WRAP-UP (5 MIN.)

- Discuss the writing process with students. Ask them to share which tasks were easiest and which ones were the most challenging at different points in the process.

ADVANCE PREPARATION

Writing

- Determine if all students will have time to present to the whole class, or if the class needs to be divided into groups in order to complete presentations. The lesson allows for a total of 60 minutes for presentations, and each student should be allotted 3 to 4 minutes for speaking and transition time.
- You will need a timer to track student presentations in groups.
- Write the Biography Presentations Writing Prompt on the board/chart paper. Alternatively, you may access a digital version in the digital components for this unit.
  - Which Renaissance artist do you admire most and why?

REVIEW EXPECTATIONS (5 MIN.)

- Have students take out their published biography writing.
- Remind students of the following:
  - Use appropriate volume for the group and pace for a speech (purposefully slowed down).
  - Be respectful listeners by keeping bodies still, making eye contact, and using appropriate nonverbal responses, such as subtle facial expressions.
- Tell students that their purpose for listening is to think about which artist they admire the most and why. They will discuss and write about this information at the end of this lesson.

 TEKS 5.1.C Give an organized presentation employing eye contact, speaking rate, volume, enunciation, natural gestures, and conventions of language to communicate ideas effectively; TEKS 5.7.C Use text evidence to support an appropriate response; TEKS 5.7.F Respond using newly acquired vocabulary as appropriate; TEKS 5.12.C Compose argumentative texts including opinion essays using genre characteristics and craft.

PRESENT A BIOGRAPHY (60 MIN.)

- Begin student presentations in the grouping you chose in advance.
- While students present, monitor for appropriate speaking and listening behaviors while using a timer to pace the presentations.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they present. Listen for presenters speaking at an understandable pace and appropriate volume, and look for audience members keeping bodies still, making eye contact, and using appropriate nonverbal responses, such as subtle facial expressions.

- After approximately half of the students have presented, provide a 5 minute intermission.
- Complete student presentations.

WRITE A JOURNAL RESPONSE (15 MIN.)

- Tell students to reflect on the presentations they heard.
- Direct students' attention to the writing prompt you prepared in advance. Call on a student to read it aloud.
  - Which Renaissance artist do you admire most and why?
- Have students take out their journals and respond to the Biography Presentations Writing Prompt.
- Tell students to include vocabulary and information from the Renaissance unit in their responses.

Check for Understanding

Circulate the classroom and check in with students while they write. If necessary, prompt students to draw a line through the word(s) they want to change and keep writing rather than continually erasing and rewriting. If a student is hesitant to write, have them share thoughts orally, and then repeat a sentence that the student can write to get started.

Pausing Point

END-OF-UNIT CONTENT ASSESSMENT

Use the first day of the Pausing Point to administer the assessment of content knowledge acquired by reading Patrons, Artists, and Scholars. Make sure each student has a copy of Activity Page PP.2. You may have collected this activity page from students at the beginning of the unit.

- Allow students as much time as they need to complete the assessment during the first Pausing Point day. In most cases, this assessment will take approximately 30 to 45 minutes.
- Tell students to read and answer the questions about what they have learned about the Renaissance. Encourage students to do their best. Review their work once they have finished.
- Circulate around the room as students complete the assessment to ensure that everyone is working individually.
- Use the following Remediation and Enrichment suggestions to plan activities for the remainder of the first Pausing Point day.

Content Assessment Answer Key

PAUSING POINT FOR DIFFERENTIATION OF INSTRUCTION

Please use the final four days of this unit (or three days if you chose to pause one day after Lesson 7) to address results of the Content Assessment, Unit Assessment (for reading comprehension; fluency, if applicable; grammar; and morphology), and spelling assessments.

Remediation

Content

For a detailed description of remediation strategies, which addresses lagging skills in Reading Comprehension, Fluency, Language, and Writing, refer to the Program Guide.

Writing

- Use time during the Pausing Point to revisit students' biographies. Meet briefly with individual students to discuss areas in which improvement is needed.
- You may suggest that students who need more practice revise portions of their biography with your feedback, or compose new sections (e.g., write a diary entry about a different project for the artist written about, or write about the early years of a different Renaissance artist). Provide additional structure and guidance for students, making copies of both Activity Page SR.4 (the Biography Rubric) and Activity Page SR.6 (the Biography Editing Checklist) available. Circulate the classroom and check in with students as they write.

Enrichment

If students have mastered the content and skills in The Renaissance unit, their experience with the domain concepts may be enriched by the following activities:

- Students may read the enrichment selection contained in the Reader. The selection contains information about music and dancing during the Renaissance. The Activity Book contains an activity page students can complete as they read this selection.
- Students may respond to any of the following writing prompts, including conducting independent research, as necessary, to support their response:
  - Convert a vignette from Patrons, Artists, and Scholars into a play scene (e.g., Leonardo and his apprentice from pages 20–21).
  - Create an advertisement announcing a viewing of Isabella d'Este's grotta.
  - Choose a portrait from the Renaissance Portrait Gallery at the end of the Reader, and use what you learned about the individual and about Renaissance style to write about the person.
- Students may share, either with a small group or with the class, the writing they generated either during this unit or in response to the writing prompts in this Enrichment section.

PARAGRAPH ABOUT A PARAGRAPH

Writers often organize good paragraphs using a common set of guidelines. First, writers include a topic sentence to introduce the topic or central idea of the paragraph. The topic sentence tells what the paragraph will be about. Next, writers include supporting sentences to explain the topic or central idea. Writers usually include at least three to five sentences to give the reader supporting details and facts about the topic or central idea. Including interesting facts and details helps make the paragraph informative and interesting to read. It is important that the sentences stick to the topic. Finally, writers end the paragraph with a concluding sentence, or their final thought about the topic or central idea. Using these guidelines can be helpful to writing a clear and informative paragraph.

Guidance for Teacher Use of Rubrics

Rubrics are provided for evaluation of the content and structure of student writing composed within each unit. The criteria within the descriptions correspond to what is taught in the writing lessons. “Exemplary” to “Beginning” performance columns provide graduated descriptions for each criterion. The columns for “Strong,” “Developing,” and “Beginning” performance are shaded to help students initially attend to the description for “Exemplary” performance. The rubrics allow teachers and students to identify graduated steps for improvement when aspects of the writing do not meet all the taught criteria. To do this, teachers (and students) may highlight the language from each row that best describes the student writing.

STORY OF CARLO AND LEONARDO

Narrator: Carlo drags an enormous contraption up the steep, rocky hill.

Carlo: I don’t know why I let you talk me into this, Master Leonardo!

Leonardo: [laughs quietly] Here, let me help.

Narrator: Leonardo steadied one huge wing of the flying machine as he walked alongside his servant. When they reached the summit, Leonardo gazed down at the streets and buildings of Florence.

Leonardo: Ah, Carlo, in a few moments, you will be sailing over our fair city.

Carlo: [sighing] Master, I wish it were you who could experience that pleasure.

Narrator: Leonardo fastened the straps around his servant’s thin shoulders and waist.

Leonardo: Done! [tightened the last leather tie]

Carlo: Master, I look like a giant dragonfly!

Leonardo: Hush. If this works, your name will be known throughout history.

Carlo: If it doesn’t work, I’ll be history!

Narrator: Leonardo led Carlo to the edge of a high cliff. Carlo peered over, then made the sign of the cross.

Carlo: If you please, Master, has it occurred to you that if God had intended man to fly, he would have given us wings?

Narrator: But Leonardo just smiled and gave Carlo a hearty push off the cliff. As Carlo plummeted downward, Leonardo shouted.

Leonardo: Man can do anything he sets his mind to do, my faithless friend!

STORY OF MICHELANGELO AND LORENZO DE' MEDICI

Narrator: One day, a group of boys were called to the home of the incredibly important Lorenzo de' Medici. What could a man so rich and powerful, a man people called "the Magnificent," want to tell these boys?

Lorenzo: [looking at the boys and pointing to an ancient Roman statue of a nature god called a faun] You see this stone figure? A brilliant sculptor created this piece centuries ago. I want each of you to carve a statue exactly like this one.

Narrator: Some of the boys groaned. Lorenzo paid no attention.

Lorenzo: Work quickly and accurately. The young man who produces the best sculpture wins a place in my art school.

Narrator: Sometime later, as Lorenzo strolled through his courtyard, he spotted one boy whose work looked far superior to the rest. He turned to his assistant.

Lorenzo: Who is that child? Look at how he has carved the head of the faun. It's difficult to tell his work from the real thing!

The Assistant: [checking his list] Let's see. Michelangelo Buonarroti, second son of a former small-town mayor. Family is from minor nobility. Mother died when the boy was six. Hmm . . . not a very good Latin or Greek scholar. Ran away from school a lot.

Lorenzo: Ran away?

The Assistant: Yes, it seems he sneaked away from school to go to the churches, where he spent hours copying the paintings.

Lorenzo: Ah, a true art lover.

The Assistant: Well, his father isn't. The father is upset that Michelangelo works as an apprentice in Ghirlandaio's studio. He thinks he should pursue a different profession.

Narrator: Lorenzo walked up to Michelangelo and gazed at the faun's head the boy had carved.

Lorenzo: That's a lovely sculpture. Young man, come live in our home and learn what you can from us.

The Great Raphael

Raphael was another talented artist of the period. He was born Raffaello Sanzio in 1483 CE. He was younger than both Leonardo and Michelangelo. Raphael lost both of his parents at an early age. By 11, he was on his own, working as an apprentice in a busy art studio.

In 1504 CE, when Raphael was 21, he moved to Florence where Michelangelo and Leonardo were already living. There, he studied the techniques of the older artists and learned to use them in his own paintings.

Remember, in those days artists supported themselves by getting commissions from patrons. The wealthy people of Florence were eager to own beautiful paintings. By the time Raphael arrived, both Leonardo and Michelangelo were not painting as much. As he aged, Leonardo grew more interested in math and science and was reluctant to paint at all. Michelangelo's energies were consumed by big projects assigned to him by the head of the Church, the pope. So, young Raphael had many people ready to pay him to paint.

While in Florence, Raphael created at least seventeen paintings of the Madonna, or mother of Jesus, and the Holy Family for various individuals. If you look at one of Raphael's Madonnas and compare it to a Madonna painted during the Middle Ages, you will see how people's view of the world changed in the Renaissance.

In the medieval image, the Madonna looks a little stiff. But the painting wasn't intended to be lifelike—its main purpose was to express religious devotion.

But Raphael's painting is different. He presents very natural, human figures that are so lifelike, it is as if they could step out from the painting.

Raphael in Rome

In 1508 CE, Raphael was called to Rome by Pope Julius II. While Michelangelo was painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, Raphael was put in charge of painting a series of rooms in the Vatican.

In one room he painted a fresco, or mural, that has become very famous. It is called The School of Athens. The composition of the painting shows how Raphael was a great master of perspective, while the subject matter shows how much the Renaissance movement admired the ancient Greeks. Raphael painted many scholars and philosophers—some are reading, some are discussing big ideas. In the center of the painting, Raphael placed the great philosophers, Plato and Aristotle.

After Raphael's patron, Pope Julius II, died, Raphael became a special favorite of Pope Leo X. Leo put Raphael in charge of the work on St. Peter's Basilica. In addition, Raphael directed the efforts to dig up and study ancient buildings and statues in Rome.

Raphael led a productive life, but a short one. The artist died on his thirty-seventh birthday. Part of the epitaph on his tomb in Rome reads, "While he lived he made Mother Nature fear to be vanquished by him."

RAPHAEL SECOND SOURCE

An Author and a Painter Meet

In the early 1500s, culture was thriving in Urbino, a hill town in central Italy. A few years after painting for the Church in Rome, Raphael went to work in the Duke of Urbino's court. There he met the famous author Castiglione, who also served the duke. The two men became friends and Raphael painted a portrait of Castiglione. The beautiful painting portrays Castiglione as a distinguished gentleman.

BRUNELLESCHI SECOND SOURCE

During the Renaissance movement artists applied techniques that enabled them to create paintings that looked lively and more like the world around them. Brunelleschi was one such innovator who helped make this possible.

Brunelleschi was a painter, sculptor, and architect who worked in Florence and Rome in the early 1400s. He made a significant contribution helping artists of the day create more naturalistic depictions of life. Brunelleschi was inspired by an essay on architecture written by an ancient Roman writer named Vitruvius. Vitruvius described how buildings and other objects painted on a flat surface could be made to "advance and recede." These aspects of distance make paintings look more naturalistic and almost three-dimensional. Brunelleschi applied what he learned from Vitruvius' essay to a drawing he made of the public square in front of the cathedral of Florence. In doing so, he arrived at a mathematical formula for perspective. Artists who applied Brunelleschi's mathematical formula for perspective to art could create a more accurate, naturalistic sense of space in their work.

Brunelleschi taught the principals of perspective to many Renaissance painters, who used it to produce magnificent naturalistic art. Renaissance painters were now able to place naturalistic figures in naturalistic backgrounds. They began to create spaces so naturalistic that viewers felt they could step through the painting into the world depicted.

Brunelleschi's rediscovery of perspective was a good example of how Renaissance artists managed to go forward by looking backward. Brunelleschi learned what he could from the ancient writers and then used what he had learned to improve his own art. By devoting himself to naturalism and teaching others how to use the principles of perspective, he helped foster a new appreciation for art and paved the way for a great flowering of the arts in Florence.

LEONARDO SECOND SOURCE

Leonardo was born in 1452 CE near the village of Vinci, about 60 miles from Florence. When he was about 15, his father took him to meet a famous artist in Florence. He persuaded the artist to make his son an apprentice. About five years after he began his apprenticeship, Leonardo established his own workshop in Florence. Leonardo followed passions in many different areas of study, and it seemed he could master anything he set his mind to.

Leonardo was about thirty years old when he heard the Duke of Milan wanted to hire a military engineer, a painter, an architect, and a sculptor. Leonardo offered himself as one person who could do all four jobs. The duke would not be disappointed.

In fact, Leonardo applied himself in many fields. He designed a device that allowed a person to study the total eclipse of the sun without damaging the eye. He designed the first parachute. He designed a model city with two levels and a series of underground canals. An accomplished musician, he even invented musical instruments, such as mechanized drums and keyboards for wind instruments.

Leonardo spent countless hours observing nature, drawing and recording what he saw. He also studied mathematics because he believed it was the foundation of art. One of his famous drawings illustrates a formula that states that the span of a man's outstretched arms is equal to his height. Leonardo left behind many detailed and highly accurate drawings of human anatomy and of various mechanical devices.

Leonardo was inspired by the ancient Roman civilization. He was devoted to knowledge and beauty in all its forms and expressions. The ancient Romans would certainly have admired Leonardo da Vinci.

MICHELANGELO SECOND SOURCE

Michelangelo was a multi-talented artist. Although he considered himself to be simply a sculptor, he was also a marvelous painter and architect who changed the face of Rome.

Pietà

Michelangelo's first major work in Rome was a sculpture commissioned by the pope. He was hired to create a large marble statue of Mary, the mother of Jesus, holding and mourning her dead son. This exquisite sculpture, inspired by a painting, is called the Pietà.

Michelangelo's extraordinary lifelike Pietà was said to be the most beautiful work of marble in all of Rome. It remains in Rome today, and each year hundreds of thousands of visitors to St. Peter's Basilica continue to marvel at this magnificent sculpture.

Sistine Chapel

The pope also hired Michelangelo to paint the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel where many ceremonies were held. The work was extremely difficult. Michelangelo spent nearly four years painting from the scaffolding he designed to reach the ceiling.

The finished work was a masterpiece. The paintings depicted many scenes from the Old Testament. The Sistine Chapel ceiling is Michelangelo's most famous work.

Medici Church

In 1517 CE, Michelangelo returned to Florence and began work on the Medici family church. He was asked to design the façade, or front, of the building. Michelangelo went on to design the tombs of both Lorenzo de' Medici and his brother Giuliano. He also agreed to design a library to be attached to the Medici church.

Final Days

The artist continued working almost until the day he died in 1564 CE. Michelangelo was buried in Florence as he had wished. Michelangelo never married and left no children. He said, his wife "was his art," and his children were "the works [he] shall leave" behind.

Guidance for Teacher Use of Editing Checklists

Editing checklists allow students and teachers to evaluate students' command of language conventions and writing mechanics within unit writing projects. They serve a different purpose than rubrics; rubrics measure the extent to which students apply specific instructional criteria they have been building toward across the unit whereas editing checklists measure the extent to which students apply English language conventions and general writing mechanics. With regard to expectations for accountability, we recommend using the editing checklist to measure students' command of language conventions and writing mechanics only when students have received the appropriate instructional support and specific opportunity to review their writing for that purpose.

Evaluating Student Writing

Make enough copies of the rubric and editing checklist found in this section for evaluating each student's writing piece.

Reading Response: "The Bankers Who Loved Art"

Respond to the following prompt in five to seven sentences. Include at least two pieces of evidence in your response.

What motivated wealthy patrons, such as the Medici family, to commission so much art? What motivated religious patrons, such as popes, to commission so much art? How are their reasons similar?

Answers may vary, but may include that wealthy patrons, such as the Medici family, were inspired by their love of ancient Greek and Roman ideas, art, and literature to support artists of their day. Religious patrons hoped that people would be inspired by the power of the Church when they viewed magnificent works of art commissioned by the Church. The reasons are similar because both wealthy and religious patrons wanted to surround themselves with beautiful things and be known for their support of artists and art.

6. Dear Master, I wrote to you recently. I hope the letter reached you. In the meantime my mother has written to me, scolding me for not writing to you. She also said you are unhappy with me because I do not write to you. She said I must apologize to you. I do not have a good excuse, except that I am lazy about writing and you have not been at home. As soon as I knew you were at home or were coming home, I wrote to you at once. Therefore I most humbly beg you to forgive me, for I have no other friend on earth but you. I hope you are not angry with me, because you are like a father to me.
7. How I wish you were here at Venice. There are so many good fellows among the Italians who seek my company more and more every day. This makes me very happy. Some of the men who show me friendship are scholars, good lute-players, and pipers, painters, and honest and noble men. On the other hand, there are also faithless, lying, thievish rascals. I did not believe such evil people could exist on earth. They are so deceptive that if you do know them, you would think they were the nicest men on earth. I cannot help laughing to myself when they talk to me. They know people are aware of their evil acts, but that does not bother them.
8. I have many good friends among the Italians who warn me not to eat and drink with their painters. They say many painters are my enemies and copy my work in the churches and wherever they can find it. Even though they copy my work, they criticize it and claim it is not done in the antique style. They also say it is no good, but the famous painter, Bellini, has praised me highly to many gentlemen. He would like to have something of mine. He even came to me himself and asked me to create something for him. He said that he would pay well for it too. Everyone tells me what an honest man he is, so that I am really friendly with him. He is very old and yet he is the best painter of all.

Sample Diary Entry: Raphael

Oh, I am weary! Pope Julius II has put me in charge of painting many rooms of the Vatican here in Rome. Painting on a canvas takes its toll on my arm, but painting on a wall takes its toll on my entire body. The current section I toil on gives me renewed motivation, though. I call it The School of Athens. I must say my use of perspective is strong in the painting, and it is an honor to center the piece with two Greek greats: Plato and Aristotle.

Merchants,
Markets, and Mud:
Towns in the Middle Ages

THE BIG QUESTION

How did the growth of trade during the Middle Ages affect the way people lived?

It is raining again! You stand in a puddle on the edge of a narrow street. You have just entered town through one of two gates. The gates are the only ways in and out of this walled town. Inside the walls, tiny townhouses stand side-by-side. As you move through the crowd, you spot rats scurrying about, feeding on discarded trash. Nearby, you hear the varied cries of people selling fruits, vegetables, eggs, and pies. It is market day and people have set up their stalls in the town square.

As you make your way through the muddy streets, you hear the sound of church bells. They ring out to sound the hour and to call people to church.

Metalworker's stall in medieval market

You have just caught a glimpse of a town in Europe during the late Middle Ages.

Streets in medieval towns were often crowded and muddy.

In the early part of the Middle Ages, most people lived in the countryside. Between the years 1000 and 1350 CE, fueled by trade, towns began to grow. New jobs emerged, and, as a result, more and more people left the countryside to live and work in towns.

Peasants farming in the countryside

With this growth in trade, an increased number of people became involved in commerce, or business. As a result, a class of people, called the middle class, grew in importance. Merchants and craftsmen were part of the middle class.

