A storm destroyed the fence, and sheep from the herd wandered up into the mountains. The sheep had not come back to the ranch, so the rancher told the workers, "We need to take the jeep and find the missing sheep. You will shear the sheep so that their thick woolly coats can be sold at market."

Everyone should take care of Earth. Be smart about using electricity. Turn off lights when leaving a room. Make the bed in the morning before leaving for school. Turn off the television when no one is watching it. Shut down computers that are not being used.

Recycling more can reduce the amount of trash in landfills.

Empty milk cartons, aluminum cans, and old newspapers can be sent to a recycling center and used to make new products.

Unwanted items such as clothing and furniture can be donated rather than thrown away. Even leftover food scraps can be used to make compost for a garden. These are just some of the ways everyone can work together to reduce trash in landfills.

Parts from old cell phones and computers can be reused to make electronics.

Landfills are provided by the community.

Many people work at the recycling center.

I like living in the city.

Give Me the City Life!

Living in the city is better than living in the country because there are more things to do. It is a short walk to the library. I can walk to my favorite ice-cream store. I can walk or ride my bike to school in minutes. I can easily visit a science museum or the zoo.

The zoo is filled with many people.

There is not much to do in the city.

Everything I need is close by in the city.

The city offers many new experiences. The large population means there are many people to get to know. I have made interesting friends of all ages. I had many friends when I lived in the country too. I can travel around the city by bus and see new places. I can go to restaurants and eat foods from different cultures. I have missed my horseback rides in the country, but I have found many opportunities in the city.
