

Frequently Asked Questions Regarding the Test Waiver Process for Applicants

1. I haven't hit the 4-retest limit, but I'm getting close. Can I apply for a waiver now?

No, a waiver application cannot be requested until after you have reached the 4-retest limit. It is recommended that you review your score reports to identify your deficit competencies and address those with a comprehensive study plan before you reach the testing limit.

Educator candidates and preparation programs need to work together to determine readiness for attempting any certification exam. Candidates and educators who are not seeking test approval through an educator preparation program need to determine their own readiness when seeking test approval through one of the other methods (i.e., pre-admission content test (PACT), out of state, charter, and certification by examination).

2. I just hit the 4-retest limit. What do I do now?

Candidates should consult with their educator preparation program (EPP) about applying for a testing waiver. If you are not able to or do not want to switch to a different certification area that requires a different test and will most likely require you to complete further course work or other requirements, then you will need to download the waiver application and complete all waiver requirements before submitting your waiver application to the Texas Education Agency. If you have specific questions about the application, contact Educator Testing at (512) 463-9039. The SBEC has defined the waiver application process in Chapter 230, Subchapter C of the Texas Administrative Code.

3. I'm no longer enrolled in an educator preparation program (EPP). Do I really need to get approval from a representative of the EPP?

If you are pursuing certification through an EPP, even if you have completed all requirements other than testing, then you must get a representative of the EPP to approve your waiver application before submitting it to the Texas Education Agency. Your EPP is responsible for recommending you for certification, so an EPP representative must approve your waiver application to indicate that you are otherwise eligible to take an examination.

4. For the Highest Score Examination Information, does this apply to only Core Subjects or to all tests?

The Highest Score Examination Information applies to all tests and determines the number of clock-hours of educational activity an applicant must complete. Applicants must enter the highest scaled score and other test information specified in the Highest Score Examination Information section of the waiver application. Applicants will determine which letter to circle in this section of the application by using the Texas Average Conditional Standard Error of Measurement (CSEM) Report found in Attachment I of the waiver application. If the waiver request is for more than one 800-series examination, then include information for each exam.

5. How do I determine how many clock-hours of educational activity I need to complete?
Your highest test score determines the number of clock-hours you must complete. You will use the Average Conditional Standard Error of Measurement (CSEM) chart found in Attachment I of the waiver application to determine if your highest score was equal to or greater than the passing score minus 1 CSEM, 2 CSEM, or 3 CSEM, or if your highest score was lower than 3 CSEM. Cut scores are listed for each test to help you determine the number of required clock-hours. More information about determining the number of required clock-hours may be found in Section D: Highest Score Examination Information of the waiver application.
6. How do I complete the Deficit Competency Analysis?
Applicants will need to use the score reports from the five most recent attempts found in their Educational Testing Service (ETS) account to complete the Deficit Competency Analysis. Detailed instructions are provided at the top of the chart for this section of the application. This chart helps applicants to determine the deficit competencies that should be the focus of a comprehensive study plan. Applicants should note that their score reports list the information requested in the opposite order as specified in the chart. Care should be taken to complete this section accurately since it will drive an applicant's choice of educational activities.
7. How do I decide what educational activity I need for the Evidence of Educational Activity section?
Your Deficit Competency Analysis will help you decide which competencies need to be a priority in your study plan. Competencies for which you are performing below 70% across all attempts, as identified in the last column of the Deficit Competency Analysis chart of the waiver application, should be addressed with appropriate educational activities. It is the applicant's responsibility to identify appropriate educational activities that address the deficit competencies.
8. How do I determine if an educational activity is related to my deficit competencies?
You will need to read the course description of the educational activity and then determine if it is correlated to your deficit competencies. By reading through the competencies and detailed descriptive statements outlined in the test preparation manuals posted on the ETS website, an applicant should be able to determine if an educational activity is correlated to deficit competencies. The other certification testing vendors, the American Association of Family and Consumer Sciences and the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages, should also have similar preparation manuals posted on their websites. It is your responsibility to determine the competencies that are addressed by an educational activity.