Towns grew as the middle class created successful businesses, and therefore jobs. Some merchants became rich and influential members of town communities.

Merchants and artisans sold goods in town markets.

To protect their businesses, merchants established guilds in towns throughout Europe. Guilds were organizations made up of merchants. Guilds controlled wages as well as the price and quality of the goods the merchants sold.

Not only did merchants thrive, so too did skilled craftsmen, such as carpenters, papermakers, glassmakers, and blacksmiths. Skilled craftsmen were also important members of town communities. They made and sold their goods in the towns in which they lived and worked. Just like merchants, skilled craftsmen protected their businesses by forming guilds. Only highly skilled craftsmen were invited to join these guilds. Many years of training went into becoming a skilled craftsman.

Medieval Craftsmen

There was a certain pattern to daily life in towns in the Middle Ages. From Monday to Saturday, towns were busy with the hustle and bustle of street vendors, shopkeepers, craftsmen, and market sellers. Pickpockets and purse snatchers were afoot, too. Shops opened as early as 6:00 a.m. Most towns held markets two or three times a week. Local farmers sold produce and animals.

Charters such as this one from Bedford, England, outlined certain rights.

Towns were not outside the control of the local lord. Merchants and craftsmen usually paid lords in the form of money or goods. However, in exchange for money or goods, many lords granted towns special charters. The charters allowed wealthy and influential townspeople the right to make their own laws. Over time, this new decision-making process changed the feudal system.

With a growing economy, a banking system began to develop. The increasingly wealthy churches in towns created schools called universities. Places such as Oxford and Cambridge in England, and Paris in France, became important centers of learning.

Construction on the chapel at Oxford University's Merton College began in the 1200s.

It was not long before many European towns and cities became terribly overcrowded. People lived in small houses crowded together.

Rats spread disease in towns.

The towns and cities were also disease-ridden. Rats scurrying about helped spread disease. Unless you lived in a castle, you did not have a toilet inside your home. Instead, people used chamber pots and threw the contents into the streets!

Local water supplies, polluted with the waste that was discarded daily, carried disease. Sickness and disease were common. The Black Death spread easily in such conditions.

As they did in the countryside, people in towns cooked on small fires inside their homes. Fires frequently broke out and were difficult to control. Townspeople were required to keep buckets of water outside their homes—just in case.

Fires spread quickly in medieval towns.

Many Middle Age towns were walled. People entering or leaving did so through gates. Often a toll, or fee, was charged to enter a town. A toll collector stood at the gate to collect the fee. The tolls were either paid in money or in goods. Gates were designed to keep criminals out, or if necessary, to lock criminals in so that they could be caught. There was no organized police force, but instead there were watchmen. Any member of the public could be asked to help catch an escaping criminal. The town gates were locked at night when the curfew bell sounded.

Chapter 1

An Italian Rebirth

THE BIG QUESTION

What factors inspired the Renaissance movement?

Art, literature, and architecture are forms of expression. These forms of expression often communicate what is happening during certain periods in time. Have you ever heard the word Renaissance? The word Renaissance means “rebirth” and comes from both the French and Latin languages. This word Renaissance describes a cultural movement that began in what is now Italy and then spread throughout most of Europe. This was no ordinary change, but rather a revolutionary movement that led to the creation of art, the likes of which the world had never seen before.

The Renaissance movement was inspired by a renewed interest in ancient Greek and Roman culture and learning. New ideas were born and old ideas were reborn. The Renaissance was a particular period of change, in literature, art, philosophy, science, education, and architecture. To understand why the Renaissance was such an extraordinary movement, it helps to recall what was happening in Europe before the Renaissance.

What Came Before the Renaissance?

More than 2,000 years ago, ancient Greece gave us tremendous works of art and architecture. Ancient Greek sculptures emphasized balance, proportion, and the “perfect” human form. Ancient Greeks built strong buildings supported by mighty pillars and columns. They gave us the ideas of great philosophers, such as Plato and Aristotle. They gave us lasting works of literature, including Homer’s Iliad and Odyssey. From ancient Greece we have inherited important ideas about government, including the idea of democracy—rule by the people. Even the word democracy comes from the Greeks. The Greek word demos means “people.”

Later, the ancient Romans built upon the ideas and achievements of the Greeks. Like the Greeks, Romans prized sculpture with mythological themes. The Romans also built great structures, such as the Colosseum, and perfected the use of the arch and dome. They left us powerful literature such as the Aeneid by Virgil. The mighty Roman armies conquered lands and established a vast empire.

Eventually, different warring tribes invaded the Roman Empire, weakening Rome's power. These warring tribes sought land. The resulting instability greatly diminished the influence of ancient Rome. Slowly but surely new cultural groups, no longer bound by ties to Rome, began to define themselves. The great Roman Empire declined and was eventually divided in half.

Moving On

Across western Europe, during the time that is considered to be the start of the Middle Ages, kingdoms and nations began to take shape. Trade, economy, laws, and systems of government were established. Cities and towns grew. Architectural styles and designs, among other forms of expression, became unique to the people of a particular land.

While the cultural achievements of the Greeks and Romans were admired, new, home-grown ideas began to thrive. Knowledge of the writings of the ancient Greeks and Romans was left in the hands of the few educated elite and in religious houses called monasteries. Some men and women devoted their lives to the Church. Men called monks lived in monasteries. Women called nuns lived in convents. The monks made beautiful copies of writings from ancient Greece and Rome. If you wanted to make another copy of a book, you had to do it by hand. There were no printing presses and, of course, no copy machines or scanners. And so, quietly and in some ways secretly, the monks helped keep classical learning alive.

Passing the Torch

Monarchs and the Christian Church established laws and a sense of order. The Church was a powerful influence throughout western Europe during the Middle Ages. With its rituals and teachings, the Church was a very important part of the daily lives of medieval people. Everyone from rich noblemen to poor peasants gave money, materials, and sometimes their labor to help build the magnificent churches of the Middle Ages.

During the Middle Ages, impressive castles were constructed across the European landscape. Kings battled each other for land, and nations were born. People thought a lot about the path to heaven. Art was created to honor God, or to communicate stories from the Bible, which was important because few people were able to read during this time. To express religious devotion, medieval artists created stylized religious figures and moved away from the natural human form common in ancient Greek and Roman art.

But as you know, history does not stand still. Things change and new ideas emerge. And so along came the Renaissance movement. But how, and why, the Renaissance movement emerged is the question.

Petrarch and Humanism

During the 1300s, there was a great Italian poet named Petrarch. He admired the classical values and teachings of ancient Greece and Rome. He filled his library with as many ancient books as he could find. He invited others to read and study these books as well.

Over the years, more and more people had the opportunity to learn about the literature, art, and government of ancient Greece and Rome. These people who admired ancient Greece and Rome were called humanists. Their intellectual and cultural interest in the art, literature, and government of ancient Greece and Rome was known as humanism.

Under the influence of the humanists, many artists, philosophers, and scientists studied the works produced by the ancient Romans and Greeks. A study of the past prompted many to examine the present, and an increased interest in certain subjects led to a greater understanding of the world at large. For example, some scientists such as Copernicus and Galileo looked to the heavens and the stars. They made astonishing discoveries. Others looked to nature and the physical earth.

And so the Renaissance movement was born.

Petrarch

In particular, breathtakingly beautiful art was produced. Renaissance artists developed techniques that allowed them to paint the human form in a much more realistic way. Humanists promoted the power and unique talents of the individual, both in terms of intellect and ability, but also in terms of the human form itself. An Italian architect, Leon Battista Alberti, summed up what you might call a Renaissance motto: “Men can do anything with themselves, if they will.” William Shakespeare, the English playwright wrote, “What a piece of work is a man!” The great minds of the Renaissance expanded the themes of their work beyond the Biblical to include those of history, science, and literature. As a result, the people of the Renaissance made their mark upon the earth.

The Middle Class

Typically, most people lived and died in the towns and rural areas where they were born. As had been the case for centuries, people belonged to groups, or classes, and social mobility was limited.

However, during the late Middle Ages into the Renaissance period, as the Italians became wealthier and cities grew, there were more and more merchants and craftsmen. There were so many, in fact, that there was an expansion of the middle class, the class between those who worked the land and the nobility. As a result, the wealthy middle class grew in power and status. Bankers and merchants proved you didn't have to be born a nobleman to be rich and powerful. You could work hard and make money and rise in society. And with money comes political influence. The rise of the middle class was not restricted to Italy. The financial and political rise of this social group was evident throughout Europe. Without a doubt, the middle class assumed even greater influence during the Renaissance.

Patrons: Dollars for Scholars

So what do merchants and money have to do with the Renaissance? These wealthy merchants could read and write, although most people could not. As a result, some merchants or businessmen became interested in literature and art. Of course, most of them were so busy running their businesses that they didn't have time to write books or paint, but they had enough money to help others write, study, and create works of art.

NAME: _____

Some of the merchants became patrons of the writers and artists. For example, a rich banker might ask an artist to paint portraits of his wife and children. The banker would pay for the portraits. In addition, he might provide the artist with food, clothing, and a house while he worked. With the support of such rich patrons, many artists were able to explore their ideas and develop their skills. They no longer had to worry about how they were going to eat or where they were going to sleep. Later, you will read more about the Medici family, one of the most influential banking families and art patrons of all time.

And what did the patrons get out of all this? What was their reward for paying artists to create paintings, statues, books, and buildings? The patrons became famous. The works of art they commissioned signaled their power, prestige, and importance. They were admired and celebrated for the works they paid to have created. The artists and writers also made their mark in history. Shakespeare, perhaps the greatest writer of all, had royal and noble patrons. But it is his name that we remember today.

The world was indeed changing. Exquisite works of art were created by people so extraordinary that it would be wonderful to have a time machine to take us back in history to meet them. But as we do not, we will just have to turn the pages of this book to learn about them instead!

The Middle Ages

The Middle Ages had its fair share of troubling times, but it was also a time of great achievement in art and learning. Let's examine some key achievements.

Western Europe

Universities were founded in cities such as Bologna, Oxford, Paris, and Cambridge. Hundreds of castles, such as Alcázar de Segovia in Spain and Dover Castle in England, were constructed in western Europe. The building of great cathedrals which took hundreds of years to complete was also undertaken during this age.

Alcázar de Segovia, Spain

Byzantine Civilization

When invading tribes destroyed and took over much of the Western Roman Empire, the Eastern Roman Empire, or Byzantine civilization, remained strong. The great city of Constantinople was the center of Byzantine civilization. Constantinople's central location made the city an important link between Europe and Asia. From about 300 to 1453 CE, Byzantine civilization was one of the most advanced in the world.

Hagia Sophia in Turkey was once a cathedral. It became a mosque when Constantinople, now Istanbul, was conquered by the Ottómen Turks.

Islamic Civilization

During the Middle Ages, many Muslim scholars made significant progress in math, science, and astronomy. Some scholars translated works by ancient Greek philosophers and scientists into Arabic, which helped preserve classical writings. A great thinker and writer named Ibn Sina wrote influential works of philosophy, poetry, and astronomy. He also made important medical discoveries about how to treat diseases.

A large part of Spain was conquered and settled by Muslims. Learning thrived in many Islamic cities. Cities such as Palencia, Valladolid, Salamanca, and Alcalá had libraries, schools, and universities. In the 900s, scholars from Africa, Asia, and Europe traveled to Córdoba to be part of a city rich in learning and the arts.

Beginning in the late 1000s, Christian forces started to drive the Muslims out of Spain. By the time of the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella—the king and queen who helped finance Columbus’s voyage in 1492 CE—the Muslims had been driven out. They left behind, however, writings about science and philosophy that would contribute to the reawakening of learning in Italy during the Renaissance.

The Alhambra in Spain is a magnificent castle and fortress built by the Muslims.

Morals, Modesty, and Manners

THE BIG QUESTION

What were the Renaissance ideals of how a prince or a courtier should act?

Niccolò Machiavelli worked for the government of Florence in the late 1400s. He witnessed the Medici family fall from power, and he witnessed the bitter struggles between the city-states in Italy, between city-states and foreign countries, and between the pope and other rulers.

All this fighting among rulers made him think. He thought about how a prince should rule his people. Because of all the fighting, he especially thought about how a prince should defend himself against enemies and remain in power. He wrote his ideas in a famous book called The Prince. This book was a study of the art of politics and its publication caused much discussion among the rulers of the time.

What is the chief goal of a prince? “To stay in power,” said Machiavelli. Machiavelli thought that to keep his power, a prince might at times have to be dishonest. “A wise leader,” Machiavelli wrote, “cannot and should not keep his word when keeping it is not to his advantage.”

Machiavelli asked, “Is it better [for a prince] to be loved than to be feared, or the reverse?” Machiavelli said that a prince should wish to be both loved and feared. But he also said that if a ruler had to choose one or the other, then it would be better for people to fear him.

Niccolò Machiavelli

These ideas and others were misinterpreted and have given Machiavelli a bad reputation over the years. Even today, if you describe someone as “Machiavellian,” you mean that person is crafty, sneaky, power-hungry, and willing to use any means to achieve his or her ends.

Get Real!

Some historians think Machiavelli doesn't deserve his bad reputation. They say he was a wise man who preferred a government in which the people had a say, as it had been back in the Roman Republic. They say that in The Prince, Machiavelli was just being realistic. He was simply writing about what men do, rather than what they should do, and the challenges of governing a large population.

But others disagree. They think that Machiavelli had a too dark and pessimistic view of human nature. They think that people aren't as bad as Machiavelli thought.

The Bad Borgias

When Machiavelli wrote about princes who didn't keep their promises, he often had the Borgia family in mind.

Many historians agree that the Borgias were often cruel, dangerous, and violent people. Rodrigo Borgia, who became Pope Alexander VI, holds the unpleasant reputation of being one of the most corrupt popes of all times. In The Prince, Machiavelli wrote this about Alexander VI: “There never was a man more effective in swearing that things were true, and the greater the oaths with which he made a promise, the less he observed it.”

Rodrigo's second son, Cesare Borgia, was considered to be a brute. Unfortunately, he was put in charge of an army. Machiavelli traveled with Cesare at times and was impressed by his military skills. Cesare knew how to get power and keep it. He ruthlessly tried to conquer everything that lay in his path.

When Cesare decided he wanted to take possession of the city of Camerino, he visited his friend, the Duke of Urbino. Cesare asked to borrow all of Urbino's cannons so he could use them to attack Camerino.

The Duke, a trusting man, agreed to Cesare's request. But that night, Cesare marched back into his friend's city and conquered Urbino with its own cannons!

Later, Cesare went on to capture Camerino by deception, too. He negotiated with the rulers of the city. If they would surrender, then Cesare promised to let them off easily. They agreed to surrender. Then Cesare betrayed them. As soon as Cesare and his army entered the city, he gave orders for the rulers to be killed.

Cesare Borgia

Fortunately, the Borgias did not stay in power long. Rodrigo Borgia, also known as Pope Alexander VI, died in 1503 CE. Cesare was chased out of Italy. He died in battle in Spain at the age of 31.

Urbino, Italy

From The Prince

Machiavelli also greatly admired ancient Greece and ancient Rome. In a letter he wrote to a friend, Machiavelli said that he wrote The Prince after reading many works of history by “the ancients,” the classical writers of Greece and Rome. “I give myself completely over to the ancients,” Machiavelli said. Here are some excerpts from The Prince.

“Anyone who determines to act in all circumstances the part of a good man must come to ruin among so many who are not good. Hence, if a prince wishes to maintain himself, he must learn how not to be good, and to use that ability or not as is required.”

“The experience of our times shows that the princes who have done great things are the ones who have taken little account of their promises and who have known how to addle the brains of men with their craft.”

“If men were all good, this advice would not be good, but since men are wicked and do not keep their promises to you, you likewise do not have to keep your promises to them.”

“So far as he is able, a prince should stick to the path of good but, if the necessity arises, he should know how to follow evil.”

Castiglione and The Courtier

In the early 1500s, Baldassar Castiglione wrote The Book of the Courtier. It's commonly known as The Courtier for short. In great detail, the book describes how the ideal courtier should behave.

What's a Courtier?

The word court is in courtier. There is the kind of court where trials take place with a judge and sometimes a jury. But this is a different kind of court—the court of a king or prince. A prince's court might mean the palace or mansion where the prince lives. The court also includes the royal family, servants, officers, and advisers of the prince.

A courtier is a person who spends a lot of time at the court of the prince. Sometimes, when people refer to a courtier, they mean a person who hangs around the prince and flatters him and tries to gain his favor. But this doesn't apply to all courtiers.

The Book of the Courtier describes the right ways to behave at court among royals and nobles. It describes the ideals of courtly life.

Castiglione said that a lady should be “witty, elegant, and cultured.” He said a gentleman should be “loyal to his prince and courteous to women.” The courtier should be “athletic, sensitive, artistic, and well-educated.”

A perfect courtier should be able to do everything well: he should be a skilled horseman, a bold soldier in battle, a graceful dancer, and more. He should be “well built and shapely of limb,” not too short or too tall. And he should be a remarkable athlete: he should excel in jousting, wrestling, tennis, and spear-throwing! But, said Castiglione, the courtier should avoid some activities, “such as turning somersaults, rope-walking, and the like, which ... little befit a gentleman.”

You might think that a courtier who can do everything well would be rather conceited. But it’s important, Castiglione said, to be “gentle, modest, and reserved.” In other words, don’t be a show-off.

Most important of all, the courtier “must accompany his actions, gestures, habits, in short his every movement, with grace.” Even when the courtier is doing something very difficult, he should do it so gracefully that it looks easy. The Italian word for this quality is sprezzatura. It means the ability to make things look easy, as though you hardly have to try or think about what you’re doing.

Baldassar Castiglione

Della Casa's Guide to Manners of the Renaissance

During the Renaissance, what people considered “good manners” changed quite a bit. In the 1500s, Giovanni della Casa wrote a book about etiquette, or the customs for polite behavior. Della Casa was a poet and diplomat from Florence. The book, known in Italian as Il Galateo, is largely addressed to his nephew, and therefore takes on a familiar tone, though he intended to reach a wide range of people.

Della Casa detailed proper ways to sit and stand in the company of others. He explained how best to blow your nose, to cut your nails, and to chew your food. He even discussed situations where it might be okay—or not—to express your feelings. The excerpts below reveal just how important good manners and polite behavior were to della Casa.

“It is moreover extremely indecent to spit, cough, and expectorate (as it were) in company, as some hearty fellows are apt to do: and more so, when you have blown your nose, to draw aside and examine the contents of your handkerchief; as if you expected pearls or rubies to distill from your brain. These kinds of habits, in good company, are so very nauseous and disgusting, that if we indulge ourselves in them, no one can be very fond of our acquaintance.”

“It is also an inelegant custom, for any one to apply his nose, by way of smelling to a glass of wine, which another person is to drink; or to a plate of meat, which another is to eat. Nay, I would not advise anyone to smell to anything, which he himself intends to eat or drink: since there is a possibility, at least, that his nose may drop upon it; or the very idea may offend the company, though by good luck that accident may not then befall them.”

“What now can we suppose...to say to those people, whom we sometimes see thrusting, like hogs, their very snouts into their soup, so as not once to lift up their eyes from their hands, from what is set before them? Who, with their cheeks inflated as if they were sounding a trumpet, or puffing up the fire, do not so properly eat, as devour their food?”

Women in the Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

What opportunities did the Renaissance movement afford to some wealthy women of the time?

Although many Renaissance women ran a household as expected by the cultural norms of the day, some women became powerful and influential despite all that stood in their way. One such woman was Isabella d'Este.

Isabella was born in the Italian city-state of Ferrara in 1474 CE. Fortunately, her father, the Duke of Ferrara, believed in the importance of educating both his sons and his daughters.

Isabella blossomed into a brilliant student. When she was only six years old, she knew Latin and Greek and played the lute, a popular instrument during the Renaissance, similar to a guitar. She was a feisty little girl who could and would debate anyone on any topic. Other children called her “La Prima Donna” or “The First Lady.”

Isabella d'Este

Engaged at Six!

As was the custom long ago, the Duke of Ferrara arranged marriages for his children. Arranged marriages allowed powerful families to form political ties and alliances with other powerful families. So, at the tender age of six years old, Isabella became engaged to Francesco Gonzaga of Mantua. But he was much older—all of 14!

The wedding took place when Isabella turned 16, a normal age in those times for a girl to get married. Through this marriage Isabella became related to many ruling families in Italy.

After Isabella moved to Mantua, a beautiful city in northern Italy, she wasted no time getting involved in the politics of the city. Francesco was often away, fighting one battle after another with various city-states and countries. When Francesco was out of town, Isabella skillfully governed the people.

In 1509 CE, while Francesco was leading troops against the city of Venice, he was captured and put in jail for several years. With Francesco gone, it might have seemed like a good opportunity to the princes of unfriendly city-states to try to take over Mantua. But Isabella made it clear to potential enemies that she was very much in charge and they had better not try anything. While Francesco was in prison, she managed to fight off enemies and form strong alliances with other rulers.

Once released from jail, Isabella's husband left to fight more battles. He fought against the French for a few years, and died in 1519 CE.

After that, Isabella led Mantua on her own. She kept her enemies out and made certain that both Mantua and her home city of Ferrara stayed independent and unharmed.

A Passion for the Arts

Not only was Isabella an outstanding ruler, she was also a great patron of the arts. She collected antiques, rare books, and all types of artwork.

Tucked away in the Castle of St. George in Mantua, Isabella built a special room. She called it her grotta, which means “cave.” This treasure chamber contained the works of many of the great artists of the day. Gorgeous paintings hung on the walls of the grotta. In beautifully carved wooden cabinets she kept ancient coins and medals, precious jewels, and gemstones.

Sculptors, writers, and painters visited Isabella’s home often. She employed many of them. In fact, for many years she tried to persuade the great Leonardo da Vinci to paint her portrait. All she could get him to do was a drawing. At one point, he made the excuse that he was too busy working out geometry problems to stop and paint.

Finally, Isabella paid another great Renaissance artist, Titian, to capture her likeness on canvas. Titian did too precise a job. His portrait accurately portrayed Isabella, who was sixty years old at the time. When she looked at the picture, Isabella became furious and demanded that he repaint it. On his second try, Titian wisely made Isabella look a good twenty years younger!

Isabella didn’t forget her fellow women, either. She started a school where young girls could learn Greek, Latin, the arts, philosophy, and literature.

Isabella was an unusual woman for her time. She is justly remembered as the “First Lady of the Renaissance.”

Noble Women

Renaissance women inspired writers to create poetry, sculptors to fashion statues, and artists to paint beautiful portraits. However, the sculptor’s chisel and the painter’s brush were mostly kept out of the hands of women.

Although Renaissance men believed they could do almost anything, they didn’t think the same of women. Men of the Renaissance believed that a young woman born into a noble, wealthy family had three duties: (1) she should marry a rich man from an important family; (2) she should be loyal to that husband; and (3) she should give him sons.

Overcoming Obstacles

Some women overcame the obstacles of their time and became respected artists in their own right. Well-known for her portrait work, Sofonisba Anguissola (1530–1625 CE) is one of the earliest known female artists. Most female artists of the time were the daughters of painters. However, Sofonisba's father was not a painter but a wealthy nobleman.

The oldest of seven children, Sofonisba had five younger sisters and a brother. Her father, Amilcare Anguissola, read and lived by the famous words of Castiglione's The Courtier, including the importance of educating young women. Both Sofonisba and her sister Elena lived and trained with prominent local artists. Under her father's encouragement, Sofonisba received early inspiration from notable artists including Michelangelo. As a young artist, Sofonisba trained three of her younger sisters to be painters.

Her most well-known works include many self-portraits and the famous family portrait Lucia, Minerva, and Europa Anguissola Playing Chess. Lucia, Minerva, and Europa are three of her younger sisters. The painting captures a glimpse of noble family life during this time.

the daughter of Italian painter Prospero Fontana. Lavinia Fontana (1552–1614 CE) received patronage from the family of Pope Gregory XIII and painted portraits of many well-known individuals. Recognized for her attention to detail and the use of vibrant colors, her self-portraits and family paintings were reminiscent of Sofonisba Anguissola. Lavinia married lesser-known artist Gian Paolo Zappi, who ultimately worked as her agent.

Renaissance Style

During the European Renaissance, there was more freedom in the style of dress, and headdresses allowed more hair to show than had previously been considered acceptable. The high collars and starched ruffs, or pleated collars, of this period led to upswept hairstyles that were sometimes formed over a wire frame in a heart shape. In England a variety of beards, mustaches, and hairstyles for men became popular during the reign of Henry VIII. The popularity of Queen Elizabeth I inspired her subjects to wear red wigs or dye their hair red and shave their hairlines to give the appearance of a high forehead like hers.

Toward the end of the 1500s, a red-blond hair color was popularized in paintings by Italian artist Titian. To achieve the color, Venetian women applied mixtures of alum, sulfur, soda, and rhubarb to their hair and sat in the sun to let it dry. A new custom in Renaissance France was to grind flowers into a powder and apply the mixture to hair. Blonde hair was considered especially stylish for women. Women often bleached their hair to make it blonde. Wigs or fake locks of hair made from yellow or white silk were also common.

Clothing was an important status symbol during the Renaissance. The wealthy dressed in fancy clothing. A wealthy person would have a variety of clothes made from fine materials, furs, and silks. Peasants, on the other hand, typically had only one or two sets of clothing. Wealthy men wore colorful tights or stockings with a shirt and tight-fitting coat called a doublet.

Renaissance
fashion

They also often wore hats. Wealthy women wore long dresses with high waists and puffy sleeves and shoulders. Sometimes their dresses were embellished with embroidery stitched with gold and silver thread. Women had elaborate gold jewelry decorated with expensive jewels like pearls and sapphires. In some areas, laws that had been in effect since the early 1300s prevented the lower classes from wearing nice clothes. In England there were many laws that specified who could wear what types of clothes. Only certain social classes could wear clothes of specific colors and materials. In some areas only nobles were allowed to wear fur.

Marriages to Keep the Peace

During the Renaissance, in upper-class families most marriages were arranged by parents, usually while the children were still young. Therefore, men and women did not usually date each other, fall in love, and then get married.

Fathers preferred that their daughters marry rich and powerful men from other city-states or countries. There was a good reason for this. When the daughter of a prince in one city-state married the son of a ruler in another city-state, the two families would be much less likely to go to war. With a son, daughter, and grandchildren between them, the two rulers would have too much in common to fight each other.

This practice of arranged political marriages became common all across Europe. After a while, many of the ruling families were related to each other.

Chapter 8

The Northern Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

How did the Renaissance movement in Italy impact the artists of northern Europe?

Until now, we have only read about the Renaissance movement in Italy. The Renaissance reached other parts of Europe as well.

Scholars and artists in other countries were also enjoying a rebirth of learning. Sometimes these scholars and artists visited the city-states of Italy, especially Florence, and brought ideas and artwork back to their home countries. These countries included Germany and the region that used to be called Flanders, which is now part of the Netherlands and Belgium.

We are going to read about four painters: two were German, and two were Flemish, which means they were from Flanders. Because they lived in countries north of Italy, people often say that they are part of “The Northern Renaissance.”

The Master of Detail

Jan van Eyck was born in about 1390 CE. He lived in Flanders. Van Eyck’s countrymen called him the “King of the Painters.” He is one of the early figures involved in the Northern Renaissance. Van Eyck painted at about the same time that Brunelleschi was working as an architect in Italy.

Van Eyck developed new kinds of oil paint that gave his pictures a sharp and brilliant look. He discovered new ways to show light and texture in his paintings. He could realistically portray the tiniest details in a painting. In a painting of Giovanni Arnolfini, a portrait that van Eyck painted for an Italian businessman living in Flanders, van Eyck emphasized the texture of the subjects’ clothing, as well as the light pouring through the open window.

Dürer: Self-Portrait of the Artist

Albrecht Dürer was born in 1471 CE to Hungarian parents living in Germany. (He was just a little older than Michelangelo, who was born in 1475 CE.) Dürer was fascinated by the artistic developments happening in Italy at the time. He made two trips to Italy in order to learn as much as he could from the great masters.

Dürer was a proud supporter of the Renaissance movement. The very fact that he painted so many portraits and self-portraits demonstrates his desire to understand the humanity of his subjects. It shows his belief in the importance of the individual, especially one particular individual—himself!

Dürer began sketching himself when he was only 13 and would continue to capture his likeness in self-portraits throughout his career. In the Self-Portrait he painted in 1498 CE, Dürer shows himself as a handsome young man with a taste for fine clothes. It is a painting that reveals how much he has been influenced by his Italian masters. In the famous Self-Portrait painted in 1500 CE, Dürer looks directly at us with bold, confident eyes. Many portraits at the time showed the person from the side, or a three-quarters angle, rather than head on. Dürer perfected the art of portraiture. His keen artist's eye captured not only a range of human expressions and emotions, but also that of skin tone and texture.

Dürer's Self-Portrait, 1498 CE

Dürer was not only a great painter, he was also a master of the art of making prints with woodcuts or engravings. As a young apprentice he learned how to make woodcuts by carving pictures in blocks of wood, as well as engravings by using a sharp tool to cut an image into a metal plate. He would spread ink on the carved wood or the metal plate then print the image on paper. Dürer's woodcuts and engravings made him famous, partly because they could be quickly and easily reproduced, so many people could see them.

Pieter Bruegel the Elder

Pieter Bruegel the Elder was born in the city of Antwerp, which is in the country we now call Belgium. (He is called the Elder because his son, Pieter the Younger, was a painter, too.) Like Venice and Florence in Italy, Antwerp was a busy trading city with many banks and businesses—which meant there were many wealthy people ready to buy works of art. Most of these people wanted paintings in the style of the great Italian masters such as Michelangelo and Raphael. So Bruegel traveled to Italy to see what he could learn.

When it came to painting, however, Bruegel went his own way. You won't find heroic-looking, muscular figures such as the ones Michelangelo painted on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. You won't find many scenes from classical mythology in Bruegel's work. His paintings are very different from anything like Botticelli's Birth of Venus.

One of the few paintings in which Bruegel did choose to use a classical myth as the theme is Landscape with the Fall of Icarus. It's as though Bruegel were saying, "What's all the fuss about these myths? I'll give you a painting about a myth, but in my own way."

Bruegel's Landscape with the Fall of Icarus, 1558 CE

Bruegel's way was to make the myth only a small part of the painting. He chose the Greek myth of Daedalus, the master inventor, and his son Icarus. For King Minos, Daedalus designed a giant maze called the Labyrinth, from which no one could escape. Later, when the king grew angry with Daedalus, he locked him in the Labyrinth along with Icarus. But Daedalus soon came up with a plan to escape. Little by little, he gathered many feathers, then fastened them together with wax to make wings like those of a bird. He and his son used the wings to fly out of the Labyrinth. But in his excitement Icarus ignored his father's warnings not to fly too high. Up and up he flew until the sun began to melt the wax. The feathers fell from his wings, and down plunged Icarus into the sea.

Bruegel's painting shows the fall of Icarus, though at first glance you might not even notice it. Look at the bottom right corner of the painting. Do you see two legs sticking out of the water near the ship? That's Icarus falling into the water—and that's all of the myth Bruegel chose to show. Bruegel draws our attention away from the myth and makes us look at everyday life, at the farmer plowing and the shepherd with his flock.

Bruegel is best known for his pictures of everyday people. For example, he painted Peasant Wedding (also known as The Wedding Feast) in the late 1560s. Bruegel shows the peasants as he saw them. He doesn't try to "prettify" the scene. This is not a fancy feast. The simple food is being carried on rough boards. In the foreground, you can see a child licking her fingers, making sure she gets every last bit out of the bowl. In the middle left, the piper is looking hungrily at the food passing by. He's probably hoping there will be some food left for him after he finishes playing!

Bruegel's Peasant Wedding, 1567 CE

Bruegel's sons, grandsons, and even great-grandsons became artists. But none equaled or surpassed his great works.

Hans Holbein the Younger

German painter, draftsman, and designer Hans Holbein the Younger (1497–1543 CE) came from a family of notable artists. His father, Hans Holbein the Elder, was a renowned artist. His uncle and brother were acclaimed artists, too. Following the tradition of Albrecht Dürer, Hans Holbein the Younger was a master portrait artist. He knew many famous humanist scholars of the time and painted many of their portraits. For example, he created portraits of the great Renaissance scholar Erasmus and the English humanist Sir Thomas More. Hans Holbein the Younger was painting in Europe when religious division created a movement called the Reformation. He worked and painted at the court of King Henry VIII during this time of religious upheaval when the English Church split apart from the Catholic Church and the pope. He painted government ministers, Church leaders, kings, queens and at the time, controversial religious leaders. The leaders of the English Reformation asked

Hans Holbein to create art that promoted the king as the new head of the Church and the new religious movement.

Art in every form was used to denounce the pope and the old Church. Men like Martin Luther and John Calvin challenged the authority of the Catholic Church, as well as its doctrine.

Hans Holbein the Younger created a body of work that allows us to know the faces of the people who helped transform western Europe.

Popular Prose on Page and Stage

THE BIG QUESTION

How did writers, such as Cervantes and Shakespeare, embody the ideals of the Renaissance movement?

Painting and architecture were features of the Renaissance, but so too was literature. Talented and highly original writers appeared and their work transformed the literary landscape. Miguel de Cervantes was one of these writers.

When Miguel de Cervantes published the first part of Don Quixote in 1605 CE, the novel was read widely by literate members of society. It became a popular novel in later centuries. It has been translated from Spanish into more than a hundred languages. Only the Bible has been translated into more languages than Don Quixote.

Bad Luck Trails a Good Man

Miguel de Cervantes was born in Spain in 1547 CE. As a young man, Cervantes published some poems. But he did not set out to be a writer. Instead he became a soldier. He joined a Spanish regiment stationed in Naples.

After six years as a soldier, Cervantes headed back to Spain. With him, he carried letters that gloriously described his military service. He thought these papers might help him find a good job when he got back home. Instead, the letters became quite a problem.

This is what happened: just off the coast of France, Cervantes's ship was attacked by pirates. When the pirates read the letters, they assumed they had captured an important and wealthy gentleman. They took Cervantes to Algeria, where they put him in prison and held him for a high ransom. He tried to escape many times, but never made it. Finally, after five years, Cervantes's family was able to scrape together the money to set him free.

Back in Jail

When a soldier with a distinguished war record returned from battle, he could usually get a good job with a nobleman. But Cervantes received no such reward. So there he was, thirty-three years old and out of work. What to do? Why not try writing again?

And boy, did he write! Cervantes churned out dozens and dozens of poems and plays. Although people liked his work, he still didn't make much money. To put bread on the table, he took a job with the government.

In one of his government jobs, Cervantes got into trouble again. He was working as a tax collector—a job that's not likely to help anyone win a popularity contest. Once, when he had collected a lot of tax money, Cervantes felt anxious about carrying it as he traveled along the roads. He left the money with an innkeeper he thought he could trust. When he returned to get the money, the innkeeper had run off with it! The government held Cervantes responsible for the stolen money. Since he couldn't repay it all, he was thrown in jail.

Some people believe that while Cervantes was in jail, he came up with the idea for Don Quixote, and perhaps even wrote some of the book behind bars. When Cervantes published The History of Don Quixote de la Mancha in 1605 CE, it was well received. It made Cervantes famous, but not rich.

Near the end of his life, Cervantes did find a patron whose support allowed him to concentrate on his writing. He wrote a second part to Don Quixote and more short stories. He completed a novel just four days before he died in Madrid in 1616 CE.

What's So Great About Don Quixote?

Don Quixote was written about 400 years ago. Why has it remained so popular?

For one thing, much of the book is very funny. There's a story that once the king of Spain was looking out a window when he saw a man who, while reading a book, kept slapping his leg and roaring with laughter. "I'll bet," said the king, "that he's reading Don Quixote."

Cervantes wrote Don Quixote to make fun of books about romance and chivalry. These books, which were very popular in Cervantes's time, told stories of brave knights in shining armor who set out to rescue damsels in distress. They were full of fantastic adventures, powerful magicians, fierce dragons, and brave deeds.

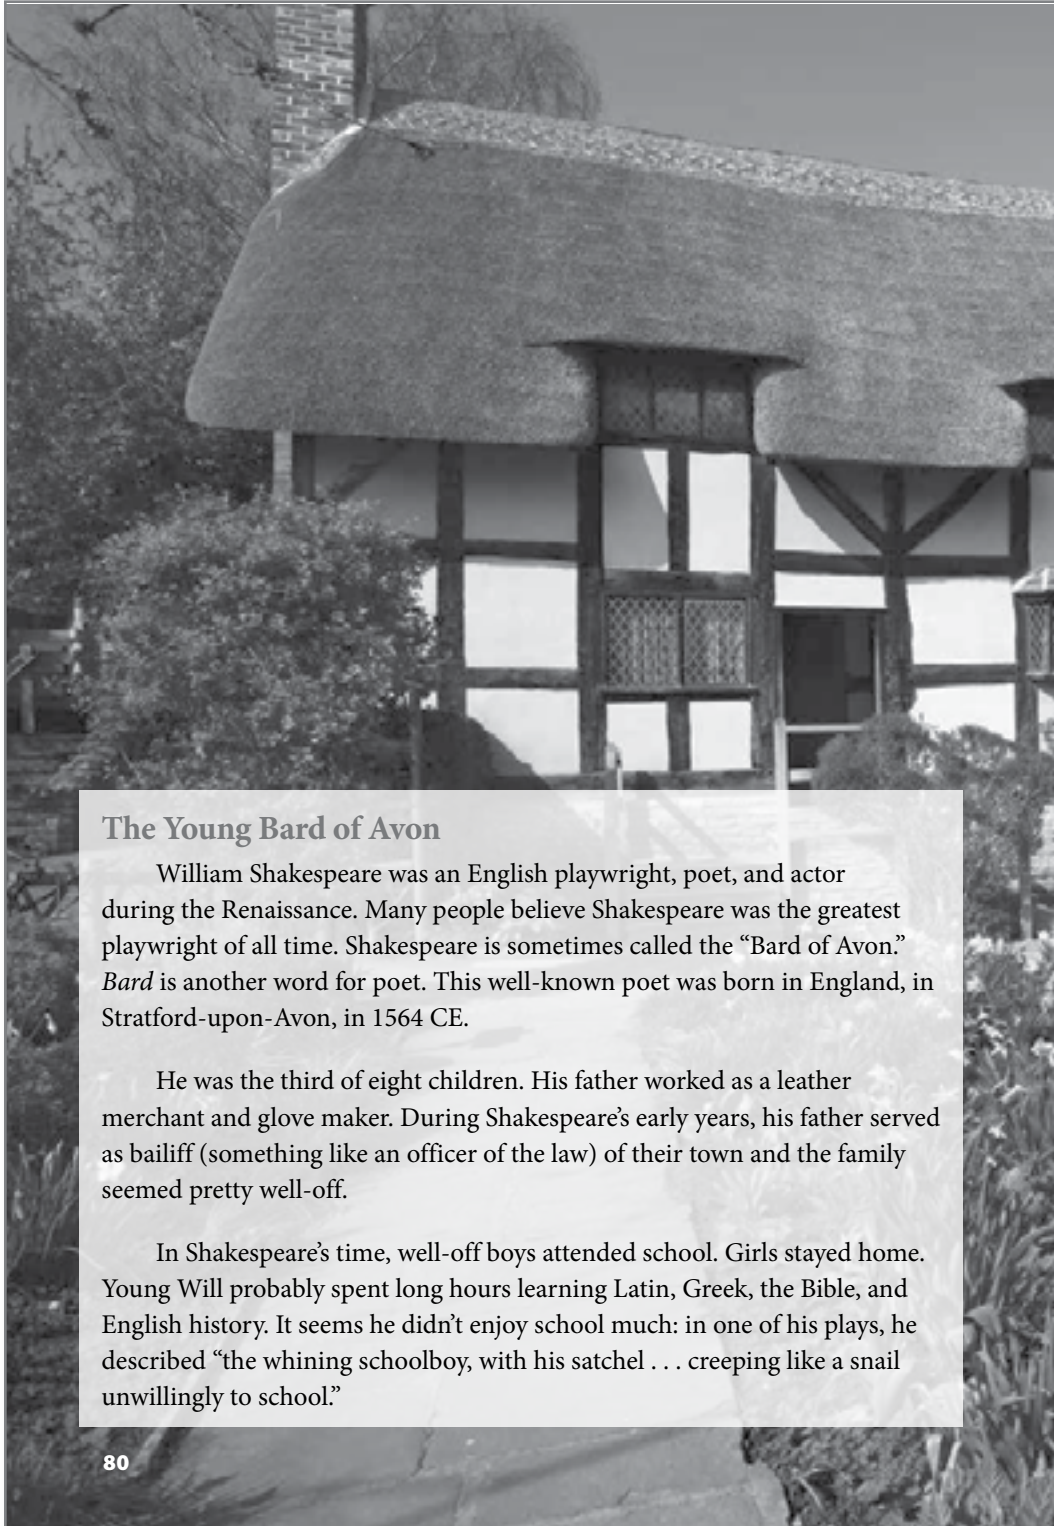

And so Cervantes created Don Quixote. (Don is a title of respect, like Sir in English.) The Don is an elderly gentleman who loves to read romances about the knights of the Middle Ages. In fact, he reads so many romances that he loses touch with reality. He begins to believe the romances are true—that all the enchantments and battles and rescues really happened. Soon, he doesn't just want to read about knights anymore—instead, he decides to become one. His goal is to wander the world in search of adventures and to gain fame and honor by his daring deeds.