9. How do I find educational activities that will help me to pass my test?

If you are with an educator preparation program (EPP), ask a representative from your EPP for assistance finding appropriate course work. Network with other successful candidates to find out what resources helped them to pass their certification exam. Be sure to cross reference all resources with the list of CPE providers approved by TEA or be sure that they are offered by one of the pre-approved providers, such as a regional education service center, college, or university. Be sure that you understand what type of learner you are and take course work that supports your learning style. You may want to consider taking a college or university class. One semester credit hour earned at an accredited institution of higher education is equivalent to 15 clock-hours. You are going to have to make some calls and do some research to determine if a provider offers educational activities that address the competencies of your test. Reach out to your regional education service center to find out what educational activities they may offer. Rather than looking for a workshop on how to pass a certain test, look for workshops related to the competency areas of that test. For example, there may not be a workshop entitled “How to Pass the Pedagogy and Professional Responsibilities (PPR) Test,” but you will probably find workshops on monitoring student performance, actively engaging students, and improving classroom management, which are topics directly related to the PPR test. Look for educational activities that will provide you with the knowledge and skills you need, based on your Deficit Competency Analysis, to be successful on your waiver attempt.

10. I just took a 40-hour seminar from my regional education service center related to my test right before my last attempt. May I use those clock-hours?

No, all educational activities must be completed after the last unsuccessful attempt. All of your efforts up to this point have not helped you to pass your test, so you need to do something different.

11. What do I have to attach to the Evidence of Educational Activity section of the waiver application?

You must attach a description of the educational activity, such as a syllabus or course outline, and written verification of completion, such as a certificate of completion, which contains the following components: 1) name of the provider, sponsor, or program; 2) name of applicant; 3) name of the educational activity; 4) date(s) of the educational activity; and 5) the number of clock-hours completed for the educational activity. All documentation is subject to verification by TEA staff. This means that providers may be contacted to confirm the applicant’s attendance, and educational activities will be checked for relevance to the test for which the waiver was submitted. Educational activities must be directly related to the competencies of the test for which the waiver was submitted.

12. Who does TEA consider an approved provider or sponsor of continuing professional education clock-hours?

A current list of CPE providers approved by TEA (Excel) may be found on the TEA website. In addition to this list, other providers have been pre-approved by TEA and include the following: State Board for Educator Certification; Texas Education Agency; accredited institutions of higher education recognized by the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board; regional education service centers; Texas public school districts; private schools as defined in TAC §230.1; and professional associations, non-profits, or state associations as described in TAC §232.17\(7\).

13. Does teaching count in clock-hours? May I use a private tutor, such as another teacher, to complete my clock-hours?

No, teaching does not count as an approved educational activity. In most cases, private tutoring will not count as an approved educational activity. Tutoring provided by a TEA-approved provider or pre-approved provider can count if the applicant is given written documentation by the provider that includes the following components: 1) name of the provider, sponsor, or program; 2) name of applicant; 3) name of the educational activity; 4) date(s) of the educational activity; and 5) the number of clock-hours completed for the educational activity. A detailed description of the educational activity, such as a syllabus or course outline, must also be provided.

14. May I do self-study for the educational activities?

No, self-study educational activities are not permitted to be counted in the clock-hours for your waiver application. Only educational activities from an approved provider or sponsor may be used in determining whether clock-hour requirements have been met. However, applicants are encouraged to participate in a variety of activities, including self-study, which go above and beyond waiver application requirements.

15. Is online course work acceptable for the educational activities?

Online course work is acceptable if it is from a pre-approved or approved provider, and it is directly related to the test for which you are applying for a waiver.

16. I finished all clock-hours and waiver requirements. When may I submit my waiver application? May I submit it early?

You must wait 45 calendar days after the last unsuccessful attempt before you may submit your waiver application. Applications are not accepted by fax or email. The waiver application must be delivered (in person, by mail, or by delivery service) to:

Texas Education Agency
Educator Certification & Testing, WBT 5-100
1701 North Congress Avenue
Austin, Texas 78701-1494

17. Is there a fee to apply for a test waiver?

Yes, waiver applicants must pay $160 plus an ecommerce charge of $4 before the application will be processed. Information will be emailed to an applicant after his or her waiver is received with instructions on how to make this online payment. Checks and money orders are not accepted.