A man who attacks windmills may seem foolish, and Don Quixote does many foolish things. But the more you get to know Don Quixote, the more you begin to see that he is, at heart, noble and generous—sometimes a lot more noble and generous than the world around him.

In Cervantes's novel, Don Quixote mistakes windmills for giants.

The Young Bard of Avon

William Shakespeare was an English playwright, poet, and actor during the Renaissance. Many people believe Shakespeare was the greatest playwright of all time. Shakespeare is sometimes called the “Bard of Avon.” Bard is another word for poet. This well-known poet was born in England, in Stratford-upon-Avon, in 1564 CE.

He was the third of eight children. His father worked as a leather merchant and glove maker. During Shakespeare’s early years, his father served as bailiff (something like an officer of the law) of their town and the family seemed pretty well-off.

In Shakespeare’s time, well-off boys attended school. Girls stayed home. Young Will probably spent long hours learning Latin, Greek, the Bible, and English history. It seems he didn’t enjoy school much: in one of his plays, he described “the whining schoolboy, with his satchel . . . creeping like a snail unwillingly to school.”

By the time Shakespeare reached college age, his father had become so poor that he owed money, couldn't pay taxes, and didn't show his face in public for fear of being thrown in jail. It's likely that the Shakespeare family didn't have enough money to pay for a college education for William.

What did William do when he finished his schooling? No one knows for sure.

The Lost Years

There's a lot about Shakespeare's life we don't know. No one even knows for sure the exact date of Shakespeare's birthday.

Most of the information we have about Shakespeare comes from the town's official records of baptisms, marriages, and deaths. We also know a little from what his friends wrote about him. Over the years, scholars have closely examined the available documents, as well as Shakespeare's own writings, to put together a picture of the playwright's life. Sometimes parts of the picture are missing, and then scholars have to use whatever evidence they have to make an informed guess.

We do know that eighteen-year-old William married twenty-six-year-old Anne Hathaway in 1582 CE. Over the next few years, Anne gave birth to their daughter Susanna, followed by twins, a daughter named Judith and a son named Hamnet.

After the twins were born, Shakespeare did not linger very long in Stratford-upon-Avon. We're not certain why he left. Nor does anyone know what Shakespeare did during what are called "The Lost Years" from 1582 to 1592 CE.

We do know that by 1592 CE, Shakespeare had arrived in London and was establishing a reputation as a playwright, actor, and poet. Some of his more highly educated competitors said his plays were "vulgar." But the people loved his work, and the royalty also enjoyed them. His acting company frequently performed in the court of Queen Elizabeth and later for King James.

The Globe Theater

Many of Shakespeare's plays were performed in the Globe Theater, which was built in 1599 CE on the south bank of the Thames River in London. The Globe was a wooden, circular building with an open courtyard in the middle. The theater could hold up to 2,500 people. People who didn't have a lot of money could pay a penny to stand in the yard and watch the play; they were called the groundlings. Richer people could buy seats in the galleries, which were along three sides of the theater and were covered by a roof to protect the audience from the sun or a sudden rain. Performances were given only in daylight and only in good weather.

A performance at the Globe was different from most theaters today. Audiences could be rude and noisy. It was common for viewers to shout comments and throw objects on stage. There were no curtains on stage and hardly any scenery. Although the scenery was simple, costumes were often quite fancy.

In 1613 CE, a cannon fired as part of a performance of Henry VIII set fire to a thatched roof, and the theater burned to the ground. But if you visit London today, you can still see a Shakespeare play at the Globe—that is, at the new Globe Theater.

In the 1990s the theater was rebuilt very near its original location. Scholars and architects worked together closely to make the new Globe as much like the original as possible.

And so, as the Bard himself said, "All's well that ends well."

Unit Assessment—Patrons, Artists, and Scholars

Reading Comprehension

Read the two selections about the city of Venice during the Renaissance movement. After reading the first selection, “Venice: Jewel of the Adriatic,” answer the questions based on the text before reading the second selection.

Venice: Jewel of the Adriatic

A Glittering City

- 1 Built on 117 small islands, Venice, in northern Italy, was the western world’s most important commercial city in 1500.
- 2 Venice’s islands are located in the middle of a lagoon. The islands are divided by more than 150 canals and connected by more than 400 bridges. Many of its buildings rest on pillars driven into the mud. Long ago, Venice was safe from attack. Enemy ships found it impossible to move in the shallow waters. Venice also had a strong navy.
- 3 The people of Venice, called Venetians, were proud of their splendid city. Visitors admired the city, too. A French diplomat visiting Venice was very impressed with this unusual city. “The houses are very large and lofty and built of stone,” he reported. “Most of them have rich marble chimney pieces, gold-colored bedframes and doors, and beautiful furnishings. It is the most triumphant city I have ever seen.”
- 4 How did Venice gain its prosperity? Venice built its wealth mostly on trade. Over two centuries, the Venetians created an extensive trading empire. Venetians wanted to gain more and more territory so they could carry on their trading activities without interference.
- 5 Its efficient navy gave Venice the military force it needed to defend a large trading empire. Its unique form of government gave it the stability it needed to establish and maintain this empire.

Republican Government

- 6 Venice was not a monarchy. It was a republic whose government was controlled by the city-state's leading families. The head of the government was called the doge, which comes from the Latin word dux meaning "leader." Members of the Greater Council chose a doge to serve for the duration of his life. This council also selected some of its members to serve in other governmental bodies. The governmental bodies included a senate and a committee for public safety. The doge was Venice's chief of state. However, the council and other governmental bodies held the real power.
- 7 As in most other republics up to that time, not all Venetians could participate in government. At the end of the 1200s, the Greater Council passed a law. The law said only adult male descendants of men who had sat in the council before 1297 CE could be members. The name of everyone eligible was written down in what became known as the Golden Book. Only about 200 families were named in the book (but some newcomers were admitted). They became hereditary rulers of Venice.

Printing Advances

- 8 Venice made a notable contribution to classical learning by encouraging the development of the new craft of printing. By 1500 CE, this city-state alone had more than 200 printing presses. Because many printers were scholars, they devoted themselves to publishing classical manuscripts, particularly those of ancient Greece.

Venice's Greatest Artist

- 9 Of all the arts for which Renaissance Venice became known, painting was the foremost. Venetian painter Tiziano Vecelli was a highly respected artist. People now refer to him as Titian. Born about 1488 CE, he studied with Venice's most important painters beginning at age nine or ten. When his long career came to an end in 1576 CE, he was a great master.

ASSESSMENT

- 10 Titian's paintings conveyed emotions and feelings. His use of color and his new use of oil paints gave his works a rich and luxurious feel. Among Titian's most famous paintings is The Assumption of the Virgin. This powerful work illustrated the Virgin Mary being taken to heaven.

Decline of Venice

- 11 Venice eventually lost its place as the world's most important trading power. One reason for this decline was the Muslim Turks' successful challenge of Venetian dominance in the Mediterranean. In addition, Portuguese explorers discovered new sea routes to the Far East. These new trade routes turned trade away from the Mediterranean and the Middle East to the Atlantic Ocean. However, Venice remained an independent state until it became part of the new nation of Italy in 1866.

Venice, 6th January, 1506 CE

- 1 To the Honourable and Wise Willibald Pirckheimer, in Nuremberg.
- 2 My dear Master, I wish you and your family a happy New Year. I am in good health and I hope you are even better. Now I'd like to tell you about the job you asked me to do—to buy a few pearls and precious stones. I want you to know that I can find nothing good enough or worth the money. Everything is snapped up by the Germans.
- 3 Traders expect four times the value for anything. They are the biggest villains that live there. No one expects to get an honest service of them. For that reason some good people warned me to be on my guard against them. They told me that they cheat both good men and bad men. They also told me you could buy better things for less money at Frankfurt than at Venice.
- 4 As for the books which I was to order for you, our friend has already taken care of it. If you are in need of anything else, let me know. I will do it for you with great enthusiasm. If there is any way I can help you, I will gladly do it. I know how much you do for me.
- 5 And I beg of you be patient with my debt, for I think oftener of it than you do. As soon as God helps me to get home I will pay you honorably, with many thanks. I can repay you with money I earn from painting a picture for the Germans. They are giving me much more money for the painting than it will cost me to make it. I will have finished laying and scraping the ground-work in eight days, then I will begin to paint. If all goes well, it will be complete and ready for the church a month after Easter.

7th February, 1506 CE

- 6 Dear Master, I wrote to you recently. I hope the letter reached you. In the meantime my mother has written to me, scolding me for not writing to you. She also said you are unhappy with me because I do not write to you. She said I must apologize to you. I do not have a good excuse, except that I am lazy about writing and you have not been at home. As soon as I knew you were at home or were coming home, I wrote to you at once. Therefore I most humbly beg you to forgive me, for I have no other friend on earth but you. I hope you are not angry with me, because you are like a father to me.
- 7 How I wish you were here at Venice. There are so many good fellows among the Italians who seek my company more and more every day. This makes me very happy. Some of the men who show me friendship are scholars, good lute-players, and pipers, painters, and honest and noble men. On the other hand, there are also faithless, lying, thievish rascals. I did not believe such evil people could exist on earth. They are so deceptive that if you do know them, you would think they were the nicest men on earth. I cannot help laughing to myself when they talk to me. They know people are aware of their evil acts, but that does not bother them.
- 8 I have many good friends among the Italians who warn me not to eat and drink with their painters. They say many painters are my enemies and copy my work in the churches and wherever they can find it. Even though they copy my work, they criticize it and claim it is not done in the antique style. They also say it is no good, but the famous painter, Bellini, has praised me highly to many gentlemen. He would like to have something of mine. He even came to me himself and asked me to create something for him. He said that he would pay well for it too. Everyone tells me what an honest man he is, so that I am really friendly with him. He is very old and yet he is the best painter of all.

—Albrecht Dürer

Growing Up Fast

Most 11-year-olds today are busy playing with friends and going to school. Not Raphael; he had to grow up fast. Raphael was born in 1483 and named Raffaello Sanzio. He lost his parents as a child and was working by the time he was eleven years old. Raphael worked in an art studio as an apprentice. About ten years later, in 1504, Raphael moved to Florence. There he studied techniques of two great master artists: Michelangelo and Leonardo.

Paragraph about a Paragraph

Writers often organize good paragraphs using a common set of guidelines. First, writers include a topic sentence to introduce the topic or central idea of the paragraph. The topic sentence tells what the paragraph will be about. Next, writers include supporting sentences to explain the topic or central idea. Writers usually include at least three to five sentences to give the reader supporting details and facts about the topic or central idea. Including interesting facts and details helps make the paragraph informative and interesting to read. It is important that the sentences stick to the topic. Finally, writers end the paragraph with a concluding sentence, or their final thought about the topic or central idea. Using these guidelines can be helpful to writing a clear and informative paragraph.

Chapter 1

An Italian Rebirth

THE BIG QUESTION

What factors inspired the Renaissance movement?

Art, literature, and architecture are forms of expression. These forms of expression often communicate what is happening during certain periods in time. Have you ever heard the word Renaissance? The word Renaissance means “rebirth” and comes from both the French and Latin languages. This word Renaissance describes a cultural movement that began in what is now Italy and then spread throughout most of Europe. This was no ordinary change, but rather a revolutionary movement that led to the creation of art, the likes of which the world had never seen before.

The Renaissance movement was inspired by a renewed interest in ancient Greek and Roman culture and learning. New ideas were born and old ideas were reborn. The Renaissance was a particular period of change, in literature, art, philosophy, science, education, and architecture. To understand why the Renaissance was such an extraordinary movement, it helps to recall what was happening in Europe before the Renaissance.

What Came Before the Renaissance?

More than 2,000 years ago, ancient Greece gave us tremendous works of art and architecture. Ancient Greek sculptures emphasized balance, proportion, and the “perfect” human form. Ancient Greeks built strong buildings supported by mighty pillars and columns. They gave us the ideas of great philosophers, such as Plato and Aristotle. They gave us lasting works of literature, including Homer’s Iliad and Odyssey. From ancient Greece we have inherited important ideas about government, including the idea of democracy—rule by the people. Even the word democracy comes from the Greeks. The Greek word demos means “people.”

The Colosseum in Rome

Later, the ancient Romans built upon the ideas and achievements of the Greeks. Like the Greeks, Romans prized sculpture with mythological themes. The Romans also built great structures, such as the Colosseum, and perfected the use of the arch and dome. They left us powerful literature such as the Aeneid by Virgil. The mighty Roman armies conquered lands and established a vast empire.

Eventually, different warring tribes invaded the Roman Empire, weakening Rome's power. These warring tribes sought land. The resulting instability greatly diminished the influence of ancient Rome. Slowly but surely new cultural groups, no longer bound by ties to Rome, began to define themselves. The great Roman Empire declined and was eventually divided in half.

Moving On

Across western Europe, during the time that is considered to be the start of the Middle Ages, kingdoms and nations began to take shape. Trade, economy, laws, and systems of government were established. Cities and towns grew. Architectural styles and designs, among other forms of expression, became unique to the people of a particular land.

While the cultural achievements of the Greeks and Romans were admired, new, home-grown ideas began to thrive. Knowledge of the writings of the ancient Greeks and Romans was left in the hands of the few educated elite and in religious houses called monasteries. Some men and women devoted their lives to the Church. Men called monks lived in monasteries. Women called nuns lived in convents. The monks made beautiful copies of writings from ancient Greece and Rome. If you wanted to make another copy of a book, you had to do it by hand. There were no printing presses and, of course, no copy machines or scanners. And so, quietly, and in some ways secretly, the monks helped keep classical learning alive.

Passing the Torch

Monarchs and the Christian Church established laws and a sense of order. The Church was a powerful influence throughout western Europe during the Middle Ages. With its rituals and teachings, the Church was a very important part of the daily lives of medieval people. Everyone from rich

Chartres Cathedral, France

noblemen to poor peasants gave money, materials, and sometimes their labor to help build the magnificent churches of the Middle Ages.

During the Middle Ages, impressive castles were constructed across the European landscape. Kings battled each other for land, and nations were born. People thought a lot about the path to heaven. Art was created to honor God, or to communicate stories from the Bible, which was important because few people were able to read during this time. To express religious devotion, medieval artists created stylized religious figures and moved away from the natural human form common in ancient Greek and Roman art.

But, as you know, history does not stand still. Things change and new ideas emerge. So along came the Renaissance movement. Yet how, and why, the Renaissance movement emerged is the question.

Petrarch and Humanism

During the 1300s, there was a great Italian poet named Petrarch. He admired the classical values and teachings of ancient Greece and Rome. He filled his library with as many ancient books as he could find and invited others to read and study these books, as well.

Over the years, more and more people had the opportunity to learn about the literature, art, and government of ancient Greece and Rome. These people who admired ancient Greece and Rome were called humanists. Their intellectual and cultural interest in the art, literature, and government of ancient Greece and Rome was known as humanism.

Under the influence of the humanists, many artists, philosophers, and scientists studied the works produced by the ancient Romans and Greeks. A study of the past prompted many to examine the present, and an increased interest in certain subjects led to a greater understanding of the world at large. For example, some scientists—such as Copernicus and Galileo—looked to the heavens and the stars and made astonishing discoveries. Others looked to nature and the physical earth. The Renaissance movement was born.

Petrarch

A drawing of the heliocentric system that was proposed by Copernicus in which the sun, not Earth, is at the center of the solar system

In particular, breathtakingly beautiful art was produced. Renaissance artists developed techniques that allowed them to paint the human form in a much more realistic way. Humanists promoted the power and unique talents of the individual, both in terms of intellect and ability, but also in terms of the human form itself. An Italian architect, Leon Battista Alberti, summed up what you might call a Renaissance motto: “Men can do anything with themselves, if they will.” William Shakespeare, the English playwright wrote, “What a piece of work is a man!” The great minds of the Renaissance expanded the themes of their work beyond the Biblical to include those of history, science, and literature. As a result, the people of the Renaissance made their mark upon the earth.

The Middle Class

Typically, most people lived and died in the towns and rural areas where they were born. As had been the case for centuries, people belonged to groups, or classes, and social mobility was limited.

However, during the late Middle Ages into the Renaissance period, as the Italians became wealthier and cities grew, there were more and more merchants and craftsmen. There were so many, in fact, that there was an expansion of the middle class, the class between those who worked the land and the nobility. As a result, the wealthy middle class grew in power and status. Bankers and merchants proved you didn't have to be born a nobleman to be rich and powerful: You could work hard and make money and rise in society. With money came political influence.

The rise of the middle class was not restricted to Italy. The financial and political rise of this social group was evident throughout Europe. Without a doubt, the middle class assumed even greater influence during the Renaissance.

Patrons: Dollars for Scholars

So what do merchants and money have to do with the Renaissance? These wealthy merchants could read and write, although most people could not. As a result, some merchants and businessmen became interested in literature and art. Of course, most of them were so busy running their businesses that they didn't have time to write books or paint, but they had enough money to help others write, study, and create works of art.

Some of the merchants became patrons of the writers and artists. For example, a rich banker might ask an artist to paint portraits of his wife and children. The banker would pay for the portraits, and, in addition, he might provide the artist with food, clothing, and a house while he worked. With the support of such rich patrons, many artists were able to explore their ideas and develop their skills. Artists with patrons no longer had to worry about how they were going to eat or where they were going to sleep. Later, you will read more about the Medici family, one of the most influential banking families and art patrons of all time.

What did the patrons get out of all this? What was their reward for paying artists to create paintings, statues, books, and buildings? The patrons became famous. The works of art they commissioned signaled their power, prestige, and importance. They were admired and celebrated for the works they paid to have created.

The artists and writers also made their mark in history. Shakespeare, perhaps the greatest writer of all, had royal and noble patrons. Yet it is his name that we remember today.

Giorgio Vasari's Portrait of Lorenzo de' Medici, 1533–1544 CE

The world was indeed changing. Exquisite works of art were created by people so extraordinary that it would be wonderful to have a time machine to take us back in history to meet them. But, as we do not, we will just have to turn the pages of this book to learn about them instead!

The Middle Ages

The Middle Ages had its fair share of troubling times, but it was also a time of great achievement in art and learning. Let's examine some key achievements.

Western Europe

Universities were founded in cities such as Bologna, Oxford, Paris, and Cambridge. Hundreds of castles, such as Alcázar de Segovia in Spain and Dover Castle in England, were constructed in Western Europe. The building of great cathedrals, which took hundreds of years to complete, was also undertaken during this age.

Alcázar de Segovia, Spain

Byzantine Civilization

When invading tribes destroyed and took over much of the Western Roman Empire, the Eastern Roman Empire, or Byzantine civilization, remained strong. The great city of Constantinople was the center of Byzantine civilization. Constantinople's central location made the city an important link between Europe and Asia. From about 300 to 1453 CE, Byzantine civilization was one of the most advanced in the world.

Hagia Sophia in Turkey was once a cathedral. It became a mosque when Constantinople, now Istanbul, was conquered by the Ottómen Turks.

Islamic Civilization

During the Middle Ages, many Muslim scholars made significant progress in math, science, and astronomy. Some scholars translated works by ancient Greek philosophers and scientists into Arabic, which helped preserve classical writings. A great thinker and writer named Ibn Sina wrote influential works of philosophy, poetry, and astronomy. He also made important medical discoveries about how to treat diseases.

A large part of Spain was conquered and settled by Muslims. Learning thrived in many Islamic cities, with cities such as Palencia, Valladolid, Salamanca, and Alcalá having libraries, schools, and universities. In the 900s, scholars from Africa, Asia, and Europe traveled to Córdoba to be part of a city rich in learning and the arts.

Beginning in the late 1000s, Christian forces started to drive the Muslims out of Spain. By the time of the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella—the king and queen who helped finance Columbus’s voyage in 1492 CE—the Muslims had been driven out. They left behind writings about science and philosophy that would contribute to the reawakening of learning in Italy during the Renaissance.

The Alhambra in Spain is a magnificent castle and fortress built by the Muslims.

Chapter 2

The Early Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

What are techniques and features of Renaissance art and architecture?

What an exciting time to be alive! Painters, sculptors, architects, and philosophers were buzzing with ideas. With help from wealthy families and the Church, they created splendid projects. Let's meet three important artists from the Early Renaissance.

Brunelleschi Loses

Before Filippo Brunelleschi devoted himself to architecture, he worked as a goldsmith. In 1401 CE, when the city council of Florence invited artists to submit ideas for decorating the huge doors of a religious building called the Baptistery, Brunelleschi created a beautiful design.

His design didn't win. The winning design was submitted by Lorenzo Ghiberti. When Ghiberti found out that he'd won, he bragged, "I have surpassed everyone." The Florence city council offered to allow Brunelleschi to work as Ghiberti's assistant, but Ghiberti flatly refused his help. This started a lifelong rivalry between the men.

After losing the contest, Brunelleschi decided to explore his interests in architecture. In the spirit of the Renaissance, he looked back to classical times.

Brunelleschi Wins

As the years passed, Brunelleschi took what he learned from the ancient Romans and began to develop his own ideas about architecture. Brunelleschi, like other Renaissance artists, began to move away from the complex medieval style of architecture in favor of the balance and symmetry of ancient Greek and Roman architecture. He had previously traveled to Rome to study

Cathedral of Florence

Roman ruins and had been inspired by the dome of the Pantheon. This inspiration came in handy when, in 1418 CE, the Guild of Wool Merchants in Florence announced another competition. They wanted to find someone who could solve a difficult architectural problem: how to put a roof over a huge space.

The space was over the middle of the cathedral of Florence. Work had begun on the cathedral eighty years before Brunelleschi was born, but it still wasn't finished. The plans called for a roof to be placed over the middle of the church, an area 136 feet wide.

For years, the architects of Florence had been arguing about how to build this roof. Some people said it was impossible, but Brunelleschi approached the Wool Merchants and announced that he could do it. How? He had an idea to cover the space with a dome.

When the guild members demanded to see his plans, Brunelleschi refused. He claimed they would steal his ideas. To illustrate his point, Brunelleschi brought an egg to a guild meeting. Imagine you are a guild member at this meeting. You hear Brunelleschi ask, "Can any one of you make this egg stand on its head without toppling?"

No one replies. So, Brunelleschi cracks the egg on the table and balances it on its jagged top. One of your fellow guild members sneers, "We could have done that!"

Brunelleschi responds, "That's precisely my point. If I tell you my plans to build the dome, you'll say you knew how to do it all along."

In the end, the guild members chose Brunelleschi to undertake the project. Then they got cold feet and thought he needed someone to help him, so they picked Brunelleschi's old rival, Ghiberti.

Brunelleschi was angry. He knew Ghiberti had no idea how to build the dome. So Brunelleschi pretended to be sick. While he lay in bed, all work stopped. Finally, the guild members told him that Ghiberti could do nothing without him. From then on, Brunelleschi alone was in charge.

Donatello the Sculptor

The greatest sculptor of the Early Renaissance was known as Donatello. As a young man, Donatello helped Lorenzo Ghiberti decorate the doors of the Baptistery in Florence. Later, he worked with Ghiberti's rival, Brunelleschi. It seems that Donatello and Brunelleschi visited Rome together to study the ancient ruins.

Donatello drew from these experiences when he created his well-known sculpture, St. George. On the rectangular base of the statue, Donatello carved a scene from the popular legend in which St. George battles a dragon. According to the legend, there was once a fierce dragon terrorizing a town. The people fed the dragon sheep, but the dragon demanded humans. The unlucky victims were chosen by lottery. When the daughter of the king was chosen, she went to meet her fate. But St. George arrived just in time to save the princess and slay the dragon. Before leaving the scene, St. George converted all the townspeople to Christianity.

The standing figure of St. George that Donatello carved is a proud and confident warrior. His strong, muscular form shows through his armor. His watchful eyes and his slightly turned stance make him seem ready for whatever challenges may come his way. In this strong, watchful warrior, the people of Florence must have seen the embodiment of their own spirit.

Renaissance sculptors such as Donatello captured human emotion in facial expressions and body positions that make their pieces highly realistic.

A Little Barrel

Alessandro di Mariano Filipepi was his real name, but he was called Sandro Botticelli. Botticelli means “little barrel” in Italian. It is believed that the nickname was first applied to Botticelli’s older brother, and, when young Sandro went to live with him, people started calling him Botticelli, too. While the nickname may not bring graceful images to mind, Botticelli’s paintings are known for their grace, elegance, and beauty.

Botticelli was born in Florence in 1455 CE. He was first apprenticed to a goldsmith and then later to a famous painter. In 1481 CE he traveled to Rome, where he spent a year painting the walls of the Sistine Chapel. The Sistine Chapel is located in the Vatican, where the pope, the head of the Catholic Church, lives.

Botticelli’s most famous painting, The Birth of Venus, shows a scene from classical mythology. Botticelli painted Venus in a pose from an ancient Roman statue, then added his own touches, such as the flowing hair and the almost-sad expression. The wind gods blow gentle breezes to move the goddess ashore.

Botticelli was a favorite painter of wealthy patron Lorenzo de' Medici. Lorenzo and his family were one of the most influential banking families and patrons of the arts. They supported artists like Botticelli financially so that they had time to create art. In return, the Medici family was admired for their contributions to the art world. However, Botticelli's association with the Medici family ended when the family left Florence after Lorenzo's death. Botticelli lost much of his financial support, too. The monk Savonarola took charge of the city of Florence and became the most powerful person in the city. Savonarola did not approve of paintings like The Birth of Venus.

Savonarola's sermons must have affected Botticelli deeply. He stopped painting scenes from classical mythology and turned his attention to religious themes. For example, instead of painting Venus, he painted Mary, the mother of Jesus. But he still painted her with grace and elegance.

The Power of Perspective

The architect Brunelleschi inspired Renaissance artists when he developed the mathematical rules for perspective, a way of showing depth on a flat surface. Brunelleschi observed that when we look at things, objects that are close look bigger, while those that are far away look smaller. He also observed that if you stand between two parallel lines that stretch into the distance, the lines appear to come closer together until they meet at a point on the horizon. When the lines come together, they seem to vanish, so this point is called the vanishing point.

These mathematical rules, or instructions on how to achieve a sense of perspective, were published. Even today, artists used these rules to create a sense of depth and space in their work. When applied, these rules are a tool for directing the viewer's eye to the most important subjects of a painting. This is in direct contrast to art from earlier times such as the Middle Ages, when depth and space were not highlighted. The Renaissance painter Raphael, in his painting The School of Athens, used the structure of the building and the pattern of the floor to create a sense of perspective.

Chapter 3

The Spirit of the Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in Leonardo da Vinci's ideas and accomplishments?

“I don’t know why I let you talk me into this, Master Leonardo!” Carlo grumbled as he dragged an enormous contraption up the steep, rocky hill.

Leonardo da Vinci laughed quietly and said, “Here, let me help.” He steadied one huge wing of the flying machine as he walked alongside his servant.

When they reached the summit, Leonardo gazed down at the streets and buildings of Florence. “Ah, Carlo, in a few moments, you will be sailing over our fair city,” he said.

“Master,” Carlo sighed, “I wish it were you who could experience that pleasure.”

Leonardo fastened the straps around his servant’s thin shoulders and waist. “Done!” he cried as he tightened the last leather tie.

“Master,” Carlo protested, “I look like a giant dragonfly!”

“Hush. If this works, your name will be known throughout history,” replied Leonardo.

“If it doesn’t work, I’ll be history!” exclaimed Carlo.

Leonardo led Carlo to the edge of a high cliff. Carlo peered over, then made the sign of the cross.

“If you please, Master,” said Carlo, “has it occurred to you that if God had intended man to fly, He would have given us wings?”

But Leonardo just smiled and gave Carlo a hearty push off the cliff. As Carlo plummeted downward, Leonardo shouted, “Man can do anything he sets his mind to do, my faithless friend!”

It would be a nice ending to the story if Carlo suddenly swooped upward and soared like a bird over the rooftops of the city. But, alas, the poor servant fell and broke his leg—or so goes the story that has been handed down to us over the years.

The story, whether true or legendary, tells a lot about Leonardo’s attitude toward life: Man is capable of doing anything he sets his mind to, he said. Anything.

That belief drove Leonardo da Vinci to explore uncharted territory in many fields. He was passionately interested in a number of subjects, and highly skilled at most anything he tried.

An Amazing Apprentice

If we had to pick just one person to represent the spirit of the Renaissance, it might be Leonardo da Vinci. Painter, inventor, scientist, musician, and more, Leonardo embodies the belief that anything is possible.

Leonardo was born in 1452 CE in Vinci, a town near Florence. As a young boy, he worked as an apprentice to Andrea del Verrocchio, a leading painter and sculptor of Florence. Leonardo's work as an apprentice kept him busy from dawn to dusk. He swept floors, fetched supplies, and made brushes. He also practiced drawing and painting each day. It didn't take long for people to notice Leonardo's artistic genius.

Andrea del Verrocchio, The Baptism of Christ, 1476 CE

Often, a master artist would paint the main features of a picture but leave it for an apprentice to finish the landscape or other smaller figures in the background. In 1476 CE, Verrocchio was working on a painting called The Baptism of Christ. Verrocchio painted one angel, and then asked Leonardo to paint another. Legend has it that Leonardo's angel looked so much better than Verrocchio's that the old master never picked up a brush again.

Leonardo in Milan

When Leonardo was about thirty years old, he was invited to work for the Duke of Milan. While he lived in Milan, Leonardo continued to make works of art, but the Duke also employed him as a military engineer. Although Leonardo called war “bestly madness,” he designed some very dangerous weapons, including an armored cart that resembled a tank.

Leonardo's sketch of armored cart

When the Duke wanted to impress his fellow noblemen, he asked Leonardo to organize spectacular festivals. Leonardo created fancy stage sets and selected the music. He even designed costumes.

While employed by the Duke of Milan, Leonardo constructed a huge monument made of terra cotta, a clay-like material. The monument was in the shape of a horse and was to feature the Duke of Milan's father as the rider. The gigantic clay model was supposed to be cast in bronze, but the Duke wound up using the bronze to make weapons for war. Worse yet, French soldiers invading Milan used the clay horse for target practice and completely destroyed it.

The Painter at Work

In Milan, Leonardo was kept busy working on all kinds of projects, including designing a whole new plan for the city. Did he ever find time to paint?

Yes, indeed he did.

While he lived in Milan, Leonardo created one of his greatest paintings, The Last Supper. The painting was commissioned by the Duke of Milan. It shows Jesus having supper with his closest friends. Some scholars believe that, in particular, Leonardo focused on the betrayal of Jesus Christ and the part of the story when Jesus made the shocking announcement, “One of you will betray me.” Leonardo attempted to capture the very moment when the twelve apostles, Jesus’s closest and most trusted followers, heard those words.

How do you paint thirteen men at a table and still show all their facial expressions? Leonardo decided to place the apostles in groups of three, with Jesus seated alone in the middle. Notice how the artist isolates the figure of Judas, the betrayer of Jesus. Judas leans back, away from Jesus.

Leonardo paid careful attention to the men’s faces and their gestures, especially their expressive hands. He wandered the streets of Milan searching for exactly the right faces and right poses to use as models for the people in this painting.

The Last Supper is painted on the wall of a dining hall in a monastery. While Leonardo worked on the painting, the head of the monastery, called the prior, became impatient for him to finish. He complained that Leonardo was lazy, and that the artist was spending too much time wandering the streets looking for the right face for Judas. Leonardo admitted that it was taking him a long time to find the right face for Judas. But he said to the prior, “If you’re in a great hurry, then I could always use your face.”

It took two years (from 1495-1497 CE) to finish The Last Supper. The painting made Leonardo famous throughout Europe. Other artists and engravers made copies of it for hundreds of years.

Leonardo da Vinci, The Last Supper, 1495 to 1497 CE

The Bible tells us the story that in the hours before his capture, arrest, and crucifixion, Jesus had supper with his closest friends—his apostles. One of his friends, Judas, betrayed Jesus. This led to the arrest of Jesus. Jesus knew he would be betrayed.

The painting itself did not last very long. Leonardo experimented with a new fresco technique, using oil and varnish mixed in with his colors. The paint absorbed the moisture from the wall and crumbled over time. Recently, artists and scientists who specialize in restoring old paintings have used advanced techniques to try to make The Last Supper look more like Leonardo's original creation.

Putting Things in Perspective

The Last Supper is painted on a 14-by-30-foot wall. The wall, of course, is flat, but the painting seems to have depth. It almost seems as if you could walk through the open windows into the landscape in the background. To create a sense of depth in a painting, Leonardo used perspective. You can see how Leonardo directs the viewer's eye toward Jesus.

In The Last Supper, Leonardo followed the rules of perspective developed by Italian artist and architect Brunelleschi. If you were to extend the lines of the ceiling to the horizon, they would meet at a vanishing point in the center of the painting, somewhere behind the head of Jesus. This draws your attention to Jesus as the most important figure in the painting.

Leonardo also put an open door and windows behind Jesus. Through them you can see the landscape in the distance. In a book he wrote on painting techniques, Leonardo added some refinements to the rules of perspective. He said that when you paint objects at a distance, you should not make them too detailed, and you should make the colors a little weaker.

Lines meet at the vanishing point in Leonardo's painting, The Last Supper, 1495 to 1497 CE

Leonardo the Scientist

After he left Milan, Leonardo lived in several places, including his beloved city of Florence. For a while he worked as a map maker and military engineer, and he became friends with Niccolò Machiavelli, who worked in the government of Florence for many years.

In 1506 CE, Leonardo returned to Milan. As time went on, he became more interested in science than in art. In fact, at one point he wrote that he “could not bear the sight of a paintbrush.”

When Leonardo looked at the sky and saw birds soaring gracefully through the air, he wondered, “How can man fly, too?” Being Leonardo, he got to work and designed several devices. He tried to make a model based on the way bats flew. He boarded up the windows of the room he worked in so no one would know if his flying machine failed.

It didn't work. Still, Leonardo's attempts were far from total failures. In the course of his studies, he developed some of the basic ideas for parachutes and helicopters.

Leonardo explored almost every field of science, including optics, geology, botany, physics, and engineering. He made great advances in the study of anatomy. His notebooks are filled with highly detailed drawings of human bodies—not just the outside, but the inside, too.

Are You Smiling at Me?

While Leonardo lived in Milan for the second time, he painted what may be the most famous painting of all time, a portrait called Mona Lisa. For many years no one knew the identity of the woman in the picture. However, it is now believed to be Lisa Gherardini, wife of a Florentine cloth merchant named Francesco del Giocondo.

For hundreds of years, people have been fascinated by the Mona Lisa. Look at the way she smiles. Leonardo added to the mystery of Mona Lisa by painting an unusual, misty-looking landscape in the background. If you look closely, you will notice that Leonardo used an interesting technique called sfumato. Sfumato is a way of painting that creates smooth changes between different areas of color and shading in a picture. The end result is a soft, hazy, smoky look—the perfect background for this mysterious woman!

Last Years

Leonardo lived in troubled times. When fighting broke out again in Milan, he moved to Rome and worked for Pope Leo X. But the pope seemed to favor other artists of the day. So, when King Francis I invited him to France, Leonardo left Italy, never to return. He advised the French king on many architectural projects before he died in 1519 CE.

Leonardo da Vinci was a man whose boundless curiosity, multiple talents, and visionary imagination summed up the spirit of the Renaissance.

Mirror Writing

Leonardo da Vinci constantly wrote in notebooks that he carried everywhere he went. In these notebooks he recorded his ideas, questions, and sketches—at least 10,000 pages of words on every imaginable topic. But, if you want to read them, you will need a mirror. Leonardo wrote from right to left, so all the letters are reversed!

The Mona Lisa has fascinated people for centuries, and in fact, she seems to have fascinated Leonardo as well. He kept the painting in his possession until his death in France, never delivering it to his patron, Francesco del Giocondo. Some have argued that he continued to work on the painting until he died.

Chapter 4

Michelangelo and Raphael

THE BIG QUESTION

How is the spirit of the Renaissance represented in the artistic achievements of Michelangelo and Raphael?

One day, a group of boys were called to the home of the incredibly important Lorenzo de' Medici. What could a man so rich and powerful, a man people called "the Magnificent," want to tell these boys?

Lorenzo looked at the boys and made an announcement. "You see this stone figure?" he said, pointing to an ancient Roman statue of a nature god called a faun. "A brilliant sculptor created this piece centuries ago. I want each of you to carve a statue exactly like this one."

Some of the boys groaned. Lorenzo paid no attention. "Work quickly and accurately," he said. "The young man who produces the best sculpture wins a place in my art school."

Some time later, as Lorenzo strolled through his courtyard, he spotted one boy whose work looked far superior to the rest. He turned to his assistant and asked, "Who is that child? Look at how he has carved the head of the faun. It's difficult to tell his work from the real thing!"

The assistant checked his list. "Let's see. Michelangelo Buonarroti, second son of a former small-town mayor. Family is from minor nobility. Mother died when the boy was six. Hmm . . . not a very good Latin or Greek scholar. Ran away from school a lot."

"Ran away?"

Faun

“Yes, it seems he sneaked away from school to go to the churches, where he spent hours drawing copies of the paintings.”

“Ah, a true art lover,” said Lorenzo.

“Well, his father isn’t. The father is upset that Michelangelo works as an apprentice in Ghirlandai’s studio. He thinks he should pursue a different profession.”

Lorenzo walked up to Michelangelo and gazed at the faun’s head the boy had carved. “That’s a lovely sculpture,” Lorenzo commented. Then he said, “Young man, come live in our home and learn what you can from us.”

Lorenzo de’ Medici’s invitation was a great honor, but Michelangelo’s father wasn’t thrilled. His father changed his mind, however, when Lorenzo offered him a job and gave Michelangelo a beautiful cloak and a handsome sum of money.

The Medici family was powerful and influential. They were involved in trade and banking. In the Medici household, Michelangelo discussed art and literature with the finest minds of the time. He studied the old masters in sculpture and painting. His stay with the Medici family launched his career in the art world.

Michelangelo Made It—and Don't You Forget It!

On a stormy night in 1492 CE, Lorenzo de' Medici died. The sudden loss shocked the people of Florence. Michelangelo, in particular, lost a friend and a patron, a man who had recognized the young artist's genius and supported him in his efforts. Reluctantly, Michelangelo left his beloved city.

After some years of moving here and there, Michelangelo went to Rome. In Rome, a church official who had heard about the young sculptor's work offered him a job. He told Michelangelo to create something spectacular so that people would remember him (the church official) when he was gone.

Twenty-four-year-old Michelangelo got to work immediately. In less than 12 months, he carved the stunningly beautiful Pietà. The sculpture shows Mary, the mother of Jesus, holding her son across her lap just after He was removed from the cross.

The Pietà was placed in the great church of the Vatican in Rome, St. Peter's Basilica. Once, when Michelangelo went to St. Peter's to look at his creation, a group of visitors stood in front of it trying to guess who carved the amazing work. No one guessed Michelangelo.

That didn't make Michelangelo happy. Later, in the middle of the night, he returned to the Basilica with hammer and chisel in hand. So there would be no question in the future, he carved his name on the sash that runs diagonally across Mary. As far as anyone knows, this is the only piece of art Michelangelo ever signed.

Michelangelo's Pietà, 1499 CE

From the Giant Comes the Giant Slayer

The Pietà made Michelangelo the most famous sculptor in Italy. In 1501 CE, he returned to Florence. There, officials of the cathedral showed Michelangelo a huge rectangular block of marble known as “the Giant.” They showed him where another artist had begun to work on the huge block but then made a mess of it. The officials challenged Michelangelo: “Can you make something out of this?” they asked. Michelangelo accepted the challenge.

Michelangelo's David, 1504 CE

Michelangelo even carved the veins in the human hand. Imagine carving veins out of marble!

From the 20-foot block, he set out to carve a huge statue of David, the biblical hero who had used his slingshot to slay the giant enemy, Goliath.