18. If my waiver is approved, how many more chances do I get to pass my test?

An approved waiver applicant will receive approval to take the requested test one more time.

19. What happens if my waiver request is denied?

The State Board for Educator Certification has authorized TEA staff to administratively process waiver requests. TEA staff will work with applicants to ensure that all waiver requirements are met so that applicants may be granted another opportunity to test. If a waiver is denied by TEA staff, then the applicant may appeal the decision to the State Board for Educator Certification.

20. How long will it take to process my waiver application? Are expedited reviews available?

Waivers are processed in the order received. Normal processing time is three to four weeks after the waiver application fee has been paid. Processing time may take longer during peak season (May – August) or if corrections are needed. Applicants will be contacted by email if corrections are needed. In fairness to other applicants, applications needing corrections will be pulled and placed at the end of the queue; therefore, it is crucial that applications are reviewed thoroughly for accuracy and completeness before submitting to TEA. Expedited waiver reviews are not available.

21. If my waiver is approved and I am not able to pass my test, may I apply for another waiver?

Yes, an applicant who does not pass his or her waiver exam attempt may apply for another waiver. Applicants may start working on waiver requirements immediately, such as analyzing test results and completing additional educational activities, but the waiver application must not be postmarked any earlier than 180 days after the last unsuccessful test attempt.

22. If my waiver is approved, is there a time limit on when I must take the test again?

Applicants must attempt the test again before the test is discontinued. For a list of dates of when tests are scheduled to be discontinued, see the Required and Replacement Test Chart for Texas Certification posted on the TEA website. If a test is replaced with a new version with a different test number (e.g., 141 is updated to the 241), then the applicant must seek test approval from the entity that granted test approval for the discontinued test. Additional course work or conditions that must be met may be required before test approval for the new test may be granted.

23. How can I get help in completing the waiver application?

If you are pursuing your certification through an educator preparation program (EPP), then you will want to ask your EPP advisor for assistance with your application. You may also contact the TEA Educator Testing staff at (512) 463-9039 for assistance.

Frequently Asked Questions Regarding the Test Waiver Process for Educator Preparation Programs

1. What can we do to support our candidates so that they do not have to apply for a waiver?
Educator preparation programs (EPPs) need to monitor their candidates closely to determine readiness for attempting any certification exam. EPPs should implement a system of progressive conditions that the candidate must complete before giving test approval after an unsuccessful attempt. The conditions required should be based on a thorough analysis of a candidate's prior performance to determine appropriate next steps. The conditions required should be differentiated and take into account how close a candidate is to passing and how many attempts the candidate has left, since the needs of a candidate who scored a 200 on the first attempt are very different from the candidate who scored 236 on the first attempt.

2. How can we support candidates that have hit the 5-attempt limit?
Educator preparation programs may assist candidates by helping them complete the waiver application. Assign a specific staff member as a point of contact and ask the candidate to forward the email that the candidate received from TEA about applying for a waiver. Help the candidate complete the Deficit Competency Analysis section of the waiver application. Accurate identification of a candidate's deficit competencies is a crucial first step to helping the candidate identify appropriate educational activities. Then assist the candidate with identifying appropriate educational activities that will help the candidate learn the knowledge and skills associated with those deficit competencies. Finally, help the candidate review the waiver application to ensure that the application is complete, accurate, and presents the applicant in a professional manner.

3. What if we do not support a candidate's waiver application?
If a candidate is still in good standing with an educator preparation program, then the EPP should approve the candidate's waiver application. If the candidate has been dismissed from the EPP according to the EPP's established procedures, then the EPP is not obligated to approve a candidate's waiver application. If the EPP would give test approval to a candidate if there were no testing limit, then the EPP should approve the candidate's waiver application.