Church Patronage: Julius II and Michelangelo

Pope Julius II was a man of great ambition, determination, and energy. When his mind was made up, you wouldn't want to be in his way. And he had a terrible temper. In other words, he was a lot like Michelangelo. So when these two powerful personalities came together, sparks were bound to fly.

Julius asked Michelangelo to come to Rome to construct a colossal tomb for him that would be built under the dome of St. Peter's Basilica. Julius was not modest—he wanted to be sure people remembered him.

Michelangelo agreed and set to work hauling in tons of stone from the cliffs of Carrara, where he spent his childhood. After great labor and expense, Michelangelo filled St. Peter's square with blocks of marble.

But then Julius gave an order to stop work on this expensive project. He also refused to pay Michelangelo. An angry Michelangelo packed his bags and headed back to Florence. An even angrier Julius sent a messenger to demand that Michelangelo return to Rome. Michelangelo told the messenger he would return when the pope paid what he owed him and stuck to his promises.

Did the pope apologize and pay Michelangelo, and did everyone live happily ever after? Definitely not! Julius sent furious commands to the leaders of Florence: "Send Michelangelo back to Rome," he said, "or I will send my armies to get him." A Florentine leader, who was also a friend of Michelangelo, suggested he return to Rome. After all, he told the angry artist, Florence did not wish to go to war for Michelangelo's sake!

Painting the Sistine Ceiling

It took months, but eventually Michelangelo did go back to Rome. When he arrived, the pope had a job waiting for him. The pope had decided that the tomb could wait. Instead, he wanted Michelangelo to paint the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

Michelangelo refused: “I am a sculptor, not a painter,” he told the pope. And the ceiling itself was immense—a huge, high, curved surface covering more than 5,800 square feet (about twice as big as a tennis court).

Michelangelo urged the pope to give the job to someone else, but the pope insisted. Michelangelo reluctantly agreed.

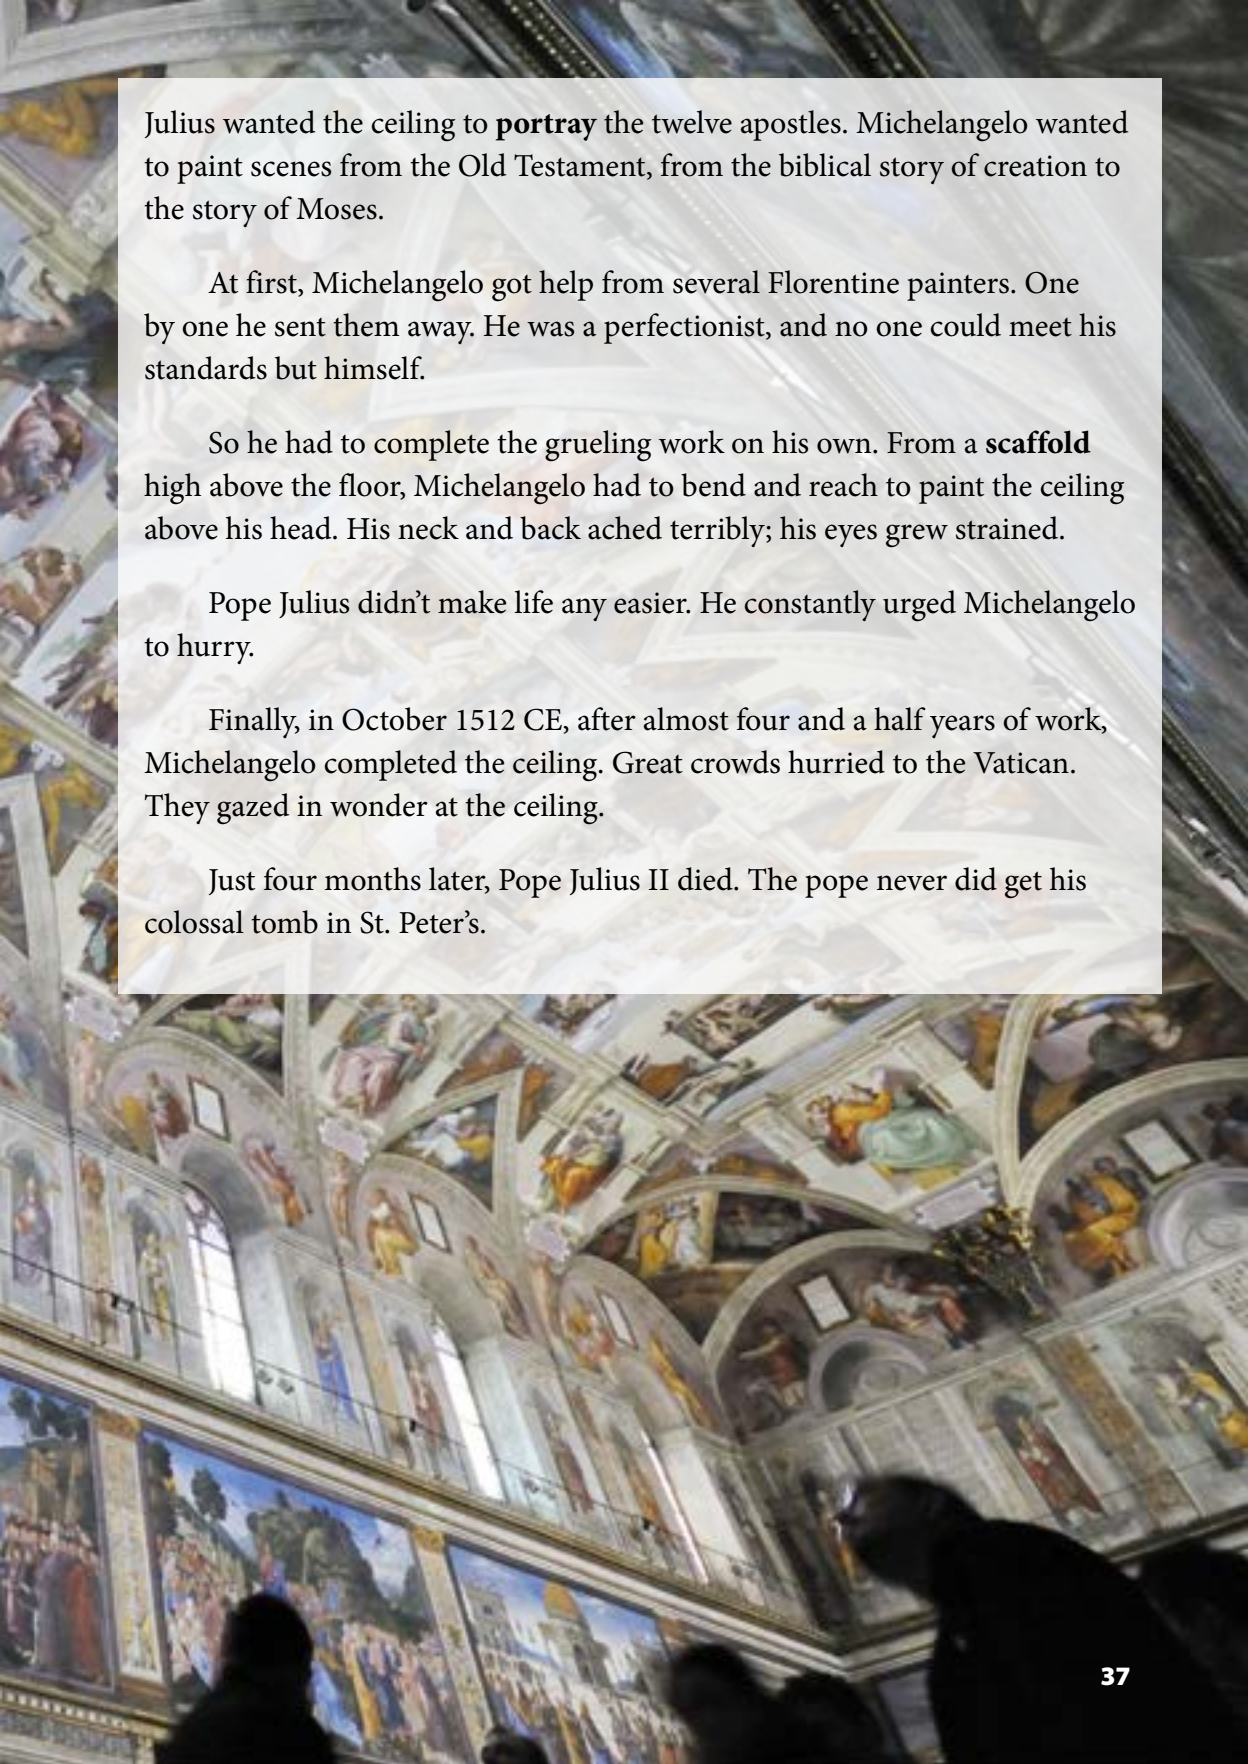

Years before, when he worked as an apprentice, Michelangelo had learned the technique of fresco painting. In fresco painting, the artist applies a coat of wet plaster to a surface, then paints on the plaster. As the paint and plaster dry together, the painting will become a permanent part of the wall, or in this case, the ceiling.

Michelangelo prepared to start the monumental task of painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. From the beginning, he and the pope disagreed.

In the Sistine Chapel, Botticelli's art is on the walls, and Michelangelo's is on the ceiling.

Julius wanted the ceiling to portray the twelve apostles. Michelangelo wanted to paint scenes from the Old Testament, from the biblical story of creation to the story of Moses.

At first, Michelangelo got help from several Florentine painters. One by one he sent them away. He was a perfectionist, and no one could meet his standards but himself.

So he had to complete the grueling work on his own. From a scaffold high above the floor, Michelangelo had to bend and reach to paint the ceiling above his head. His neck and back ached terribly; his eyes grew strained.

Pope Julius didn't make life any easier. He constantly urged Michelangelo to hurry.

Finally, in October 1512 CE, after almost four and a half years of work, Michelangelo completed the ceiling. Great crowds hurried to the Vatican. They gazed in wonder at the ceiling.

Just four months later, Pope Julius II died. The pope never did get his colossal tomb in St. Peter's.

The Great Raphael

Raphael was another talented artist of the period. He was born Raffaello Sanzio in 1483 CE. He was younger than both Leonardo and Michelangelo. Raphael lost both of his parents at an early age. By 11, he was on his own, working as an apprentice in a busy art studio.

In 1504 CE, when Raphael was 21, he moved to Florence where Michelangelo and Leonardo were already living. There, he studied the techniques of the older artists and learned to use them in his own paintings.

Remember, in those days artists supported themselves by getting commissions from patrons. The wealthy people of Florence were eager to own beautiful paintings. By the time Raphael arrived, both Leonardo and Michelangelo were not painting as much. As he aged, Leonardo grew more interested in math and science and was reluctant to paint at all. Michelangelo's energies were consumed by big projects assigned to him by the pope. So, young Raphael had many people ready to pay him to paint.

While in Florence, Raphael created at least 17 paintings of the Madonna, or mother of Jesus, and the Holy Family for various individuals. If you look at one of Raphael's Madonnas and compare it to a Madonna painted during the Middle Ages, you will see how people's view of the world changed in the Renaissance.

In the medieval image, the Madonna looks a little stiff. But the painting wasn't intended to be lifelike—its main purpose was to express religious devotion.

However, Raphael's painting is different. He presents natural human figures that are so lifelike, it is as if they could step out from the painting.

Cimabue's Madonna and Child,

Raphael's Madonna of the Grand Duke, 1505 CE

Raphael's The School of Athens, 1510 CE

Raphael in Rome

In 1508 CE Raphael was called to Rome by Pope Julius II. While Michelangelo was painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, Raphael was put in charge of painting a series of rooms in the Vatican.

In one room he painted a fresco, or mural, that has become very famous. It is called The School of Athens. The composition of the painting shows how Raphael was a great master of perspective, while the subject matter shows how much the Renaissance movement admired the ancient Greeks. Raphael painted many scholars and philosophers—some are reading, some are discussing big ideas. In the center of the painting, Raphael placed the great philosophers, Plato and Aristotle.

After Raphael's patron, Pope Julius II, died, Raphael became a special favorite of Pope Leo X. Leo put Raphael in charge of the work on St. Peter's Basilica. In addition, Raphael directed the efforts to dig up and study ancient buildings and statues in Rome.

Raphael led a productive life. The artist died on his thirty-seventh birthday. Part of the epitaph on his tomb in Rome reads, "While he lived he made Mother Nature fear to be vanquished by him."

Chapter 5

The Bankers Who Loved Art

THE BIG QUESTION

What motivated Renaissance patrons to commission so much art?

The Medici family of Florence was incredibly wealthy. You have already heard some stories about Lorenzo de' Medici and the artists he supported. Let's first learn more about Lorenzo's grandfather, Cosimo, who really established the family as patrons of great art.

By the mid-1400s, Cosimo de' Medici had built a thriving international banking business, taking advantage of the success of Italian merchants trading goods with other countries. Bankers would charge fees to exchange foreign money for local money and to provide loans to customers. He and his family made the city of Florence the banking center of Europe.

Like his ancestors, Cosimo was a shrewd Cosimo de' Medici businessman. However, something else also captured his interest.

Cosimo had grown up surrounded by the ruins of the Roman Empire. As a child, he had looked at the crumbling buildings and wondered: 'Who were these Romans? What can I learn from them?'

As an adult, Cosimo collected rare books and manuscripts. He hired scribes to copy and translate them. He made sure his own children read great works by the Roman poet Virgil and the Greek philosopher Plato. He built libraries.

Gallery of the Palazzo Medici

Who's Really in Charge?

Cosimo de' Medici was a great patron of the arts. The Medici family home became a gathering place for thinkers and artists from around the world. Many artists lived with Cosimo as they worked on their statues and paintings.

One idea from the ancient Greeks really appealed to Cosimo de' Medici. This was the idea of democracy—rule by the people. Cosimo liked the idea of creating a new society in Florence modeled on Greek ideas. But for Cosimo, democracy was only an idea. In reality, the city of Florence was not run in a democratic way because Cosimo controlled Florence.

Here is the way democracy was supposed to work in Florence: The craftsmen and merchants of Florence joined together in special groups called guilds, such as the wool merchants' guild, the silk weavers' guild, and the doctors' and pharmacists' guild. The guild members elected councilmen, and these councilmen were supposed to govern the city.

That was a step toward democracy. But it was actually Cosimo who told guild members which councilmen to elect. These men were friends of his who followed his suggestions closely. By this method, Cosimo de' Medici indirectly ruled Florence for thirty years.

Florence during the Renaissance

The citizens of Florence liked Cosimo well enough that they did not protest his way of ruling the city. After all, Cosimo successfully protected the city from its enemies. He made generous gifts to charity and business in Florence was booming.

When Cosimo de' Medici died at the age of 76, the grateful people of Florence gave him the title "Father of Our Country."

Like Father, Not Like Son

After Cosimo's death, his son Piero took charge of Florence. Piero suffered from gout, a painful disease of the joints, and had to be carried from place to place on a stretcher.

Piero did not inherit his father's leadership or banking skills, but he did love art. Frail Piero ruled only a few years before he died. Piero's son, Lorenzo, became ruler of Florence when he was only twenty years old.

Lively, dashing, and popular, Lorenzo was the opposite of his sickly father. He played sports, wrote songs, and loved to discuss poetry and philosophy. Lorenzo enjoyed the good life so much that when his father died, he hesitated to take charge of Florence. He soon realized, however, that in Florence, if you weren't in charge, you wouldn't stay wealthy. His peacemaking skills won the hearts of his countrymen and the respect of other leaders in Europe. People began to call him "Lorenzo the Magnificent."

Patron and Poet

Like his father and grandfather, Lorenzo loved classical literature and art. He wrote poetry. The Platonic Academy, a group of learned scholars, continued to meet at his house. He carried on the family tradition of supporting many painters and sculptors and filling his home with beautiful works of art.

Lorenzo started the school of sculpture where the great Michelangelo trained as a young boy. And as you have discovered, Lorenzo was a patron of and friend to Michelangelo. He also supported such great Renaissance artists as Botticelli and Verrocchio, the master from Leonardo's days as an apprentice.

Severe Savonarola

Lorenzo had ruled Florence for about ten years when the monk named Savonarola came to the city. Little did Lorenzo know the trouble this man would bring. You have already heard about how Savonarola's harsh sermons prompted Botticelli to change his style of painting. As soon as Savonarola arrived in town, he began preaching against the Medici family. He said they ate too much, drank too much, dressed immodestly, and cared too much about their fancy belongings. He made the same charges against the people of Florence.

Lorenzo tried to make peace with Savonarola by giving a donation to the monastery where the monk lived. Savonarola returned the money with an insult. He said a good monk is "like a good watchdog—when a thief comes along and throws him a bone, he puts it to one side and goes on barking."

The End of the Medici Family

In 1492 CE, Lorenzo died at the age of forty three, leaving his twenty one-year-old son Piero in charge. This Piero was known as “Piero the Unfortunate” because of his poor judgment and complete lack of political knowledge.

Two years later, the French invaded Florence, and Piero was forced to leave the city. Angry mobs broke into the Medici family home and tore it to pieces, destroying or selling off many valuable items.

After Piero’s departure, Savonarola took charge of the city for a while. He had a grand plan to turn Florence into a model city of Christian virtue. But his expectations were too high, and his rules were too strict. For example, he sent out bands of men who patrolled the streets and carried sticks to beat anyone whose clothing they thought was too fancy.

Although Savonarola’s message was harsh, many people listened to him. Once he urged his followers to build a huge bonfire in the town square.

He told the people of Florence to throw in their “vanities,” the things he considered fancy and unnecessary. Men and women tossed jewelry and expensive clothing, even paintings and books, into the roaring blaze, which is remembered as the “bonfire of the vanities.”

Although Savonarola was a monk, he openly insulted the powerful leader of the Church, the pope. He said that Pope Alexander VI was corrupt. At first, the pope ordered Savonarola to stop giving sermons. This didn’t quiet the angry monk. Later, the pope excommunicated Savonarola, which means he took away his membership of the Church. Then Savonarola was accused of the crime of heresy—of holding beliefs that disagreed with the Church. Back then, the Church was very powerful and demanded that people follow its rules. It was a serious crime to be a heretic. Eventually, Savonarola angered the Church so much that he was arrested, convicted, and executed.

Savonarola

From Florence to Rome

The main activity of the Renaissance now moved from Florence to Rome. Rome was the headquarters of the Church, and home to the pope. From about 1450 CE on, one pope after another took on the role of patron of the arts. Like the wealthy businessmen of Florence, the popes in Rome supported artists in their work.

Why? Pope Nicholas V said that when people saw the spectacular works of art created with the Church's support, they would better appreciate the magnificence and power of the Church.

The popes called many artists to Rome and set them to work on some of the most beautiful paintings, sculptures, and buildings of all time. Rome replaced Florence as the cultural center of the Renaissance.

Piazza del Campidoglio, designed by Michelangelo for Pope Paul III

The Vatican and St. Peter's Today

The pope lives in the Vatican, a short name used for the Palace of the Vatican. This huge building contains the official home of the pope, as well as many museums, chapels, Church offices, and a library. It is located in what is now called Vatican City. Vatican City used to be part of Rome, but now it's a separate country. (That's right, Vatican City is a country; in fact, it's the smallest independent country in the world.)

One of the most important buildings in Vatican City is St. Peter's Basilica, which was designed and built mostly during the Renaissance.

Venice: The Floating City

The Republic of Venice, a great trading center of the Renaissance, was a city-state north of Florence and Rome. Venice is perched on the Adriatic Sea, between Europe and Asia. In the Middle Ages, the merchants of Venice were trading in Constantinople and as far away as China. The Venetians loaded their ships with silver, wine, and woolen cloth from Europe, as well as fine glassware produced in Venice, to trade with merchants to the east. They returned with silk and porcelain from China or spices from the East Indies. By the 1400s, Venice was known for more than just trading. It had built a fleet of ships and won battles to take over neighboring city-states. Venice became very wealthy and powerful.

During the Renaissance, wealthy Venetians not only supported many artists, they also built a city that is a work of art. Venice is a city on the water—not just near but on the water. The city rests on more than 100 small islands. To connect many of the islands, the Venetians built bridges as well as a maze of narrow waterways. These waterways, called canals, crisscrossed the city and made it possible to get from one little island to another. The most famous of the canals, the Grand Canal, winds through the city for about two miles. Even today, people travel on the canals in long, sleek, flat-bottomed boats called gondolas.

At the heart of the city's life was the huge open area called St. Mark's Square, where thousands of pigeons flock before the doors of the magnificent church called St. Mark's Basilica.

The Master of Color

Titian was considered to be the greatest Venetian artist of the 1500s. He is perhaps best known for his use of vibrant color. Titian's portraits reveal his ability to capture his subjects' personalities. As well as people, his paintings often contain mythological and religious themes.

Chapter 6

Morals, Modesty, and Manners

THE BIG QUESTION

What were the Renaissance ideals of how a prince or a courtier should act?

Niccolò Machiavelli worked for the government of Florence in the late 1400s. He witnessed the Medici family fall from power, and he witnessed the bitter struggles between the city-states in Italy, between city-states and foreign countries, and between the pope and other rulers.

All this fighting among rulers made him think. He thought about how a prince should rule his people. Because of all the fighting, he especially thought about how a prince should defend himself against enemies and remain in power. He wrote his ideas in a famous book called The Prince. This book was a study of the art of politics and its publication caused much discussion among the rulers of the time.

What is the chief goal of a prince? “To stay in power,” said Machiavelli. Machiavelli thought that to keep his power, a prince might at times have to be dishonest. “A wise leader,” Machiavelli wrote, “cannot and should not keep his word when keeping it is not to his advantage.”

Machiavelli asked, “Is it better [for a prince] to be loved than to be feared, or the reverse?” Machiavelli said that a prince should wish to be both loved and feared. But he also said that if a ruler had to choose one or the other, then it would be better for people to fear him.

These ideas and others were misinterpreted and have given Machiavelli a bad reputation over the years. Even today, if you describe someone as “Machiavellian,” you mean that person is crafty, sneaky, power-hungry, and willing to use any means to achieve their ends.

Get Real!

Some historians think Machiavelli doesn't deserve his bad reputation. They say he was a wise man who preferred a government in which the people had a say, as it had been back in the Roman Republic. They say that in The Prince, Machiavelli was just being realistic. He was simply writing about what men do, rather than what they should do, and the challenges of governing a large population.

Others disagree. They think that Machiavelli had a too dark and pessimistic view of human nature. They think that people aren't as bad as Machiavelli thought.

The Bad Borgias

When Machiavelli wrote about princes who didn't keep their promises, he often had the Borgia family in mind.

Many historians agree that the Borgias were often cruel, dangerous, and violent people. Rodrigo Borgia, who became Pope Alexander VI, holds the unpleasant reputation of being one of the most corrupt popes of all times. In The Prince, Machiavelli wrote this about Alexander VI: “There never was a man more effective in swearing that things were true, and the greater the oaths with which he made a promise, the less he observed it.”

Rodrigo's second son, Cesare Borgia, was considered to be a brute. Unfortunately, he was put in charge of an army. Machiavelli traveled with Cesare at times and was impressed by his military skills. Cesare knew how to get power and keep it. He ruthlessly tried to conquer everything that lay in his path.

When Cesare decided he wanted to take possession of the city of Camerino, he visited his friend, the Duke of Urbino. Cesare asked to borrow all of Urbino's cannons so he could use them to attack Camerino.

The Duke, a trusting man, agreed to Cesare's request. But that night, Cesare marched back into his friend's city and conquered Urbino with its own cannons!

Later, Cesare went on to capture Camerino by deception, too. He negotiated with the rulers of the city. If they would surrender, then Cesare promised to let them off easily. They agreed to surrender. Then Cesare betrayed them. As soon as Cesare and his army entered the city, he gave orders for the rulers to be killed.

Cesare Borgia

Fortunately, the Borgias did not stay in power long. Rodrigo Borgia, also known as Pope Alexander VI, died in 1503 CE. Cesare was chased out of Italy. He died in battle in Spain at the age of 31.

From The Prince

Machiavelli also greatly admired ancient Greece and ancient Rome. In a letter he wrote to a friend, Machiavelli said that he wrote The Prince after reading many works of history by “the ancients,” the classical writers of Greece and Rome. “I give myself completely over to the ancients,” Machiavelli said. Here are some excerpts from The Prince.

“Anyone who determines to act in all circumstances the part of a good man must come to ruin among so many who are not good. Hence, if a prince wishes to maintain himself, he must learn how not to be good, and to use that ability or not as is required.”

“The experience of our times shows that the princes who have done great things are the ones who have taken little account of their promises and who have known how to addle the brains of men with their craft.”

“If men were all good, this advice would not be good, but since men are wicked and do not keep their promises to you, you likewise do not have to keep your promises to them.”

“So far as he is able, a prince should stick to the path of good but, if the necessity arises, he should know how to follow evil.”

Castiglione and The Courtier

In the early 1500s, Baldassar Castiglione wrote The Book of the Courtier. It's commonly known as The Courtier for short. In great detail, the book describes how the ideal courtier should behave.

What's a Courtier?

The word court is in courtier. There is the kind of court where trials take place with a judge and sometimes a jury. But this is a different kind of court—the court of a king or prince. A prince's court might mean the palace or mansion where the prince lives. The court also includes the royal family, servants, officers, and advisers of the prince.

A courtier is a person who spends a lot of time at the court of the prince. Sometimes, when people refer to a courtier, they mean a person who hangs around the prince and flatters him and tries to gain his favor, but this doesn't apply to all courtiers.

Part of the title page of The Book of the Courtier

The Book of the Courtier describes the right ways to behave at court among royals and nobles. It describes the ideals of courtly life.

Castiglione said that a lady should be “witty, elegant, and cultured.” He said a gentleman should be “loyal to his prince and courteous to women.” The courtier should be “athletic, sensitive, artistic, and well-educated.”

A perfect courtier should be able to do everything well: he should be a skilled horseman, a bold soldier in battle, a graceful dancer, and more. He should be “well built and shapely of limb,” not too short or too tall. And he should be a remarkable athlete: he should excel in jousting, wrestling, tennis, and spear-throwing! But, said Castiglione, the courtier should avoid some activities, “such as turning somersaults, rope-walking, and the like, which ... little befit a gentleman.”

Baldassar Castiglione

You might think that a courtier who can do everything well would be rather conceited, but it’s important, Castiglione said, to be “gentle, modest, and reserved.” In other words, don’t be a show-off.

Most important of all, the courtier “must accompany his actions, gestures, habits, in short his every movement, with grace.” Even when the courtier is doing something very difficult, he should do it so gracefully that it looks easy. The Italian word for this quality is sprezzatura. It means the ability to make things look easy, as though you hardly have to try or think about what you’re doing.

Della Casa's Guide to Manners of the Renaissance

During the Renaissance, what people considered “good manners” changed quite a bit. In the 1500s, Giovanni della Casa wrote a book about etiquette, or the customs for polite behavior. Della Casa was a poet and diplomat from Florence. The book, known in Italian as Il Galateo, is largely addressed to his nephew, and therefore takes on a familiar tone, though he intended to reach a wide range of people.

Della Casa detailed proper ways to sit and stand in the company of others. He explained how best to blow your nose, to cut your nails, and to chew your food. He even discussed situations where it might be okay—or not—to express your feelings. The excerpts below reveal just how important good manners and polite behavior were to della Casa.

“It is moreover extremely indecent to spit, cough, and expectorate (as it were) in company, as some hearty fellows are apt to do: and more so, when you have blown your nose, to draw aside and examine the contents of your handkerchief; as if you expected pearls or rubies to distill from your brain. These kinds of habits, in good company, are so very nauseous and disgusting, that if we indulge ourselves in them, no one can be very fond of our acquaintance.”

“It is also an inelegant custom, for any one to apply his nose, by way of smelling to a glass of wine, which another person is to drink; or to a plate of meat, which another is to eat. Nay, I would not advise anyone to smell to anything, which he himself intends to eat or drink: since there is a possibility, at least, that his nose may drop upon it; or the very idea may offend the company, though by good luck that accident may not then befall them.”

“What now can we suppose...to say to those people, whom we sometimes see thrusting, like hogs, their very snouts into their soup, so as not once to lift up their eyes from their hands, from what is set before them? Who, with their cheeks inflated as if they were sounding a trumpet, or puffing up the fire, do not so properly eat, as devour their food?”

Women in the Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

What opportunities did the Renaissance movement afford to some wealthy women of the time?

Although many Renaissance women ran a household as expected by the cultural norms of the day, some women became powerful and influential despite all that stood in their way. One such woman was Isabella d’Este.

Isabella was born in the Italian city-state of Ferrara in 1474 CE. Fortunately, her father, the Duke of Ferrara, believed in the importance of educating both his sons and his daughters.

Isabella blossomed into a brilliant student. When she was only six years old, she knew Latin and Greek and played the lute, a popular instrument during the Renaissance, similar to a guitar. She was a feisty little girl who could and would debate anyone on any topic. Other children called her “La Prima Donna” or “The First Lady.”

Engaged at Six!

As was the custom long ago, the Duke of Ferrara arranged marriages for his children. Arranged marriages allowed powerful families to form political ties and alliances with other powerful families. So, at the tender age of six years old, Isabella became engaged to Francesco Gonzaga of Mantua. But he was much older—all of 14!

The wedding took place when Isabella turned 16, a normal age in those times for a girl to get married. Through this marriage Isabella became related to many ruling families in Italy.

After Isabella moved to Mantua, a beautiful city in northern Italy, she wasted no time getting involved in the politics of the city. Francesco was often away, fighting one battle after another with various city-states and countries. When Francesco was out of town, Isabella skillfully governed the people.

In 1509 CE, while Francesco was leading troops against the city of Venice, he was captured and put in jail for several years. With Francesco gone, it might have seemed like a good opportunity for the princes of unfriendly city-states to try to take over Mantua. But Isabella made it clear to potential enemies that she was very much in charge and they had better not try anything. While Francesco was in prison, she managed to fight off enemies and form strong alliances with other rulers.

Once released from jail, Isabella's husband left to fight more battles. He fought against the French for a few years, and died in 1519 CE.

After that, Isabella led Mantua on her own. She kept her enemies out and made certain that both Mantua and her home city of Ferrara stayed independent and unharmed.

A Passion for the Arts

Not only was Isabella an outstanding ruler, she was also a great patron of the arts. She collected antiques, rare books, and all types of artwork.

Tucked away in the Castle of St. George in Mantua, Isabella built a special room. She called it her grotta, which means “cave.” This treasure chamber contained the works of many of the great artists of the day. Gorgeous paintings hung on the walls of the grotta. In beautifully carved wooden cabinets she kept ancient coins and medals, precious jewels, and gemstones.

Sculptors, writers, and painters visited Isabella’s home often. She employed many of them. In fact, for many years she tried to persuade the great Leonardo da Vinci to paint her portrait. All she could get him to do was a drawing. At one point, he made the excuse that he was too busy working out geometry problems to stop and paint.

Finally, Isabella paid another great Renaissance artist, Titian, to capture her likeness on canvas. Titian did too precise a job. His portrait accurately portrayed Isabella, who was sixty years old at the time. When she looked at the picture, Isabella became furious and demanded that he repaint it. On his second try, Titian wisely made Isabella look a good twenty years younger!

Isabella didn’t forget her fellow women, either. She started a school where young girls could learn Greek, Latin, the arts, philosophy, and literature.

Isabella was an unusual woman for her time. She is justly remembered as the “First Lady of the Renaissance.”

Noble Women

Renaissance women inspired writers to create poetry, sculptors to fashion statues, and artists to paint beautiful portraits. However, the sculptor’s chisel and the painter’s brush were mostly kept out of the hands of women.

Although Renaissance men believed they could do almost anything, they didn’t think the same of women. Men of the Renaissance believed that a young woman born into a noble, wealthy family had three duties: (1) she should marry a rich man from an important family; (2) she should be loyal to that husband; and (3) she should give him sons.

Overcoming Obstacles

Some women overcame the obstacles of their time and became respected artists in their own right. Well-known for her portrait work, Sofonisba Anguissola (1530–1625 CE) is one of the earliest known female artists. Most female artists of the time were the daughters of painters. However, Sofonisba's father was not a painter but a wealthy nobleman.

The oldest of seven children, Sofonisba had five younger sisters and a brother. Her father, Amilcare Anguissola, read and lived by the famous words of Castiglione's The Courtier, including the importance of educating young women. Both Sofonisba and her sister Elena lived and trained with prominent local artists. Under her father's encouragement, Sofonisba received early inspiration from notable artists including Michelangelo. As a young artist, Sofonisba trained three of her younger sisters to be painters.

Her most well-known works include many self-portraits and the famous family portrait Lucia, Minerva, and Europa Anguissola Playing Chess. Lucia, Minerva, and Europa are three of her younger sisters. The painting captures a glimpse of noble family life during this time.

the daughter of Italian painter Prospero Fontana. Lavinia Fontana (1552–1614 CE) received patronage from the family of Pope Gregory XIII and painted portraits of many well-known individuals. Recognized for her attention to detail and the use of vibrant colors, her self-portraits and family paintings were reminiscent of Sofonisba Anguissola. Lavinia married lesser-known artist Gian Paolo Zappi, who ultimately worked as her agent.

Renaissance Style

During the European Renaissance, there was more freedom in the style of dress, and headdresses allowed more hair to show than had previously been considered acceptable. The high collars and starched ruffs, or pleated collars, of this period led to upswept hairstyles that were sometimes formed over a wire frame in a heart shape. In England a variety of beards, mustaches, and hairstyles for men became popular during the reign of Henry VIII. The popularity of Queen Elizabeth I inspired her subjects to wear red wigs or dye their hair red and shave their hairlines to give the appearance of a high forehead like hers.

Toward the end of the 1500s, a red-blond hair color was popularized in paintings by Italian artist Titian. To achieve the color, Venetian women applied mixtures of alum, sulfur, soda, and rhubarb to their hair and sat in the sun to let it dry. A new custom in Renaissance France was to grind flowers into a powder and apply the mixture to hair. Blonde hair was considered especially stylish for women. Women often bleached their hair to make it blonde. Wigs or fake locks of hair made from yellow or white silk were also common.

Clothing was an important status symbol during the Renaissance. The wealthy dressed in fancy clothing. A wealthy person would have a variety of clothes made from fine materials, furs, and silks. Peasants, on the other hand, typically had only one or two sets of clothing. Wealthy men wore colorful tights or stockings with a shirt and tight-fitting coat called a doublet.

Renaissance
fashion

They also often wore hats. Wealthy women wore long dresses with high waists and puffy sleeves and shoulders. Sometimes their dresses were embellished with embroidery stitched with gold and silver thread. Women had elaborate gold jewelry decorated with expensive jewels like pearls and sapphires. In some areas, laws that had been in effect since the early 1300s prevented the lower classes from wearing nice clothes. In England there were many laws that specified who could wear what types of clothes. Only certain social classes could wear clothes of specific colors and materials. In some areas only nobles were allowed to wear fur.

Marriages to Keep the Peace

During the Renaissance, in upper-class families most marriages were arranged by parents, usually while the children were still young. Therefore, men and women did not usually date each other, fall in love, and then get married.

Fathers preferred that their daughters marry rich and powerful men from other city-states or countries. There was a good reason for this. When the daughter of a prince in one city-state married the son of a ruler in another city-state, the two families would be much less likely to go to war.

With a son, daughter, and grandchildren between them, the two rulers would have too much in common to fight each other.

This practice of arranged political marriages became common all across Europe. After a while, many of the ruling families were related to each other.

The Northern Renaissance

THE BIG QUESTION

How did the Renaissance movement in Italy impact the artists of northern Europe?

Until now, we have only read about the Renaissance movement in Italy. The Renaissance reached other parts of Europe as well.

Scholars and artists in other countries were also enjoying a rebirth of learning. Sometimes these scholars and artists visited the city-states of Italy, especially Florence, and brought ideas and artwork back to their home countries. These countries included Germany and the region that used to be called Flanders, which is now part of the Netherlands and Belgium.

We are going to read about four painters: two were German, and two were Flemish, which means they were from Flanders. Because they lived in countries north of Italy, people often say that they are part of “The Northern Renaissance.”

The Master of Detail

Jan van Eyck was born in about 1390 CE. He lived in Flanders. Van Eyck’s countrymen called him the “King of the Painters.” He is one of the early figures involved in the Northern Renaissance. Van Eyck painted at about the same time that Brunelleschi was working as an architect in Italy.

Van Eyck developed new kinds of oil paint that gave his pictures a sharp and brilliant look. He discovered new ways to show light and texture in his paintings. He could realistically portray the tiniest details in a painting. In a painting of Giovanni Arnolfini, a portrait that van Eyck painted for an Italian businessman living in Flanders, van Eyck emphasized the texture of the subjects’ clothing, as well as the light pouring through the open window.

Jan van Eyck's The Arnolfini Portrait, 1434 CE

Dürer: Self-Portrait of the Artist

Albrecht Dürer was born in 1471 CE to Hungarian parents living in Germany. (He was just a little older than Michelangelo, who was born in 1475 CE.) Dürer was fascinated by the artistic developments happening in Italy at the time. He made two trips to Italy in order to learn as much as he could from the great masters.

Dürer was a proud supporter of the Renaissance movement. The very fact that he painted so many portraits and self-portraits demonstrates his desire to understand the humanity of his subjects. It shows his belief in the importance of the individual, especially one particular individual—himself!

Dürer began sketching himself when he was only 13 and would continue to capture his likeness in self-portraits throughout his career. In the Self-Portrait he painted in 1498 CE, Dürer shows himself as a handsome young man with a taste for fine clothes. It is a painting that reveals how much he has been influenced by his Italian masters. In the famous Self-Portrait painted in 1500 CE, Dürer looks directly at us with bold, confident eyes. Many portraits at the time showed the person from the side, or a three-quarters angle, rather than head on. Dürer perfected the art of portraiture. His keen artist's eye captured not only a range of human expressions and emotions, but also that of skin tone and texture.

Dürer's Self-Portrait, 1498 CE

Dürer was not only a great painter, he was also a master of the art of making prints with woodcuts or engravings. As a young apprentice he learned how to make woodcuts by carving pictures in blocks of wood, as well as engravings by using a sharp tool to cut an image into a metal plate. He would spread ink on the carved wood or the metal plate then print the image on paper. Dürer's woodcuts and engravings made him famous, partly because they could be quickly and easily reproduced, so many people could see

Pieter Bruegel the Elder

Pieter Bruegel the Elder was born in the city of Antwerp, which is in the country we now call Belgium. (He is called the Elder because his son, Pieter the Younger, was a painter, too.) Like Venice and Florence in Italy, Antwerp was a busy trading city with many banks and businesses—which meant there were many wealthy people ready to buy works of art. Most of these people wanted paintings in the style of the great Italian masters such as Michelangelo and Raphael. So Bruegel traveled to Italy to see what he could learn.

When it came to painting, however, Bruegel went his own way. You won't find heroic-looking, muscular figures such as the ones Michelangelo painted on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel. You won't find many scenes from classical mythology in Bruegel's work. His paintings are very different from anything like Botticelli's Birth of Venus.

One of the few paintings in which Bruegel did choose to use a classical myth as the theme is Landscape with the Fall of Icarus. It's as though Bruegel were saying, "What's all the fuss about these myths? I'll give you a painting about a myth, but in my own way."

Bruegel's Landscape with the Fall of Icarus, 1558 CE

Bruegel's way was to make the myth only a small part of the painting. He chose the Greek myth of Daedalus, the master inventor, and his son Icarus. For King Minos, Daedalus designed a giant maze called the Labyrinth, from which no one could escape. Later, when the king grew angry with Daedalus, he locked him in the Labyrinth along with Icarus. But Daedalus soon came up with a plan to escape. Little by little, he gathered many feathers, then fastened them together with wax to make wings like those of a bird. He and his son used the wings to fly out of the Labyrinth. But in his excitement Icarus ignored his father's warnings not to fly too high. Up and up he flew until the sun began to melt the wax. The feathers fell from his wings, and down plunged Icarus into the sea.

Bruegel's painting shows the fall of Icarus, though at first glance you might not even notice it. Look at the bottom right corner of the painting. Do you see two legs sticking out of the water near the ship? That's Icarus falling into the water—and that's all of the myth Bruegel chose to show. Bruegel draws our attention away from the myth and makes us look at everyday life; at the farmer plowing and the shepherd with his flock.

Bruegel is best known for his pictures of everyday people. For example, he painted Peasant Wedding (also known as The Wedding Feast) in the late 1560s. Bruegel shows the peasants as he saw them. He doesn't try to "prettify" the scene. This is not a fancy feast. The simple food is being carried on rough boards. In the foreground, you can see a child licking her fingers, making sure she gets every last bit out of the bowl. In the middle left, the piper is looking hungrily at the food passing by. He's probably hoping there will be some food left for him after he finishes playing!

Bruegel's Peasant Wedding, 1567 CE

Bruegel's sons, grandsons, and even great-grandsons became artists. But none equaled or surpassed his great works.

Holbein's Portrait of Sir Thomas More, 1527 CE

Hans Holbein the Younger

German painter, draftsman, and designer Hans Holbein the Younger (1497–1543 CE) came from a family of notable artists. His father, Hans Holbein the Elder, was a renowned artist. His uncle and brother were acclaimed artists, too. Following the tradition of Albrecht Dürer, Hans Holbein the Younger was a master portrait artist. He knew many famous humanist scholars of the time and painted many of their portraits. For example, he created portraits of the great Renaissance scholar Erasmus and the English humanist Sir Thomas More. Hans Holbein the Younger was painting in Europe when religious division created a movement called the Reformation. He worked and painted at the court of King Henry VIII during this time of religious upheaval when the English Church split apart from the Catholic Church and the pope. He painted government ministers, Church leaders, kings, queens and at the time, controversial religious leaders. The leaders of the English Reformation asked

Hans Holbein to create art that promoted the king as the new head of the Church and the new religious movement.

Art in every form was used to denounce the pope and the old Church. Men like Martin Luther and John Calvin challenged the authority of the Catholic Church, as well as its doctrine.

Hans Holbein the Younger created a body of work that allows us to know the faces of the people who helped transform Western Europe.

Popular Prose on Page and Stage

THE BIG QUESTION

How did writers, such as Cervantes and Shakespeare, embody the ideals of the Renaissance movement?

Painting and architecture were features of the Renaissance, but so too was literature. Talented and highly original writers appeared and their work transformed the literary landscape. Miguel de Cervantes was one of these writers.

When Miguel de Cervantes published the first part of Don Quixote in 1605 CE, the novel was read widely by literate members of society. It became a popular novel in later centuries. It has been translated from Spanish into more than a hundred languages. Only the Bible has been translated into more languages than Don Quixote.

Bad Luck Trails a Good Man

Miguel de Cervantes was born in Spain in 1547 CE. As a young man, Cervantes published some poems, but he did not set out to be a writer. Instead he became a soldier. He joined a Spanish regiment stationed in Naples.

After six years as a soldier, Cervantes headed back to Spain. With him, he carried letters that gloriously described his military service. He thought these papers might help him find a good job when he got back home. Instead, the letters became quite a problem.

This is what happened: just off the coast of France, Cervantes's ship was attacked by pirates. When the pirates read the letters, they assumed they had captured an important and wealthy gentleman. They took Cervantes to Algeria, where they put him in prison and held him for a high ransom. He tried to escape many times, but never made it. Finally, after five years, Cervantes's family was able to scrape together the money to set him free.

Back in Jail

When a soldier with a distinguished war record returned from battle, he could usually get a good job with a nobleman. But Cervantes received no such reward. So there he was, thirty three years old and out of work. What to do? Why not try writing again?

And boy, did he write! Cervantes churned out dozens and dozens of poems and plays. Although people liked his work, he still didn't make much money. To put bread on the table, he took a job with the government.

In one of his government jobs, Cervantes got into trouble again. He was working as a tax collector—a job that's not likely to help anyone win a popularity contest. Once, when he had collected a lot of tax money, Cervantes felt anxious about carrying it as he traveled along the roads. He left the money with an innkeeper he thought he could trust. When he returned to get the money, the innkeeper had run off with it! The government held Cervantes responsible for the stolen money. Since he couldn't repay it all, he was thrown in jail.

Some people believe that while Cervantes was in jail, he came up with the idea for Don Quixote, and perhaps even wrote some of the book behind bars. When Cervantes published The History of Don Quixote de la Mancha in 1605 CE, it was well received. It made Cervantes famous, but not rich.

Near the end of his life, Cervantes did find a patron whose support allowed him to concentrate on his writing. He wrote a second part to Don Quixote and more short stories. He completed a novel just four days before he died in Madrid in 1616 CE.

What's So Great About Don Quixote?

Don Quixote was written about 400 years ago. Why has it remained so popular?

For one thing, much of the book is very funny. There's a story that once the king of Spain was looking out a window when he saw a man who, while reading a book, kept slapping his leg and roaring with laughter. "I'll bet," said the king, "that he's reading Don Quixote."

Cervantes wrote Don Quixote to make fun of books about romance and chivalry. These books, which were very popular in Cervantes's time, told stories of brave knights in shining armor who set out to rescue damsels in distress. They were full of fantastic adventures, powerful magicians, fierce dragons, and brave deeds.

And so Cervantes created Don Quixote. (Don is a title of respect, like Sir in English.) The Don is an elderly gentleman who loves to read romances about the knights of the Middle Ages. In fact, he reads so many romances that he loses touch with reality. He begins to believe the romances are true—that all the enchantments and battles and rescues really happened. Soon, he doesn't just want to read about knights anymore—instead, he decides to become one. His goal is to wander the world in search of adventures and to gain fame and honor by his daring deeds.

A man who attacks windmills may seem foolish, and Don Quixote does many foolish things. But the more you get to know Don Quixote, the more you begin to see that he is, at heart, noble and generous—sometimes a lot more noble and generous than the world around him.

In Cervantes's novel, Don Quixote mistakes windmills for giants.

The Young Bard of Avon

William Shakespeare was an English playwright, poet, and actor during the Renaissance. Many people believe Shakespeare was the greatest playwright of all time. Shakespeare is sometimes called the “Bard of Avon.” Bard is another word for poet. This well-known poet was born in England, in Stratford-upon-Avon, in 1564 CE.

He was the third of eight children. His father worked as a leather merchant and glove maker. During Shakespeare’s early years, his father served as bailiff (something like an officer of the law) of their town and the family seemed pretty well-off.

In Shakespeare’s time, well-off boys attended school, while girls stayed home. Young Will probably spent long hours learning Latin, Greek, the Bible, and English history. It seems he didn’t enjoy school much: in one of his plays, he described “the whining schoolboy, with his satchel . . . creeping like a snail unwillingly to school.”

Shakespeare married Anne Hathaway. It's believed that Shakespeare met his wife near her family home. Today, many people visit this home now known as Anne Hathaway's Cottage.

By the time Shakespeare reached college age, his father had become so poor that he owed money, couldn't pay taxes, and didn't show his face in public for fear of being thrown in jail. It's likely that the Shakespeare family didn't have enough money to pay for a college education for William.

What did William do when he finished his schooling? No one knows for sure.

The Lost Years

There's a lot about Shakespeare's life we don't know. No one even knows for sure the exact date of Shakespeare's birthday.

Most of the information we have about Shakespeare comes from the town's official records of baptisms, marriages, and deaths. We also know a little from what his friends wrote about him. Over the years, scholars have closely examined the available documents, as well as Shakespeare's own writings, to put together a picture of the playwright's life. Sometimes parts of the picture are missing, and then scholars have to use whatever evidence they have to make an informed guess.

We do know that eighteen-year-old William married twenty-six-year-old Anne Hathaway in 1582 CE. Over the next few years, Anne gave birth to their daughter Susanna, followed by twins, a daughter named Judith and a son named Hamnet.

After the twins were born, Shakespeare did not linger very long in Stratford-upon-Avon. We're not certain why he left. Nor does anyone know what Shakespeare did during what are called "The Lost Years" from 1582 to 1592 CE.

We do know that by 1592 CE, Shakespeare had arrived in London and was establishing a reputation as a playwright, actor, and poet. Though some of his more highly educated competitors said his plays were "vulgar," the people loved his work, and the royalty also enjoyed them. His acting company frequently performed in the court of Queen Elizabeth and later for King James.

Elizabeth I, Queen of England

Did you know that in Shakespeare's time, only men acted on stage? No women were allowed to be actors! The women's parts were played by young boys who still had high voices and no beards.

The Globe Theater

Many of Shakespeare's plays were performed in the Globe Theater, which was built in 1599 CE on the south bank of the Thames River in London. The Globe was a wooden, circular building with an open courtyard in the middle. The theater could hold up to 2,500 people. People who didn't have a lot of money could pay a penny to stand in the yard and watch the play; they were called the groundlings. Richer people could buy seats in the galleries, which were along three sides of the theater and were covered by a roof to protect the audience from the sun or a sudden rain. Performances were given only in daylight and only in good weather.

A performance at the Globe was different from most theaters today. Audiences could be rude and noisy. It was common for viewers to shout comments and throw objects on stage. There were no curtains on stage and hardly any scenery. Although the scenery was simple, costumes were often quite fancy.

In 1613 CE, a cannon fired as part of a performance of Henry VIII set fire to a thatched roof, and the theater burned to the ground. But if you visit London today, you can still see a Shakespeare play at the Globe—that is, at the new Globe Theater.

In the 1990s the theater was rebuilt very near its original location. Scholars and architects worked together closely to make the new Globe as much like the original as possible.

And so, as the Bard himself said, "All's well that ends well."

Shakespeare's Words

These phrases and lines come from the pen of the man most people consider the greatest playwright of all time, William Shakespeare. Along with the Bible, the works of Shakespeare have had a greater influence on English language and literature than anything by any other writer.

Have you ever heard any of these expressions?

Tongue-tied

As quiet as a lamb

Dead as a doornail

Seen better days

Eaten out of house and home

Have you ever come across any of these famous lines?

All's well that ends well.

A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!

If music be the food of love, play on.

Sweets to the sweet.

Romeo, Romeo! Wherefore art thou Romeo?

Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

To be, or not to be: that is the question.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears.

merely players.*

Shakespeare wrote many poems, but he is best known for writing plays. When Shakespeare wrote his plays, England was ruled by Queen Elizabeth I and later King James I. Elizabeth was a powerful and intelligent leader, and very popular with the English people. The arts thrived during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. She filled her court with poets, playwrights, and musicians.

If you haven't read one of Shakespeare's plays yet, you probably will soon!

Masses, Dances, and Love Songs: Music in the Renaissance

The Renaissance was a time of discovery, exploration, and invention—in other words, a time of great change. You’ve seen how the arts of painting and sculpture changed during the Renaissance. What about music?

Music changed, too. During the Middle Ages, music was especially important in churches and monasteries, where priests, monks, and nuns sang praises to God. Generally they sang religious words in Latin, and they all sang the same melody. To our modern-day ears, this kind of singing, known as plainsong or plainchant (or “chant” for short) can sound mysterious but also soothing.

During the Renaissance, as more and more people became interested in science, philosophy, paintings, and sculpture, they also became more interested in music. These people were not just monks or scholars. They were the merchants and their families in the cities, as well as the nobility, the people of the upper classes, in courts throughout Europe. More people wanted to enjoy music in their homes. The middle class joined the nobility in thinking that for a person to be well-rounded and well-educated, it was important to know how to read music and be able to sing. The invention of the printing press made it possible to distribute sheet music to those who wanted to learn how to play traditional as well as contemporary compositions. Music was becoming more and more a matter of personal expression.

Some of these people began to experiment with and further develop different ways of singing. For example, when different singers sing different notes at the same time, and the notes come together to produce a pleasing sound, the singers are said to be singing in harmony. This combining of voices singing different melodies in harmony is called polyphony, a word which comes from Greek words meaning “many voices.” This style of harmonizing was very popular during the Renaissance.

Also during the Renaissance, many musicians started writing their own music. Some became famous composers who traveled from court to court and city to city. This was something new. Back in the Middle Ages, composers often remained unknown. We know of only a few medieval composers, but there are many famous Renaissance composers. Most of them wrote both sacred music, or music for the Church, and secular music, music for everyday life.

Sacred Music

One of the most important forms of sacred music existed within the Mass—the Catholic Church service that celebrates Jesus’s Last Supper and death on the cross. When the words to the Mass, which were in Latin, were sung by a small group or large choir, they could sound very beautiful.

Composers sometimes wrote musical compositions for Masses in a style called a cappella, which means “in the style of the chapel.” A cappella works were written to be sung by voices alone, without instruments, so the words could be clearly heard and understood. Today we still use the term a cappella to describe any kind of choral music sung without instruments playing along.

Josquin Desprez, who was born around 1450 CE, wrote nearly 20 sacred compositions for Masses. He was widely admired as one of the greatest composers of the Renaissance. He came from what is now the Netherlands, but mostly worked as a singer and composer for princes and the pope in Italy.

Secular Music: Songs and Dances

Josquin Desprez didn’t just write sacred music; he also wrote secular music, music that people would enjoy outside of church. Secular music during the Renaissance included songs that had to do with love or told amusing stories. One song Desprez wrote is called “Faulte d’argent,” which, if you loosely translate the French title, means, “I need money!”

Many popular Renaissance songs were written for four or five voices and sung in polyphony. These songs were called madrigals. Like popular songs today, many madrigals were about—what would you guess?—yes, love, of course. The Italian composer known as Palestrina wrote four books of madrigals. But Palestrina was mainly a composer of sacred music. He wrote more than 90 Masses! He once said, “I blush and grieve” about writing the madrigals.

Aside from singing, people also liked to dance. At the courts of princes and kings, dances were a favorite occasion. Renaissance composers wrote a lot of dance music. Dance music was written for instruments, not voices. Often, dances were played in pairs, one slow and one fast. For example, first the musicians might play a pavane, a slow and formal dance that included many bows and curtsies. Then they would play a galliard, a lively dance in which the men would jump into the air!

Pieter Bruegel the Elder's The Wedding Dance, 1564 CE

New Instruments and Lute Songs

One of the most popular instruments during the Renaissance was the lute, which was something like a modern-day guitar. The lute was not a new instrument: it was inspired by an Arab instrument called the 'ud. The lute sounds sweet and gentle, perfect for love songs.

The greatest composer of lute music was probably John Dowland, who was born in England in 1563 CE. One of his lute tunes, called “Lachrimae,” became the most popular tune of his time, all over Europe.

Dowland also wrote many short songs for one singer accompanied by a lute. Many of these lute songs were sad and melancholy, with titles like “Sorrow Stay” and “In Darkness Let Me Dwell.”

Even Dowland’s number-one hit, “Lachrimae,” was a sad-sounding melody—which makes sense, because the word lachrimae is Latin for tears.

Sheet Music

In the monasteries, monks developed the first system for writing music. Most of the music that was sung and played outside the churches was not written.

The first line of Patrons, Artists, and Scholars says, “Art, literature, and architecture are forms of expression.” Think of an example of art, literature, or architecture you like. Describe it and write about why you like it.

In Chapter 1, “An Italian Rebirth,” we read that literature and other writings of the ancient Greeks and Romans were copied by hand to reproduce them! Think about the time and work it would take to copy writings by hand. Write about whether you would like to have that job and explain why or why not.

Leonardo: Man can do anything he sets his mind to do, my faithless friend!

THE LAST SUPPER

Writers often organize good paragraphs using a common set of guidelines. First, writers include a topic sentence to introduce the topic or central idea of the paragraph. The topic sentence tells what the paragraph will be about. Next, writers include supporting sentences to explain the topic or central idea. Writers usually include at least three to five sentences to give the reader supporting details and facts about the topic or central idea. Including interesting facts and details helps make the paragraph informative and interesting to read. It is important that the sentences stick to the topic. Finally, writers end the paragraph with a concluding sentence, or their final thought about the topic or central idea. Using these guidelines can be helpful to writing a clear and informative paragraph.

STORY OF MICHELANGELO AND LORENZO DE' MEDICI

Narrator: One day, a group of boys were called to the home of the incredibly important Lorenzo de' Medici. What could a man so rich and powerful, a man people called "the Magnificent," want to tell these boys?

Lorenzo: [looking at the boys and pointing to an ancient Roman statue of a nature god called a faun] You see this stone figure? A brilliant sculptor created this piece centuries ago. I want each of you to carve a statue exactly like this one.

Lorenzo: Work quickly and accurately. The young man who produces the best sculpture wins a place in my art school.

Narrator: Sometime later, as Lorenzo strolled through his courtyard, he spotted one boy whose work looked far superior to the rest. He turned to his assistant.

Lorenzo: Who is that child? Look at how he has carved the head of the faun. It's difficult to tell his work from the real thing!

The Assistant: [checking his list] Let's see. Michelangelo Buonarotti, second son of a former small-town mayor. Family is from minor nobility. Mother died when the boy was six. Hmm . . . not a very good Latin or Greek scholar. Ran away from school a lot.

Lorenzo: Ran away?

The Assistant: Yes, it seems he sneaked away from school to go to the churches, where he spent hours copying the paintings.

Lorenzo: Ah, a true art lover.

The Assistant: Well, his father isn't. The father is upset that Michelangelo works as an apprentice in Ghirlandaio's studio. He thinks he should pursue a different profession.

Narrator: Lorenzo walked up to Michelangelo and gazed at the faun's head the boy had carved.

Lorenzo: That's a lovely sculpture. Young man, come live in our home and learn what you can from us.

The Great Raphael

Raphael was another talented artist of the period. He was born Raffaello Sanzio in 1483 CE. He was younger than both Leonardo and Michelangelo. Raphael lost both of his parents at an early age. By 11, he was on his own, working as an apprentice in a busy art studio.

In 1504 CE, when Raphael was 21, he moved to Florence where Michelangelo and Leonardo were already living. There, he studied the techniques of the older artists and learned to use them in his own paintings.

Remember, in those days artists supported themselves by getting commissions from patrons. The wealthy people of Florence were eager to own beautiful paintings. By the time Raphael arrived, both Leonardo and Michelangelo were not painting as much. As he aged, Leonardo grew more interested in math and science and was reluctant to paint at all. Michelangelo's energies were consumed by big projects assigned to him by the head of the Church, the pope. So, young Raphael had many people ready to pay him to paint.

While in Florence, Raphael created at least 17 paintings of the Madonna, or mother of Jesus, and the Holy Family for various individuals. If you look at one of Raphael's Madonnas and compare it to a Madonna painted during the Middle Ages, you will see how people's view of the world changed in the Renaissance.

In the medieval image, the Madonna looks a little stiff. But the painting wasn't intended to be lifelike—its main purpose was to express religious devotion.

But Raphael's painting is different. He presents very natural, human figures that are so lifelike, it is as if they could step out from the painting.

Raphael in Rome

In 1508 CE Raphael was called to Rome by Pope Julius II. While Michelangelo was painting the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, Raphael was put in charge of painting a series of rooms in the Vatican.

In one room he painted a fresco, or mural, that has become very famous. It is called The School of Athens. The composition of the painting shows how Raphael was a great master of perspective, while the subject matter shows how much the Renaissance admired the ancient Greeks. Raphael painted many scholars and philosophers—some are reading, some are discussing big ideas. In the center of the painting, Raphael placed the great philosophers, Plato and Aristotle.

After Raphael's patron, Pope Julius II, died, Raphael became a special favorite of Pope Leo X. Leo put Raphael in charge of the work on St. Peter's Basilica. In addition, Raphael directed the efforts to dig up and study ancient buildings and statues in Rome.

Raphael led a productive life, but a short one. The artist died on his thirty-seventh birthday. Part of the epitaph on his tomb in Rome reads, "While he lived he made Mother Nature fear to be vanquished by him."

In the early 1500s, culture was thriving in Urbino, a hill town in central Italy. A few years after painting for the Church in Rome, Raphael went to work in the Duke of Urbino's court. There he met the famous author Castiglione, who also served the duke. The two men became friends and Raphael painted a portrait of Castiglione. The beautiful painting portrays Castiglione as a distinguished gentleman.

SAMPLE DIARY ENTRY FOR RAPHAEL

Oh, I am weary! Pope Julius II has put me in charge of painting many rooms of the Vatican here in Rome. Painting on a canvas takes its toll on my arm, but painting on a wall takes its toll on my entire body. The current section I toil on gives me renewed motivation, though. I call it The School of Athens. I must say my use of perspective is strong in the painting, and it is an honor to center the piece with two Greek greats: Plato and Aristotle.

Growing Up Fast

Most 11-year-olds today are busy playing with friends and going to school. Not Raphael; he had to grow up fast. Raphael was born in 1483 and named Raffaello Sanzio. He lost his parents as a child and was working by the time he was 11 years old. Raphael worked in an art studio as an apprentice. About 10 years later, in 1504, Raphael moved to Florence. There he studied techniques of two great master artists: Michelangelo and Leonardo.
